University Bows Today in Memory of Dean Raymond

Rev. Ellis to Officiate at Funeral Service This Morning

All business offices of the university will close today from 10 to 12 o'clock and the old capitol bell will toll at 10:30 o'clock in tribute to Dean William G. Raymond, of the college of applied science who died Thursday morning.

Funeral services will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock from the home at 430 Brown street. The service will not be private. The Rev. Sylvester Ellis, of Mount Vernon, former pastor of the Methodist church here, will officiate at the house, and the Masonic lodge, of which Dean Raymond was a member, will conduct the service at the Oakland cemetery.

Six faculty members of the college of applied science will act as pallbearers. They are: Prof. F. G. Higbee, Prof. S. M. Woodward, Prof. B. J. Lambert, Prof. B. P. Fleming, Prof. George J. Keller, and Prof. R. B. Kittredge. Dean O. M. Leland of the University of Minnesota, Dean D. C. Jackson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dean M. E. Cooley of the University of Michigan, and Prof. H. E. Riggs, also of the University of Michigan, will represent the society for the promotion of engineering education which completed its annual session here yesterday.

A short memorial service was held by the society and a resolution was adopted, which was sent to the dean's family and to President Walter A. Jessup.

Biography to Give New Light on Iowa Civil War History

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—New light on the making of Iowa history in civil war days and the reconstruction period following that struggle, soon will be available to Iowans under arrangements just completed by Edgar R. Harlan, state curator and trustees of the estate of General Grenville M. Dodge, famous soldier, financier and railroad builder of those days.

At a conference here of B. A. Grostal, vice president and Edwin Jackson, trust officer of the Council Bluffs Savings bank, the institution founded by General Dodge in 1856; Grenville Dodge Montgomery, grandson of General Dodge; Emmet Tinley and Mr. Harlan, it was decided that publication of the documents and other papers of General Dodge's collection should be made in the form of a biography of General Dodge. The material will be arranged by Rev. J. R. Perkins, pastor of the First Congregational church of Council Bluffs and Curator Harlan. General Dodge's will provided for publication of a large amount of this documentary material.

Iowa Delegates at Lake Geneva Enjoy Y. M. Conference

Delegates from the University of Iowa arrived at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Lake Geneva Tuesday evening. A get-acquainted meeting followed an address by Dr. Chas. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, the first evening. The second day was largely taken up by meetings and addresses.

Plenty of opportunity for hiking, tennis matches, and handball has been afforded the delegates.

Two of the delegates from here will leave the conference Tuesday to return to summer school. Others will begin work immediately following the close of the conference June 25.

Ringgold County to Build Courthouse at Cost of $150,000

MT. AYR, June 18 (AP) — After four futile attempts to pass a bond issue for construction of a new Ringgold county court house, the voters succeeded in the recent primary, in authorizing the issue and this county, without a court house for five years, soon will have a new building. The old structure was condemned and torn down. The new building and equipment will cost $150,000. The bond issue was carried by a majority of 596 votes.

Woman on Board of Trade

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 18 (AP) —Smyrna boasts the first woman member of a stock exchange in Turkey. The commission directing the Smyrna exchange has elected to membership Fatma zehra Hanoum, already well known as one of the few Turkish women engaged in commercial affairs and prominent in Smyrna as owner of several factories.

Engineers Condole School on Loss of Dean Raymond

"Resolved, that the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education express to Mrs. Raymond and to her children and to his colleagues at the university the profound sympathy of the society in their great loss and that we convey to her something of the love and admiration we have always had for the honored husband and father."

Players Schedule Summer Programs

Two New Professors Direct Casting of Parts

The Out-of-Doors Players, a summer session organization of university students, is drawing up a program of plays to be presented during the first session of the summer school. Chester Wallace and Oliver Larkin, both members of the speech staff of Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa., are in charge.

Under Professor Wallace's direction "Rollo's Wild Oat" by Claire Cummer will be presented in the university auditorium on the evening of July 7. Rehearsals have already been started on the production.

In about three weeks Professor Larkin will stage the second play, the title and cast of which are yet to be chosen. The play will be selected within the next few days.

Toward the end of the session, Shakespeare's great drama, "The Tempest," will be staged out-of-doors under Professor Wallace's coaching.

The work of Professors Wallace and Larkin is known on the campus for they have been members of the speech department in previous summer sessions.

Campaign Expenses Reach Three Million

[By The Associated Press]

HARRISBURG, Penn., June 18—Expenses of the republican primary in Pennsylvania approached the three million dollar mark in figures compiled here in files with state bureau of elections.

The senatorial contest in which William Vare defeated Senator George Pepper and Governor Gifford Pinchot, showed a total close to $2,500,000 with the computation incomplete.

The amount of accounts filed by the gubernatorial candidates added more than $225,000 to the sum.

Expenditures in behalf of the Vare candidacy which had been estimated at $595,000 in testimony before the U. S. senate committee investigating the campaign funds, were boosted $16,806 by an account filed for the Ralph D. Starfeurger modification committee for Vare. The Vare campaign committee fund has not been filed.

Washington Crew Defeats Princeton in Dual Regatta

PRINCETON, N. J., June 18 (AP) —University of Washington's powerful varsity crew, outstanding contenders for this years intercollegiate championship honors, scored two smashing triumphs over Princeton today in first intersectional regatta on Lake Carnegie in five years.

The Pacific coast eight swept to an impressive triumph in the feature event, winning by six lengths while the junior varsity oarsmen propelled their shell ten and one half lengths ahead of the Tiger boat over the one and three-quarter mile course.

Engineers' Society Brings Conference to Successful End

Professor Wickenden Outlines Aims of Organization

"Directly and indirectly it costs society from $6,000 to $15,000 to give a high school graduate a four-year engineering course," said W. E. Wickenden, director of investigations, in an address to the society for the promotion of engineering education, at the fourth session yesterday morning.

F. P. McKibben, vice-president of the society presided at the session which opened at 9:00 a.m. yesterday morning. The report of the treasurer and of the secretary was followed by the report of the board of investigationas aand co-ordinations. Charles F. Scott was the chairman of this board, and W. E. Wickenden director of investigations.

Looking Ahead

"The society," said Professor Wickenden, "may be pictured as a survey party at work in the field on an important and complex job of location. We have set up and adjusted our instruments and have taken a rear sight over the path of our recent experience. It is now time to turn our telescope forward, to scan the foreground and the more distant horizon, and to put down here and there a stake to mark our probable route and point us toward a goal."

In defining engineering, Professor Wickenden said, " We may turn to the walls of the library of the United Engineering societies, where we find inscribed in letters of gold the words: 'Engineering—the art of organizing and directing men and of controlling the forces and materials of nature for the benefit of the human race.' These words are a happy blend of the fundamentals of Tredgold with the modernism to Stott."

Session Closes

The three-day session of the society came to a close at noon yesterday. The program which had been arranged for that afternoon was called off out of respect for Dean W. G. Raymond. Many of the visiting engineers, who had made the trip here in automobiles, set out for home early in the afternoon.

Last night at 7:50 o'clock a large party of the delegates to the convention boarded the C. R. I. & P. railway for an excursion trip to Keokuk. In that city they will today inspect the Keokuk power plant, the lock, and the electrical industries of the city.

House Built Near Tee a Hazard on This Golf Course

PIERRE, S. D., June 18 (AP) — The 34-stroke par of the Pierre Country Club's golf course has been raised one stroke because of the obstinacy of a recluse who built himself a house on the links.

The hermit had lived for years in a shack on the Missouri river bank, but when the city acquired the river front for a park it drove him out.

The golf course is situated on a subdivision laid out elevn years ago and cut into lots. Nobody built on any of the lots, and the country club acquired them for the links. Many of the owners lived in distant states and had all but forgotten the property.

The recluse recalled that among his few worldly possessions was a lot on the golf course. He located it, and hastily constructed a hut. The next day golfers found it looming thirty yards from the tee of the fifth hole, squarely blocking the green. The owner asked too much for the lot. So the house will stay, the golfers will use a mashie from the tee, and par for the hole will be five instead of four.

Canaries Help Cheer Prisoners at Ft. Madison State Penitentiary

[By The Associated Press]

FORT MADISON, June 19—Five hundred canaries add a measure of cheer, with their merry chirping, to the drab lives of the inmates of Iowa State prison here.

In the death chamber and in sections occupied by prisoners who still have a portion of life and perhaps happiness before them, the music of the feathered songsters can be heard. Many inmates who, when free, gave little heed to the solace of music or the beauties of bird life and nature, lavish their attention upon their fellow "prisoners."

Prison officials say the inmates become especially fond of pets and that canaries seem to be favorites, perhaps because they best exemplify carefree happiness, even in captivity, and are able, through their song, to impart hope to their owners.

First Brought by Prisoner

The canaries first were installed by an inmate named Ryan. An expert in their care, Ryan now owns most of the songsters, although about 100 other prisoners own their individual birds and tend them in their cells. One large cage in a corridor contains fifty or sixty birds and their songs fill the cell block.

There have been numerous instances of seeming reciprocation on the part of the birds of the kindnesses shown them by the prisoners. One of the most striking was the case of "Billy," a songster belonging to "Gabe" Simons, who was hanged last winter.

Still Warbled

"Billy" outdid himself in song when his cage followed Simons to the death chamber, and continued his merry chirping through the trying days until his master started the death march. Then, after Simons had been hanged, "Billy" was shipped with the body to Tipton, and warbled cheerfully as his cage reposed upon the rough box during the journay.

Prison officials are encouraging the culture of the birds for the wholesome influence they exert upon

Senators Continue to Voice Opinions on Farm Measure

Leaders Make Efforts to Force Roll Call Early in Week

[By The Associated Press]

WASHINGTON, June 18. — Failing in another attempt to fix a time for a vote, managers of the McNary farm bill sat back today to wait for the debate in the senate to wear itself out.

Senator McNary, republican of Oregon, pilot of the measure, realizing discussion was geting out of hand, and it would be futile to get a vote this week as planned, sought to get unanimous consent for a roll call early next week.

He advanced a half dozen proposals but objections were made to all of them by both proponents and opponents.

The negotiations came to an end after thirty minutes of dickering when Senator Robinson, democratic leader, declared "let them talk, maybe they will get through sometime."

Agreement however, was reached to vote tomorrow on the Willis amendment to the house cooperative bill, to which the McNary bill is attached as a rider, proposing to eliminate naval stores from its provisions.

Earlier in the day managers of the McNary bill had met in conference and agreed not to make any further changes in provisions but to call for a vote as it stands. They met to consider the proposal of Senator Borah, republican of Idaho, who offered to support the bill if a provision which he claimed authorized compulsory application of the equalization fee was stricken out.

The brunt of the debate was carried today by Senators Bute of Maryland, and Tysol of Tennessee, democrat, the former opposing the bill and the latter endorsing it.

Miss Whaley Will Speak on Junior Red Cross Work

Miss Nell Whaley, junior representative of the mid-western branch of the junior red cross at St. Louis, will lecture on participation in the junior red cross program at 7:30 p.m. in the liberal arts assembly hall. There will also be an exhibit of the work of pupils which will indicate the nature of the junior red cross program as carried on in this and in foreign countries.

The junior red cross now comprises over 5,000,000 American school boys and girls who are enrolled under its motto: "I serve." The basis of participation in the junior program is enrollment as a junior auxiliary.

Through their international correspondence, the juniors of America are constantly exchanging ideals with juniors of other lands. All sorts of topics such as history, nature study, commercial studies, art and handwork, music, and botany have been included in the international correspondence.

Freak Mascot Likes Automobile Drives

A. J. Westphal, a native of Germany, who operates a rooming house at 25 West Jefferson has a trained parrot, whose favorite occupation is to act as mascot while his master drives his Ford through the traffic jams of this small metropolis. Polly sits complacently on his shoulder and keeps reasonably still during the exciting moments. The campanionable pet is not averse to learning, in this university town, being able to swap kisses and carry on a continuous run of gossip whenever called on to do so.

Women Voters Active

SIDNEY, June 18 (AP)—Women of Fremont county evidenced more interest in the recent primary election than the men voters. Election officials report that three votes were cast by the women to every one cast by male voters.

Day in Washington

Congressional adjournment set for June 30 instead of June 26.

Debate on projects in the Rivers and Harbors bill continued in senate congress committee.

The course of the senate campaign fund investigating committee swung back to recent Pennsylvania primaries.

Friends of the McNary farm bill decided to support it in its present form; Senator McNary sought an agreement for a vote next week.

President Coolidge saw little for this government to do at present in the Tacna-Arica dispute; the Chilean ambassador and Secretary Kellogg conferred.

Ben Gibson Resigns as Attorney General

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—Ben J. Gibson, now serving his third term as state attorney general, resigned today to enter private law practice whenever his resignation is accepted by Governor Hammill.

The governor indicated tonight the resignation would be accepted in a few days and appointment would be made at the same time.

Economics Parley Draws Instructors

Dean Phillips Leaves for Bell System Conference

Dean C. A. Phillips of the college of commerce is attending the educational conference in New York City held under the Bell system telephone and telegraph company.

The Bell system economics conference includes the deans of the principal collegiate schools of business from all parts of the United States, for the purpose of promoting a more thorough understanding of the mutual problems of education and our industry and to present to the visiting members some of the major economic problems of the Bell system which are of the most direct interest to teachers of economics and business.

Rainbow Division Convenes in July

Two Railroal Cars of Vets Expected to Go From Iowa

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—Iowa World War veterans, who fought with the famous 42nd "Rainbow" division, will probably fill two railroad cars as they go to New York city for the annual convention of the division July 13, 14 and 15, Cotetz Souter, Des Moines, secretary of the state Rainbow Division Veterans association, said today.

The Iowa veterans, coming from almost every corner of the state, and representing one of the largest state memberships in the veterans' organization, may meet the Illinois and Indiana delegations at Chicago and go with them to New York by special train.

Large Iowa delegations are expected from Waterloo, Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Fort Dodge, Mason City, Ottumwa, and Oskaloosa, Mr. Souter said. Some of the smaller towns, including Red Oak, Corning, Webster City, Glenwood, Vilisca, Winterset and Eagle Grove will contribute smaller contingents to the convention-bound pullmans.

Officers of the state organization, besides Mr. Souter, are Charles Gilchrist, president and Fred Oliphant, vice-president.

Best Ballyhoo Lures Gotham to Business

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Enterprise and business ingenuity probably pay higher cash dividends in Gotham than any other city. Manhattan is ready to flock, not to the man who makes the best mousetrap, but to the one who ballyhoos his mousetrap in the most effective manner.

Thus one restauranteur has come to a secure place on "Easy Street" through putting his patrons on an honor system. His plan is simple. The patron eats and then on the way out of the restaurant stops at the cashier's cage to name the amount of his own check. There is no supervision. Yet the restauranteur says his percentage of loss is so small that he actually saves money through the elimination of help required for a checking system. Besides, he says, the idea attracts new patrons.

The audacity of his plan is the more apparent when compared with that of a chain soda fountain organizations which requires all patrons to pay in advance for their orders before they wil be served.

The Manhattanite has a strong leaning for "atmosphere." The soft, Southern drawl is very popular on the island, so much so that it is frequently exaggerated by those who would not give it a thought in their home towns. One man made a fortune by capitalizing the idea. He opened an "old-fashioned, Southern waffle house" and hired young lady waitresses who were fortunate enough to possess a real or pseudo Southern accent.

14,000 Gather in Civic Greeting to Cardinal Bonzano

Governor Small Hopes for Strengthening of Religion

[By The Associated Press]

CHICAGO, June 18—More than 14,000 people assembled in the Coliseum tonight for the official civil reception of Cardinal Bonzano and other distinguished churchmen here for the eucharistic congress.

With the cardinals, as guests of honor, were more than 100 bishops and archbishops from all parts of the world, as well as officials of the congress.

Mundelein Present

Including Cardinal Mundelein, the sponsor of the church festival, ten members of the Sacred College were in the city tonight for the ceremony.

Two more Cardinals, Doherty of Philadelphia and O'Connell of Boston are scheduled to arrive Saturday and Sunday respectively.

Small Extends Welcome

Governor Small extended a hearty welcome, "On the part of the people of Illinois" and expressed the hope that the congress might "bring forth a revival and strengthening of religious interests and a quickening life not only in our nation but all christian nations in the world.

"I trust your visit may be made beautiful by enthusiasm and devotion of all those that participate in the celebration and when the time comes to say farewell you may take happy memories of your sojourn among us and consciousness of a great work nobly done."

Masses Commence

The series of masses which will mark the devotional rites of the congress were inaugurated today by services before three altars by as many European cardinals.

Cardinal O'Donnell of Ireland celebrated pontifical high mass at the chapel of the Immaculate Academy, Cardinal Piffl, Archbishop of Guayana, was celebrant at St. Clemens' German Catholic church and Cardinal Charost of France, offered adoration to the eucharists in Notre Dame church.

Iowans in Chicago

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—Railroad passenger agents here are estimating the number of Iowans who will visit Chicago during the Eucharistic congress at more than 5,000. No accurate means of checking on the pilgrims is available in advance but thousands of inquiries and many reservations made far in advance form the basis for this tentative estimate.

Several special Pullman cars have been carried by night trains on a few of the roads for the past two days and tomorrow and Sunday the crowds are expected to necessitate special sections of regular trains on various lines. Two special trains are scheduled to leave here Saturday and Sunday.

All roads centering here and at other large cities of the state are holding sufficient equipment in readiness to serve persons leaving during the week-end and early next week.

Miss Ehred, Nurse, Returns for Visit With Friends Here

Miss Mary A. Ehred, who, from the time of her graduation from nursing in 1916 until last October practiced privately at the university hospital, returned to Iowa City Thursday afternoon for a visit with friends. She will leave this afternoon for a stay with relatives at her home, Marengo. On June 30, she will return to her position at the National Soldier's home, at Milwaukee.

Musicians Appear in New Orchestra

Prof. F. E. Kendrie Directs Summer Organization

Thursday evening, at the regular practice hour, seven o'clock, in the band room, the first university orchestra rehearsal of the first summer term was held under the direction of Frank Estes Kendrie, professor of violin in the university school of music. Twenty-five musicians turned out for the practice.

Profsseor Kendrie states that the string section of the orchestra is unusually strong and contains much talent. "What is now needed," he said, "is more good players of the wind wood and wind brass instruments." Playing in the orchestra will give opportunities for students to play with accomplished musicians, many of them from the music school faculty. The work should be especially valuable for teachers who are in charge of orchestras during the regular school year, he feels.

Adults throughout the community, who are reasonably good players, are invited by Professor Kendrie to participate in the work of the orchestra whether they are students or not.

The orchestra is built around a nucleus from the university symphony orchestra which during the past year consisted of ninety-three members. At least one public appearance will be made by the present organization, at commencement.

A number of pupils are taking orchestra work for credit as part of their liberal arts course. Professor Kendrie warns them that grades will suffer seriously if such students fail to appear at practices.

Facists Recognize Futurists

painting has been recognized by the Fascist government as worthy of a place in the state museums.

Eight works by leaders in the most advanced school of painting, including Enrico Prampolini and Fortunato Depero, were purchased for permanent exhibition at the National Gallery at Rome. They included such suggestive canvases as "War-Feast," "The Distracted Pelican" and "Rhythm of Velocity."

Exhibit at Memorial Union Displays Talent of Hawkeye State Artists

Quality, rather than quantity, is the keynote of the third annual exhibition of paintings of the Iowa art guild, now on display at the Iowa Memorial Union. The exhibit this year is not as large as that held last year, but the paintings are considered better by many who have viewed them.

Among the paintings of especial interest is "Representation," painted by Miss Alma Held of Waterloo as a master's thesis. "Representation," painted as a mural decoration for an art building, represents the art of the white race. In the center stands the figure "Art." On either side are figures representing the two branches of art, sculptoring and painting. Forming a background for these figures, stand other figures representing the other races.

Another of Miss Held's pictures, "Still Life," is distinctive for its richness in color. Miss Held is an instructor in the local school of graphic art.

A new picture, "Iowa Landscape," painted by C. A. Cumming, director of the university art department, is another interesting feature of the exhibit. It portrays an expanse of Iowa land and is a picture of both scenic beauty and admirable workmanship.

"Hewitt," by Helen Grotewohl of Hartley, an alumna of the university shows a boy looking out from a window upon a scenic background.

Two pictures, "Sunset Glow" and "Lake Vermillion," by Catherine Macartney, also a local instructor, portray views across Lake Vermillion. These paintings are unusual both in scene and technique.

Harriet Macy of Des Moines has painted "Summer Breezes." This picture shows a careful use of light and shade.

The three paintings, "The Shore Road," "Summer's Abundance" and "Sunlit Terrace," were painted by Edna Patzig at Tiffany Foundation institute at Oyster Bay, New York. Mis Patzig, an instructor here, has been granted a year's leave of absence to study in Europe. This summer's study takes her to Fontainebleau.

Another local alumna, Margaret Hayes Stout, has painted "Natasha," one of the oustanding pictures of the exhibit.

Briand Abandons Effort to Organize Tenth Ministry

Financial Crisis Forces Old Minister to Final Move

[By The Associated Press]

PARIS, June 18—Edouard Herriot, leader of the radical party, who was premier of France from June 1924 to April 1925, has again been summoned to premiership and is trying to organize a ministry.

The summons came late today, after Briand had informed President Doumergue that he was unable to form his tenth cabinet after two days negotiations in an attempt to solve the ministerial crisis.

The outgoing premier, in a declaration made after announcing his decision to President Doumergue, placed the responsibility on M. Herriot. The former President Poincaire, he explained, was ready to enter a combination ministry to assume the formidable responsibility of minister of finance but M. Herriot withdrew at the last moment, being unable to form a government that could grapple with the serious financial problems facing the country without being hampered with political calls, M. Briand added. He had decided to renounce the task of forming a new cabinet.

Instead of forming a concentration ministry, M. Herriot is expected to rely on left coalition groups with the possible inclusion of a group of left republicans which would add about forty votes to his former majority in the chamber.

He is credited with the intention of offering the financial portfolio to M. Bokanowski, who was a former member of the Caillaux debt mission to the United States.

Governments and Courts Under Fire Claims Ohio Judge

DAVENPORT, June 18 (AP)—The government, the courts, the law, democracy and the church, all are on trial and are the defendants against formidable criticism, declared Carrington T. Marshall, Columbus, O., chief justice of the Ohio supreme court, today in an address before the annual convention of the Iowa State bar association.

All of these institutions, Justice Marshall said, are not only under severe criticism, but they are the objects of growing disrespect. The confidence which once was reposed in government, the faith which rested in the church, the sacredness of the court and the belief in democracy, all have dwindled, he said. From this lessening of respect and confidence have developed numerous problems in citizenship and government maintenance.

Automobile Deaths Continue to Mount In Iowa Each Year

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—Although the number of automobile fatalities in Iowa continues to mount, the safety campaigns carried on in various cities have been successful to the extent that they maintain an almost unchanged ratio of fatal accidents when the increased number of machines in operation is taken into account. This was disclosed by a recent survey by the state health department, which cooperates extensively with local organizations in staging safety drives.

For the past seven years, automobile fatalities in Iowa have been less than 4.5 annually for each 1,000 automobiles registered. During that period the number of automobiles in operation has almost doubled.

Each year of this seven year period, however, has brought an increased number of fatalities, the statistics revealed by Dr. Don M. Griswold, health commissioner, reveal. Dr. Griswold concludes from his survey that new methods of safety education must be devised before the accidents can be greatly reduced.

French Feminists Seek Bureau

PARIS, June 18 (AP)—A ministry or at least an under-secretaryship of state for women is one of the measures suggested by a newly formed association, "the French Feminist Club." Joseph Pithon, barrister at the Paris Court of Appeals, who has devoted years to questions of women's rights and the protection of infants, is urging the new club to secure this addition to the Cabinet.

Bankers Invite Sheriffs

DES MOINES, June 18 (AP)—All Iowa sheriffs have been invited to attend the convention of the County Bankers' association, to be held at Sioux City next week in connection with the state convention of the Iowa Bankers' association. The various county vigilantes organizations also will meet with the sheriffs and the bankers, and discuss means of frustrating bank robberies and rounding up criminals.

Tolerance

FOR many years the civilized world was embroiled in religious controversies and wars. Discussions waxed warm, threats were exchanged, arrests were made, trials held, victims persecuted, lives destroyed, and all because two great branches of the Christian faith could not agree to leave each other alone. Leaders on neither side could be content to allow the other its own opinion or the right to worship as conscience dictated.

We speak commiseratingly of those Dark Ages, and well we may. Some would hold that we still have not advanced so very far beyond them. This may be true of particular individuals but among nations and largely among human beings the doctrine of tolerance has found "good ground."

Chicago, largest inland city of America, is this week making extensive and magnificent preparations to entertain in a fitting manner the International Eucharistic Congress which convenes there from Sunday till the following Thursday.

For weeks the New York Central has been using special precautions that the large number of visitors who will pass over its roadway to the place of meeting may do so with a high degree of safety.

Throughout the United States people generally are exhibiting much interest in the Congress and enthusiasm in the entertainment of the distinguished guests who are arriving from all parts of the world. Everything that care and forethought can accomplish will be done to protect, entertain, and honor these strangers who are among us for a time.

Gratifying, indeed, is this attitude of the American commonwealth toward the representatives of a great church. While all do not agree with its doctrines nor subscribe to its tenets, there is a sentiment which says as plainly as could words: "Your belief and mine may differ, but each has a right to his own and should be allowed to follow it without molestation." And so the great city of Chicago, the commonwealth of Illinois, and the nation at large unites in welcoming and honoring our guests.

Thus TOLERANCE, the product of ENLIGHTENMENT has won another victory over INTOLERANCE, the child of IGNORANCE.

"Too Much Collegiate Freedom"

"Laxity is the greatest peril of the colleges," said Chief Justice Frederick F. Faville of the Iowa Supreme Court. "There is too little obedience, too little discipline in the schools, as there is too little respect for law and rule in American life.

"There is too much collegiate freedom. The student body should be organized to further the cause of education, and anything that militates against that cause should be banned."—Des Moines Register.

CHIEF JUSTICE FAVILLE, we must remember, looks at the situation from a position very near that of the gentlemen in possession of the big stick. His years of experience as a lawyer and as a judge could not be expected to have a liberalizing influence upon him. But his opinion must carry with it a great deal of weight, coming, as it does, from a gentleman whi is a graduate of the university and one of Iowa's most distinguished jurists.

We heartily agree that "the student body should be organized to further the cause of education," but we do not agree that there is too much collegiate freedom, or too little obedience, or too little discipline in the colleges and universities as a whole.

The number of students in the universities has increased tremendously since the World war, and it is possible and altogether likely that a good many of them are undesirable as students; but would it be logical to deprive persons from necessary training and education because they were not willing to be suppressed by the authority of the faculty or because they were slightly inclined toward unconventional-mindedness?

We do not think so. And we should like to point out to Mr. Faville that in view of the fact that the number of students has increased so enormously the difficulties of the instructors has increased proportionately. Education is becoming more and more mechanical—that is, students are taught by the group method, by lectures and assigned readings, and there is an inevitable tendency toward standardization which would be deplorable if allowed to become a fact. From the student's standpoint, the only way to counteract this tendency under the present system is to take a free and easy attitude toward too-confining and too-restricting rules, both in the class room and on the campus.

Personal liberty as an ideal is dying hard and the college student is one of the most independent individuals in the world. More discipline and less "collegiate freedom" would lead to much worse conditions than now exist.

A more liberal attitude on the part of the faculty and the disciplinary boards of the colleges would make the institutions of higher education in the United States more truly educational than they are at present. Liberal tactics on the part of the faculty will go a long way toward developing self-reliance and responsible, level-headed thinking on the part of the students.

Wilson and the Newspaper

WOODROW WILSON developed a cordial dislike for newspapers. The inaccurate, biased, and slanderous utterances of the papers irritated him. He had a significant and persistent love for truth and justice. So gentleman-like and courteous was he that ill treatment to an opponent was abhorrent to him.

Wilson's position against the newspaper is partially justifiable. In one of his speeches he made the remark, "Public opinion in America comes from the crossroad store, where men sit around the stove on a winter evening and spit into a sawdust box; and whatever else may be said of the habit of chewing tobacco, this must be said in its favor; It makes men think because they have to stop between sentences to spit." He was dismayed to discover, the next morning, that the newspaper reports practically ignored the serious part of his address but proclaimed to the world in headlines that "Chewing tobacco makes men think, says Wilson."

The illustration indicates a slight perversion of fact; perhaps a dodging of the issue, but the real clash between Wilson and the newspaper came as a result of the directly opposite make-up and nature of each. Wilson came to convictions only after severe logical processes of thought, while news writers have a desire to write fleeting news impressions into permanent history. The newspaper mind is impatient with logical processes; Wilson knew nothing else. Instinct and impulse, eruptive, make news. Wilson fought instincts backed by reason. History has place for logical processes, the newspaper is not the place for such.

Nevertheless the newspaper has a mighty big place to fill. It is the greatest motivating power in the world. It can fashion and mould public opinion as no other institution. It can right more wrong, promote larger achievements and initiate more action than any other power. The position of the newspaper is significant.

No Guns! . . . No War?

CONCRETE proposals to forbid the use of airplanes an poison gas in warfare and suppress heavy artillery and tanks were put forward by Germany at the session of the preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva.

These attempts to restrict the more hateful forms of warfare are futile. When nations are hard pressed they will resort to any means to prevent a disastrous defeat. That everything is "fair" in war has been only too well demonstrated. Countries will utilize every chemical and mechanical ingenuity to overcome the enemy.

When war is used as a method of settling disputes a general assent is given to ignoring international legality. The war itself is indicative of law-breaking and violation of confidence.

The proposals at the Geneva Conference are obviously an attempt to abolish those means of warfare which are most destructive to life. Could this be carried far enough, peace would be established. But since the weapons of war are the instruments of peace, they are essential to it and every resource will be used by nations in the throes of a struggle.

Respect for neutrals and non-combatants is the only international law to which there has been any pretense to regarding during war times. It has been violated in nearly every war.

The arms limitation proposals would require of necessity an international court to enforce them. War theoretically would be reduced to a contest similar to a duel. The peaceful nations would act as judges and policemen to the warring nations to see that they battled according to the laws. If this is the aim of the proposals, could not it be carried out, with as much satisfaction and with greater regard to decreasing loss of life, by the court itself? This elimination of conflict would more truly serve the purpose of the arms conference.

"Do you like that strawberry shortcake?" asked the little dear of her mother's guest.
"Yes dear, very much."
"That's funny. I heard mamma say you hadn't any taste."

"Hope you liked those add little Chinese backscratchers I sent you, dear."
"Mercy! Is that what they are? I've been making my husband eat his salad with them."

Poems That Live

Misunderstanding

I might have known you wouldn't understand.
Nobody ever did, but still I thought
That you were different; your eyes
So deeply looked in mine, and smiled.

You couldn't feel the wind across your cheek
As though a baby's hand carressed it,
Nor catch your breath at stars against the sky
That pricked a jeweled poem on the black.

You never felt the night, you only saw it.
Oh, can't you feel there is a difference?
Perhaps I'm selfish asking you to see
My thoughts instead of finding yours, but dear,

This knowledge means my happiness, because
I've lived in dreams so long I must demand
Of love, reality so deep that I
Can know my dream was only nothingness.

—Claire Graves in The Parchment.

Mellon on Haugen

SECRETARY MELLON'S letter dissecting and destroying the Haugen farm bill contains little or nothing new. All that he says has, in effect, been said by debators in the House and in the Senate. Yet it is wholesome and helpful to have the argument summed up and stated with masterly lucidity and force by the secretary or treasury. His words will go to thousands who never read Congressional speeches. They will carry with them, moreover, the weight of official authority, particularly in the sense that they show the Administration's strong disapproval of the Haugen bill. The gossip about Mr. Coolidge being ready to sign it if it passes is blown to shreds by the Mellon letter.

What Secretary Mellon's analysis of the bill demonstrates is that it is a scheme to mulct American consumers. They would have to pay higher prices than foreigners for the same American products. The scheme is frankly confessed by its promoters to be one to subsidize the farmers. But Secretary Mellon shows that its ultimate effect would be to subsidize our European competitors in the world market. Furthermore, speaking from the standpoint of practical administration, he makes it clear that the Haugen bill is so cumbrous and complicated that to execute it if it became a law, would require a whole army of Government inspectors and bureaucrats, and would result in endless clashes with individual farmers and in masses of litigation. It seems impossible that the measure can survive the heavy blow dealt it by the Secretary of the Treasury. As amatter of fact, it has failed to receive the support of many powerful farm organizations which have not been caught by its lure.

Mr. Mellon makes no reference to one contention of the farmers who clamor for the Haugen bill. They say that the Republican policy is by tariff legislation to give subsidy to manufacturers. This, instead of helping the farmers, hurts them. They assert that if the Government is in the business of dealing out subsidies, it is their turn to demand and receive one. As a high-tariff Republican, Secretary Mellon does not find it discreet to refer to this matter. Yet it is plain that, on this subject, the farmers could turn his own argument against him. He objects that the Haugen bill is intended to raise prices to American consumers. That, also, is the intent and often the effect of protective duties. The Secretary thinks that it is unsound and well-nigh outrageous to favor a plan which will enable foreigners to "secure American commodities at prices below the American level." But precisely that is done under the operation of our tariff laws, with their supplementary legislation permitting American corporations to combine for the export trade, so as to sell abroad cheaper than at home. More will be heard of this after the Haugen bill fails, as in its present form it must fail. If the farmers of the Middle West do not cool off, they will be tempted to ask Secretary Mellon and President Coolidge ugly questions about the protective tariff, and to declare that out of its own mouth the Administration stand condemned.—New York Times.

Wisconsin Sends Untried Eight to Rowing Premier

MADISON, Wis., June 18 (AP)—Undaunted by sixteen unsuccessful attempts of the University of Wisconsin to capture the premier American rowing event, an untried crew with only two veterans will carry the hopes of the Badger university and the middlewest into the Poughkeepsie race on the Hudson June 29.

Last Year Wisconsin finished third and the previous season flashed over the finish line in second position, behind Washington. The appearance of the Badger crew in the 1924 regatta marked its re-entry after an absence of ten years.

Never more than fourteen lengths has separated the Badger crew from the victors and never has the crew finished lower than sixth place. Harry E. Vail, sixty-five year old coach of the Wisconsin crew, has been at the helm at Wisconsin since 1911. He is not so optimistic over this year's prospect.

Yankees Land on Thomas to Beat Sox; Pirates Stop Giants

Ruth Helps Mates Win But Fails to Clout Out Homer

Thurston Fails to Halt Hugmen's Attack in Last Five Frames

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP) — The league leading Yankees evened up their series with Chicago today 10 to 2.

The visitors landed hard on Thomas in the first four innings scoring five times before he gave way to Thurston.

Thurston was unable to check the attack. Combs lead the New York attack with four hits including two doubles. Chicago batted Pennock freely but he managed to keep the hits scattered and was given perfect support.

Ruth walked two times, drove in two runs, and flied out once when the bases were loaded.

Ten Runs in Sixth

DETROIT, June 18 (AP)—A wild sixth inning marked by an argument between Manager Cobb and Umpire Rowland and by the scoring of ten runs by the Athletics featured today's 12 to 2 victory of Philadelphia over Detroit.

The half inning in which the excitement occurred required forty minutes, part of which was taken up by the dispute that ended with Cobb being chased from the field.

Plunging, Unpolished Player an Important Factor in Baseball Team

By GEORGE MORIARTY

Style and grace are of no particular value in baseball.

The plunging and physically unpolished type of player is just as important to the success of his club as his graceful teammate, and more so, because the rushing, plunging brand of athlete is in the majority wherever the game is played.

Wagner and Lajoie were direct contrasts when the matter of ease and poise were considered. The big Frenchman was the last word in grace, both in the field and at the bat.

Regardless of the nature of a fielding chance, Lajoie expended little effort, and always left the fans with the impression that the hardest chances were mere play for him.

Flawless Hands

My memory of Lajoie in the field, is to see a tall, dark, lithe figure loping in a faun-like maner to the left or right, bending with the ease of some giant blade of grass, not to snag or clutch a terrific grounder, but rather to entice it into a velvet-like pocket before throwing out his victim.

The great Wagner matched his famous rival in executing marvellous stops, but not without a maximum amount of effort. Possessed of a flawless pair of hands, Wagner shot to either side and made the most uncanny and spectacular stops and throws. Perhaps it was only his stocky build which made gracefulness out of the question.

Johnny Evers possessed grace to a degree around second base and at the plate. Eddie Collins lacks this smooth quality in the field, and while he is sprinting, but his performance at the plate is very easy to gaze upon.

George Sisler is another player who moves with great rhythmic beauty. It is inherent with Sisler because he couldn't make it fielding chance look clumsy no matter how badly he might play it.

"It's Where"

Rogers Hornsby effervesces grace at the bat, but retains little of it around second base. Max Carey and Frank Frisch are two others who are indebted to mother nature for the gift of being pleasing to the eye, and Tris Speaker in the act of catching a fly, reveals as much beauty as any of the modern gardeners. Twenty years ago he was an artful eyeful in every motion he made at the plate.

Still, athletic grace does not win pennants. The managers seek the fellows who can crash the apple. If Connie Mack sought only graceful players, the hustling, bustling Al Simmons would have lasted about 15 minutes in the outfield. In regard to base hits, the ball player says: "It isn't how; it's where."

American Women Tennis Stars Win Wightman Cup

Mary Browne, Elizabeth Ryan Win Deciding Doubles Contest After Hard Fight

[By The Associated Press]

WIMBLEDON, England, June 18—Sensational tennis history was written here this afternoon when the quartet of American women racket stars regained the Wightman cup, emblematic of team supremacy in women's tennis.

They took the cup from the English in one of the closest international contests on record.

America won four matches to three but the last and deciding match doubles was a close affair, and it might have been a different story if the Yankee players, Miss Mary K. Browne, American captain and Miss Elizabeth Ryan had not come through with the winning game when in the deciding third set the score was four all. They defeated Mrs. Kittie McKane Godfree and Miss Evelyn Colyer 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Game Too Slow for Jayhawk Golf Head

FORT LEAVENWORTH, June 18 (AP)—Although he is president of the Kansas State Golf Association, Brig. Gen. Edward L. King, commandant of the general service schools here, spurns the ancient game.

"It's too slow," General King said. "Golf is fine for women, children and old men, but until I become superannuated, I shall continue to play tennis and handball. I have tried a game or two of golf, but I prefer vigorous sports."

Williams Shoots 99, Record Score

Makes Unusual Shots in National Rifle Tournament

Rowland Williams of Davenport, summer school student in the college of engineering and member of the Acacia fraternity, hung up a record of ninety-nine on the rifle range here yesterday. He was competing in the open shoot of the National Rifle association at six hundred yards. Barely missing the bull's eye in the first shot for a four, Williams punctured it in each of the following nineteen tries.

With the unusual score made, Williams has a chance to win the national match and is sure of at least receiving high honors for his exceptional accomplishment.

In the match, Williams used a new type of ammunition, the nine degree boat-tail bullet being used propelled by 172 grains of Hival powder. The bullet is known as the 1924 N. R. A. type. The latest model of the Springfield rifle was employed with regular iron sights.

Owner of Bubbling Over Erects New Barn for Horses

NEW ORLEANS, June 18 (AP)—E. R. Bradley, owner of Bubbling Over, winner of the Kentucky Derby, and other famous race horses, has erected here what turf followers rank as the best barn in America. It will provide quarters for his string of horses and their attendants during future meetings here.

The barn is a part of the $300,000 improvement program launched by the Louisiana Jockey Club. The structure contains forty stalls, ten of which are set aside for "guests".

Take Fourth Place

BROOKLYN, June 18 (AP)—Chicago Cubs gained undisputed possession of fourth place, defeating the Robins 6 to 2 in the second game of the series.

Babe Herman doubled in the sixth and drove in the run that gave Brooklyn the lead but Chicago came back in the seventh with a four run rally that packed the game away.

Reds Hold Lead

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP) — Cincinnati retained its lead by downing the Phillies in a long tedious game 13 to 5.

The wildness of the Phillies pitcher who issued ten bases on balls, helped the Reds count almost as many runs as hits.

Pete Donahue of Cincinnati was sent to the bench by the manager for protesting a decision.

Rotarians Meet at Country Club

Session of Kangaroo Court Brings Laughter

Charges against various well-known members of the rotary club were made Thursday in a humorous program at the first meeting of the club held this summer.

President Jim Luscombe was charged with selling to the athletic department of the university an oil painting which he delivered in a rainstorm. The rain having washed off the paint, it was claimed that the painting was only water color.

Ben Wallis was charged with selling inferior lumber to Will Hunter. Both defendants argued their cases with great vigor.

Notwithstanding the fact that many Rotarians are away on summer vacation and the lawyers attending the meeting of the state bar association, there was a good attendance.

Escaped Prisoners Remain at Large

Two Sneak Out as Sheriff Aids Intoxicated Man; Each, With Short Time to Serve, Now Faces Long Sentence if Caught

Harlan Arthur, former university student, and Tony Carney, convicted bootlegger, of Parnell, are still at large after escaping from the Johnson county jail early yesterday morning. Sheriff J. S. Martin has broadcast the news over this part of the state and has hopes that the two young men may be apprehended within a short time.

Sheriff Martin was aroused in the night by one of his charges who pleaded to be relieved of the inevitable effects of the night before on the morning after. While aiding the intoxicated fellow, it is thought that Carney and Arthur slipped out of the jail through the doors, ordinarily locked, that had been inadvertently left open. The sheriff believed that the outer gate was secure and was not aware of the escape until going over his prisoners later in the morning.

Arthur had about a dozen days yet to serve on a sentence imposed for disturbing the peace; Carney had forty days of a sixty day sentence yet to dispose of. Both are now subject to conviction if caught, for offences more serious than those which they were serving. The penalty is one year in the penitentiary.

George Smith Dies After Long Illness

George W. Smith, aged 74, died at 2 o'clock yesterday morning at a local hospital. He was the father of Hubert W. Smith, proprietor of the Auto Repair shop at 220 S. Clinton.

Mr. Smith was born in Kentucky in 1851 and moved to Indiana while a young man where he married Miss Hannah L. Haines. For 15 years, he was connected with the grounds and buildings department at Purdue university. His wife died March 9 at LaFayette, Ind., and he moved to Iowa City to live with his son. He has been ill for some time.

The body will be sent to Lebanon, Ind., for burial.

Reports Condition of Roads "Good"

Directions for Detour Given by Chamber of Commerce

Roads in the vicinity of Iowa City are in fairly good condition, according to reports from the office of the chamber of commerce. The detour for through traffic on number seven is in good shape, although, of course hilly.

The detour on number seven for through traffic is by way of Williamsburg and north over number thirteen to a point two miles east of Marengo. However, those wishing to go to Oxford, Homestead, or Amana may follow number seven to a point one and one-fourth miles west of Tiffin, then south two miles and across the Rock Island tracks turning west at the first corner and continuing west five miles to where the road turns north around a school house in the timber. This road leads directly north about two and one-half miles to a point directly east of Oxford.

Those wishing to visit Oxford would turn left. To go to Homestead or Amana one may go either through Oxford and out to number seven north of town or turn east just after crossing the railroad tracks before entering Oxford. This latter road leads to the number seven cut-off and on west.

Leatrice Joy's Famous Bob

Old Dame Fashion may be the tyrant of most of the feminine world, but Hollywood is not so easily ruled.

Leatrice Joy, for example, turns up her saucy nose at orders from Paris to let her hair grow and visits the barber regularly to keep her famed boy-bob in short, shining resplendency.

Leatrice's close-shingled coiffure is one of her most individual characteristics and one by which she is instantly recognized in Hollywood, home of distinctive feminity. It lacks even the suggestion of a girlish curl and is divided by a severe part which gives a swagger apperance.

Yet, in spite of this extreme hairdress, Leatrice Joy has not lost her femininity, the proof being the splendid work she does as a superfeminine "clinging vine" in her latest starring feature for De Mille, "The Clinging Vine".

"Why should I let my hair grow if I look better with it short?" inquires Leatrice. "Fashions that make you look funny should never be taken seriously, and styles that are uncomfortable went out with bustles and pompadours."

Construction Gang Finishes First Half Mile Paving West

State Keeps Crew of Inspectors Who Watch Work

"It will not always be thus". So the mob of automobilists, cut off from favorite jaunts west on the White Pole road and north on the Solon cut-off, may say. The first half mile of paving on primary No. 7 was completed yesterday.

Rain Hampers Work

"The Wright Construction Company has been greatly handicapped by the recent heavy rains," said F. K. Preston, of Des Moines, chief engineer in charge of the wark and former student of the engineering college at Ames. "The company is just getting its forces together again and building up another organization after the losses of men due to the enforced lay-off." In a few days the big force of workmen now augmented by many trucks, should attain a normal laying capacity of about seven hundred feet per day.

Mr. Preston, representing the state highway commission on the job, is being assisted by a crew of six inspectors and stake men. Every precaution is being taken to make the road according to specifications. R. S. McMurray, of Iowa City, is inspector on the mixer; A. K. Olsen, of Salt Lake City, keeps an eagle eye on the proportioning of materials and J. E. Kenney, local inspector, is in charge of the cement car.

Pavement 18 Feet Wide

The pavement is being laid eighteen feet wide, seven inches thick in the center and ten inches on the outer two feet. The state commission has found that these dimensions best resist the heavy stress of modern auto traffic.

The Liddick Construction company of Davenport has started work at Solon on the Solon-Iowa City part of the fifteen mile stretch of road that is to be graded this year and graveled next. In a few days, W. A. Moore, of Hector, Minnesota, is expected to unload his machinery preparatory to leveling the highway between Ely and Solon. This will carry the road work to the Johnson county line.

Turkish Life Remains Same

ANGORA, June 18 (AP)—Mustapha Kemal's "Emancipation" for Turkish women is little more than a myth. On a tour of Anatolia it was found that, except in large cities, ninety per cent of the Turkish women still wear the veil and lead the same miserable existence their sisters did for 400 years before them.

C.M.T.C. Officer Will Talk in City

Madison to Lecture at Local Clubs on Summer Camp

Reserve officers, business men's clubs, and religious and patriotic organizations of Iowa City will shortly be addressed by Major Irving M. Madison of the U. S. Army, who will arrive in Iowa City at an early date in the interest of the Citizen's Military Training camp to be held at Fort Des Moines, August 30, 1926.

In particular he will explain the history of camps, their purpose, schedules of training, and other points of interest. Boys attending the camp spend an entire month there and the major part of the training period is devoted to sports and physical training.

Application blanks may be secured from E. A. Baldwin, the county chairman, or from the officer upon his arrival. Transportation, uniforms, and living expenses are arranged for without cost to the boys.

Women Workers to Meet

WASHINGTON, June 18 — The tenth biennial convention of the National Women's Trade Union league, in which are federated many thousands of working women and friends of their movement, will open here June 28.
