HOW TRUE THIS IS

The Campus at 11:30 P. M.

From the Daily Maroon, University of Chicago:

Balzac, says Taine, did most of his writing between the hours of midnight and 3 in the morning, often after spending the evening at some exceedingly convivial party. Only at that time, after participating in the public manifestations of humanity, and just at the moment when the tired feeling sets in and the crudeness and the banalities of life seem apparent did he feel that he could portray justly the emotions and motives of man.

To come into a hot, stuffy, study, to see the glaring plainness of everything in the artificial light, to hear the dull and fateful ticking of a clock, to see, with tired eyes, the books and papers which earlier in the day were of interest undoubtedly has the effect of destroying illusions and throwing nature in its hardest aspects into our faces.

But, on the other hand, the period of the greatest unreality, of the height of the ideal, almost, is the time just before we return to prosaic life—the moments when we still are wandering through the empty and deserted streets—(the modern taxicab may be a great preventative of the enjoyment of the imagination). No matter what has been the evening's business, no matter what the joys or disappointments, there is a strange nearly fierce charm about the night which gives a feeling of exultation, a desire to laugh in an, eager giggling fashion, a belief that we can do our will and succeed in all that in which hitherto we have failed.

The anti-climax enters, it is true, when into our minds comes the serious suggestion that perhaps our strivings are worthless, that probably we were wasting our energies, and that we should laugh at our futile attempts of the evening just passed to make an impression, and, in the enjoyment of our own selves, we should rise above the mere commonplace of life. And a moment later, when we go indoors we come back to earth with a gasp for breath and our wordly aims and aspirations return.

The campus is soothing at 11:30 at night, and decidedly refreshing. To say nothing of the fact that it is a great upbuilder of shattered self-respect and feeling of content with the ego. The automobile that races down the driveway, delivers its passenger at Foster hall and leaves with a parting word—it would seem—is not of the little ambitions and hopes of the campus. It suggests that to someone college worries, college politics, college societies, are really as small as midnight makes them seem. The few lights in the different buildings recall not the traditional grind—this may be an affectation—but suggest possibilities of many strange lives.

11:30 is not late; a few miles way the night life of the city is in full swing, but on the campus, there is mystery.

THIS DOES NOT APPLY TO THE IOWAN

Interesting, nevertheless.

How the Drake Delphic is going after its delinquent subscriptions, following a plan established by the Daily Texan:

The Daily Texan has evolved a system whereby past due subscriptions are collected without the expense of a lawyer or a collector, who goes in for pugilism. And the big thing about the business is that it works.

Adequate warning is given from time to time that all those who have not paid up their subscriptions by a certain day shall have a little publicity. The list of delinquents is called the "beauty column". Along with the "beauty column" are run interesting little comments and discussions of such and such persons. Just to show how well the idea works out ,we submit this for an example. Wednesday night of last week the Texan was called on the long distance by the mother of a delinquent Freshman, who pleaded with the management to withhold her son's name from the list, as she would send a money order for the amount by the next mail.

Now the Drake Daily Delphic also has a goodly number of delinquents who have either forgotten to pay or think they have already paid. Perchance some such scheme would work here. We hope that it will not become necessary and we think that it will not. Keeping in mind the fact that about forty men, who pledged a dollar for the football sweaters last winter, did not redeem their pledges we do not intend to take any chances. The axe shall descend on friend and foe alike.

Pay up, and do it now!

Defying Death.

What is probably the most perilous hazardous and sensational performance ever given is called the "Death Ride," and is executed daily by the Great Reynard outside the show tents of the Sparks World Famous Shows, which are billed to exhibit here Monday, May 24.

The paraphrenalia for this sensational act is so cumbersome and the space required for its erection is so great that it is necessarily given as a free outside attraction and takes place just after the street parade. The Great Reynard, rides down a hundred foot ladder incline while blindfolded, and can not see to maintain the perfect balance that is required in order to successfully accomplish this wonderful performe ance.

Marvelous Moving Pictures
Taken Under The Sea
THE FAMOUS WILLIAMSON SUBMARINE MOVIES

An Unparalled Achievement, Thrilling, Enchanting

"WHAT is the bottom of the sea like?" That is the question which has caused civilization to scratch its head since the beginning of the ages. The Williamson brothers have answered it. They know all about it! Theyve' seen things that made them marvel down there in the Kingdom of Eternal Peace! They've made friends with the sharks and all the other monsters that prowl around down there: Monsters that glare right at you with big vicious eyes and jaws that could snay your head off without injuring their teeth!

They are the first and only pictures ever taken at the bottom of the sea and depict that strange, unknown no-man's land that lies far below the path of the ocean liner.

The making of this picture is one of the romances of science that discount all the dreams of the novelist. They are full of fascination and interest and show the beautiful tropical gardens down in the Bahama Islands, with all their picturesqque life, and the native boys, lithe, striped, brown figures, diving for coins, and so agile that they catch the coin before it touches the bottom of the sea.

Other pictures show the innumerable different varieties of fish that abound in those waters, and that range all the way from the beautiful angel fish to the man-eating shark. Then comes the strangest moving picture film that the ingenuity of man has ever constructed.

This takes in the journey from Nassau to San Salvador, or Walting's Island, the place where Columbus first set foot on the new world, and the trip, which is 100 miles in length, is taken way deep down below the surface of the water, through the strange garden that grows at the bottom of the sea.

Nothing like it has ever been seen before, and nothing like it will ever be seen again, unless the Williamsons do it.

They are uniqque, educational and mavelous!

They have startled and amazed scientific and educational circles throughout the world!

They are playing to capacity houses everywhere!

They are internationally endorsed by leading magazines, newspapers, scientific and educational bodies!

SEE Pictures that Amaze and Wonder! The Wildest Dreams come true! The most wonderful pictures in the world! The only pictures ever taken at the bottom of the sea!
The big ugly creatures which roam around in the deep!
The fish playing hide-and-seek down in the depths!
Pictures that enthrall, enhance, enchant, entice and enthuse!
The wonderful, exquisitely beautiful coral gardens down in the sea!
The man and the shark in a desperate, death-defying struggle!
"Absolutely wonderful."—New York World.

ADDITIONAL PLANS OF THIS YEAR'S SUMMER SCHOOL ANNOUNCED

The University of Iowa will be in operation practically the year around. It has been officially announced that the summer session will last until August 27, which is four weeks longer than any previous session.

On June 21 a ten weeks summer school will start, composed of two sections, one of six weeks and the second of four weeks. A student may attend either of these divisions or both.

Because of this lengthening of the university's year a student with one year residence study can be graduated by attending three summer sessions. Under the old system it took four summers,

There are many teachers in Iowa who desire instruction in manual training, home economics, and agriculture, courses which the law compels them to teach after July 1, Provision has been made to supply this demand.

One point especially emphasized by the authorities is the fact that all departments which offer courses the first session of six weeks will continue through the last four weeks.

MOOSE CARNIVAL IS NOW IN FULL BLAST IN IOWA CITY

About the busiest place in the city yesterday was the crosing of the Rock Island railway at Kirkwood Avenue, yesterday the unloading place of Allman Bros. Big American Shows which is no small undertaking and which proved of immense interest to the crowd of sight-seers who had congregated to witness the unusual scene. The big show train had made the run from Muscatine in less than four hours and no time was lost on arrival in Iowa City in getting the work of unloading started. This insures the opening of all attractions at the Carnival grounds on Dubuque St. on time and the local lodge of Moose, as a reward for their efforts to provide good amusements for Iowa City by bringing it the best in the market, expect to see a record crowd in atendance at the Carnival this week.

Tennis Drawings Tomorrow.

Tomorow afternoon drawings will be made for the University championship tennis tournament. The drawings were again postponed to give more men a chance to register. Fourteen men had registered yesteryad afternoon but it is hoped that there will be more out. There will be no doubles played this year as it is getting too near the close of the school year and too many people are using the courts every day that would be put out. The drawings will be made in Director Schroeder's office.
