Minneapolis Trucking Strike Ends as Employers, Employes Vote to Accept Peace Terms

Employers Promise To Return All Strikers To Work

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 21 (AP)—Clashing wills of striking truck drivers and their employers reached an accord tonight that immediately ended the five-weeks old walkout and, union leaders claimed, represented a victory for the workers.

The employers advisory committee this afternoon accepted the terms of settlement suggested by P. A. Donoghue, representing the national labor relations board at Washington, and W. W. Hughes, of the regional labor board.

Vote to Accept

The full membership of the union, No. 574, voted almost unanimously tonight to accept the peace terms, based entirely on the Haas-Dunnigan plan, which strikers have stood pat on since early in the walkout.

Under the settlement, employers promised to return to the payrolls all strikers as of July 16, when the walkout was called, without discrimination.

Provided Stumbling Block

Previously, the employers advisory committee had demanded the right to select employes to be reinstated from a "preferred" list of workers and insisted they would take back no striker "known" to have been guilty of unlawful acts during the strike.

This provision proved the biggest stumbling block to an earlier peace with the wage scale second in importance. As to wages, both sides agreed to accept a scale of 40 cents an hour for inside workers, helpers, and platform men, and 50 cents for drivers.

This scale is two and one-half cents an hour lower for both classes of workers than that proposed by the Rev. Francis Haas, and E. H. Dunnigan, federal mediators, in their offer some days ago.

An added clause in the settlement however, left the wage question open for arbitration.

The employers pledged themselves not to discriminate against any employe because of union membership and agreed to elections among employes within 10 days to determine representation for collective bargaining.

Code Head Meets With Textile Leader

By The Associated Press

The menace of strikes that would paralyze the textile industries brought Robert Bruere, chairman of the cotton textile industrial relations board, and George A. Sloan, chairman of the cotton textile code authority, together at New York yesterday. Union labor had given an ultimatum that the next move was up to the industry or the administration.

A compromise plan to avert a textile strike was believed to be the goal of administration leaders.

Officials of the American Woolen company said its plants would close for two weeks Sept. 7 because of conditions in the industry.

Roosevelt To Attend Rainey Funeral Today

Simple Rites Planned In Honor Of Late Speaker

CARROLLTON, Ill., Aug. 21 (AP)—Henry T. Rainey's body will be brought home to Carrollton tomorrow for funeral services at which President Roosevelt will join in honoring the speaker of the house.

From the front porch of Walnut Hall, the Rainey estate, the Episcopal ritual is to be read late in the afternoon in a simple ceremony.

Mrs. Rainey had not announced final arrangements tonight, awaiting approval of those who have charge of the president's visit of respect to the veteran Democratic leader.

But unless the weather interferes or last minute changes are made, on the spacious lawn prominent figures in the public life of the nation and Illinois will be seated with the men and women who voted for "Henry T." for congress.

Throughout the business district and along the mile of pavement eastward to Walnut Hall, flags were placed at half mast—tribute to the placed at half staff—tribute to the foremost position in the national legislature.

The body of Mr. Rainey, who died at St. Louis Sunday night, will be brought back to Carrollton in the early morning, to lie in state in the flag draped court house, guarded by war veterans, until 1 p.m. then it will be taken to the farm mansion for the last time, to await the coming of Mr. Roosevelt and other mourners.

Old Breaks Opened In Successor Fight

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP)—Old breaks that never quite closed after the 1933 battle for house Democratic leadership posts were being opened wider today in a conflict over the selection of a successor to Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

Hurried plans to tighten their alignments were made by potential candidates for the powerful post.

Already, Representative Rankin, Mississippi veteran, had put himself forward on a liberal platform. By the end of the week, virtually all the aspirants will be openly in the field.

The announcement for Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, party floor leader and chairman of the Democratic congressional elections committee, will be made by Representative McReynolds, the Tennessean who handled his colleague's campaign when Rainey won.

Prohibition Party Meets

OSKALOOSA, (AP)—The Iowa Prohibition party met in a rally at University Park tabernacle here yesterday and heard its candidate for governor, L. J. U. Smay, of Merrill, explain the state and nation's wet-dry controversy.

President Roosevelt Plans For Reorganization of NRA

Decides to Return To Washington After Rainey Funeral

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt, in a series of conferences, today charted a reorganization of the national recovery administration that will be completed early in September. Definite indications of the presidential plans were coupled with his sudden decision to return to Washington immediately after the funeral of Speaker Henry T. Rainey at Carrolltown, Ill., instead of going directly to Hyde Park, N. Y.

Administration advisers are hoping for a sharp upturn in business this fall and every effort will be made to accelerate the expected increase with more simplified and stabilized NRA code machinery.

A blueprint of plans for revamping the blue eagle's roost has been prepared, one version of which calls for a form of military organization with a five-man board to direct the activities of five "sectors" or groups of industries.

This reorganization of NRA to give business a fuller opportunity of self-government is but one phase of President Roosevelt's intensification of recovery plans before winter sets in.

The national emergency and executive councils were directed by the president upon his return from his Hawaiian cruise to write special reports on the progress of the entire recovery program and to submit suggestions as to how it could be improved and speeded.

F.R. Continues Work On Mid-West Trip

ABOARD PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Aug. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt, traveling into the mid-west on the sad mission of a last farewell to the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, tonight kept up at full speed his work of rounding up and reshaping the recovery campaign.

The president carried with him to the bier of one of his foremost legislative lieutenants a report, given him just before he left Washington, that business conditions presented a "very heartening outlook."

Merriam to Consider Pardon for Mooney If Elected Governor

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 21 (AP)—If acting Governor Frank Merriam is elected to succeed himself he will give "serious consideration" to an application for pardon filed by Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of the San Francisco preparedness day bombing, the executive said today.

Mooney is serving a life sentence in San Quentin penitentiary for the 1916 bombing in whch 10 persons were killed and 40 injured.

Responsibility for the blast, which spread death and terror through a downtown San Francisco parade, has steadfastly been denied by Mooney.

F. R. Calls For Loan on Cotton To Help South

Authorizes Loan of 12 Cents a Pound On Staple

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP)—Another government loan on cotton to help the southern farmers—12 cents a pound this time—was authorized today by President Roosevelt.

The announcement was made just before Mr. Roosevelt left Washington for the mid-west to attend the funeral of Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

Makes Statement

The president said in his statement he had "requested the Reconstruction Finance corporation to make funds available to the Commodity Credit corporation that will enable it to increase its lending from 10 to 12 cents a pound on cotton, classing low middling or better, which is and has been continuously in the possession of the producer."

This means that any cotton grower, if he does not wish to sell his staple at this time, may borrow 12 cents a pound from federal agencies on the commodity.

Regulations Not Set

Detailed regulations were not announced, although officials said that in all essentials they would follow those governing the 10-cents-a-pound loan last year.

If the same regulations apply, the government takes the risk should cotton go below 12 cents and stay there. Should the price climb during the season, the grower may repay the loan, sell his bales and pocket the profit.

Not Price-Fixing

Officials said the loan today was not a price-fixing scheme, although the effect would be to stop farm sales of cotton, if the price fell below 12 cents.

Proposals for loans on corn and wheat also have been made to the farm administration. Officials said, however, that there is no likelihood of any immediate action on these commodities.

Jews Plan German Boycott

GENEVA, Aug. 21 (AP)—Bolstered by the advice of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York to reject all peace offers from Nazi Germany, the boycott commission of the third world Jewish conference issued a communique tonight declaring the boycott will be redoubled until German Jews get back all their rights of citizenship.

Cutler Named Insurance Secretary

Council Bluffs Officer Will Succeed Lewis at University

War Department Acts On Recommendation Of Gilmore

Lieut. Col. George F. N. Dailey of Council Bluffs was named yesterday by the war department in Washington, D. C., to succeed Lieut. Col. Converse Rising Lewis as commandant of the University of Iowa R.O.T.C.

Colonel Dailey's appointment becomes effective Sept. 1, at which time Colonel Lewis will leave the university for a post in Massachusetts, after having served as head of the military department here for six years.

A native Iowan—born and reared in Council Bluffs—Colonel Dailey was graduated from the United States Military academy at West Point in 1905. He is the son of Col. D. B. Dailey of Council Bluffs, a Civil war veteran.

The Iowa appointee was in the signal corps during the World war and was later commandant of the R.O.T.C. at the University of Illinois. He is now instructor in the national guard camp at Council Bluffs.

His appointment was made after he had been recommended to the Washington office by President Eugene A. Gilmore. It was thought earlier this week that he would not be detailed here because he was under orders to transfer to Ft. Meade, Md., Sept. 15. This order was countermanded to allow him to come to Iowa.

Gen. Matt A. Tinley, commander of the Iowa national guard, last night characterized Colonel Dailey as "an outstanding officer and an untiring worker," an Associated Press dispatch from Des Moines said. The new Iowa commandant visited the university yesterday.

F. R. Approves Treaty Plans

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt yesterday approved plans presented by Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state, for the signing of the new Cuban trade treaty here Friday afternoon.

Bandits Get $427,000 Loot In Brooklyn

Escape in Speed Boats As Police, Planes Join Search

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 21 (AP)—Swiftly and sensationally, a dozen bandits today held up and looted an armored bank truck of $427,000—the biggest cash robbery on record.

They escaped in a roar of fire from one of their own machine guns, which had been dropped, as their cars sped off. At the waterfront 19 blocks away they transferred the money and dashed away in speedboats.

40 Cars in Chase

More than 40 police cars raced in pursuit. Airplanes and police launches joined the chase. Tonight an armed cordon of thousands of officers continued a wide search over Brooklyn and Manhattan and nearby cities.

The brazenness with which the thugs attacked the heavily-armed truck and its crew and the precision with which the daring holdup was carried off made it one of the most sensational in criminal annals here.

Pose as Laborers

Two men dressed like laborers were loitering before the Rubel ice plant at Bay 19th street when the money truck stopped for a $25,000 collection to be taken to the New York federal reserve bank.

No sooner had Joseph Allen, driver, and John Wilson, guard, dismounted, when the "icemen" lifted an old automobile seat atop their pushcart and exposed a machine gun trained directly at them.

"Say a word and this spits," shouted one of the bandits.

The Federal Government In Johnson County

A Review of Administration Agencies Aiding In the Growth of City, County, University

(Editor's note—This is the seventeenth and last article in a series dealing with federal agencies operating in Iowa City, Johnson county, and the University of Iowa. The stories have appeared daily on the front page of The Daily Iowan since August 3, and have covered the following subjects: Student Emergency Relief, Adult Education, the Law Commons, the Fine Arts colony, the Public Works of Art project, repairs on SUI buildings, Iowa river improvements, the federal reemployment program, the Civil Works administration, the Agricultural Adjustment administration, the National Farm Loan association, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Home Owners Loan corporation, the Surplus Commodity corporation, the Federal Emergency Relief administration, the mattress factory project, the Public Works administration, and the National Recovery administration. The Daily Iowan believes this series gives the reader a complete picture of the manifold activities of the United States government which affect, in an unprecedented way, the everyday life of the ordinary individual in Iowa City and the county. These activities are expanding daily, and further developments will be reported in the regular news columns of The Daily Iowan.)

17. RFC

For the speed with which dividends have been paid by receiverships of Iowa City's five closed banks, depositors are largely indebted to the Reconstruction Finance corporation and to the deft negotiations of receivers.

Nine distinct loans totaling approximately one million dollars have been made to six closed banks in Johnson county by the RFC—the Solon Trust and Savings bank, the Johnson County Savings bank, the Iowa City Savings bank, the Citizens Savings and Trust bank, the Farmers Loan and Trust company, and the First National bank.

The latter receivership is now clear of all obligations to the RFC, according to K. L. Lindenmayer, receiver. A loan of $90,000 was authorized, and an unrevealed amount, now repaid, was borrowed and used to meet dividend payments. These have totaled approximately $425,000 to date, or about 70 per cent of deposits.

The first RFC loan negotiated for an Iowa bank was secured by Ben S. Summerwill, examiner in charge of state bank receiverships in this territory, in December, 1932. The loan, amounting to $140,000, was used to pay the first dividend to depositors of the Johnson County Savings bank. The same bank was granted another loan of $248,000 the following December, making a total of $348,000.

The Farmers Loan and Trust company receivership, also under Mr. Summerwill's direction, has been aided by the government through loans totaling $320,000. The first loan, of $160,000, was granted by the National Credit corporation, the functions of which were later absorbed by the RFC.

In December of last year Mr. Summerwill secured a loan of $50,000 for the Citizens Savings and Trust company and one of $100,000 for the Iowa City Savings bank. The Solon bank has benefited by two loans, the first of $40,000, and the second, $28,000.

Reconstruction Finance corporation loans were made to closed banks at low rates of interest on security which, though good, could not be quickly liquidated. Thus the corporation made it possible for the receiverships to pay immediate cash dividends instead of forcing depositors to wait for the slow process of liquidation.

Indications are that even more money from the RFC will find its way eventually into Johnson county, bringing the amount from this source alone well above the $1,000,000 mark.

Church Situation In Germany Troubled By Propaganda Outbreak

BERLIN, Aug. 21 (AP)—An outbreak of anti-Christian propaganda from Nazi sources today stirred deeper the troubled church situation in Germany, causing apprehension on the part of Catholics and some Protestant groups.

Despite Chancellor Hitler's acknowledgement of "positive Christianity" in Hamburg recently, there were indications of a greater tension.

Farmers Here To Get Corn, Hog Pay Soon

AAA Order Releases $209,000; Loans On Corn Extended

Johnson county farmers will soon get approximately $209,000 in corn-hog payments, released by an AAA order from Washington, D. C., according to the Associated Press.

Payments were held up in this, as well as other Iowa counties, while statisticians checked acreage and hog reduction contracts in the state to see if they were made out on the same basis as those in other states.

Until the Washington order came through, Johnson county farm officials feared that payments might be held up for some time. Three state investigators, scheduled to arrive yesterday to continue the contract probe, failed to come.

Farmers in this county have already received more than $190,000 from the AAA.

The Associated Press also reported that the time for payments by farmers of corn loans, made this spring by the government, has been extended to Jan. 1, 1934. The loan payments were due originally on Aug. 1, and later on Sept. 1.

Under the new arrangement, farmers may obtain release of part of their sealed corn by paying the Commodity Credit corporation 47 cents a bushel for corn he takes out for feed. The loan was 45 cents a bushel.

Thomas Savage, John Blom, PWAP Artists, Mrs. Pelzer Receive First Three Places

State Fair To Officially Open This Morning

Full Program Not To Begin Until Friday; Ends Aug. 31

DES MOINES, Aug. 21 (AP)—Iowa's 1934 state fair and exposition, gates to which will open at 7 a.m. tomorrow, was heralded by a burst of ninth hour activity at the fairgrounds today.

Large Crowd Expected

The final flurry of preparations will continue tomorrow and Thursday, the first two days of the fair, and the full program will open Friday to continue through Friday, Aug. 31.

Last year 8,918 persons attended the fair on its opening day, an increase of nearly 3,200 over the year before. Fair officials were anticipating as large a crowd this year.

Sightseers View Grounds

Today crowds of sightseers wandered about the grounds, visiting the midway, inspecting the livestock barns, watching the erection of machinery exhibits and stopping for refreshment at one of half a dozen concessions already open for business.

Entries for the second state fair rodeo, scheduled to open Friday, continued to pour in. First entries also were received for the team pulling contest.

Volcano In Italy Erupts

Mainlanders Anxiously Await News Of Damage

TROPEA, Italy, Aug. 21 (AP)—A ruby-red scar of flaming rock seethed and glowed tonight high on the eastern side of Stromboli volcano while anxious mainlanders 35 miles away on the southern Italian coast awaited news of damage from this morning's sudden eruption.

The eruption came with two gigantic thunder-like claps easily heard on the Italian shore. Molten lava then began to pour through a cleft on the eastern rim of the cone.

No further explosions were heard, but mainlanders who have grown up in the shadow of the "Lighthouse of the Mediterranean" said flecks of fire and great blooms of smoke visible tonight betokened exceptional activity within the crater.

It was feared this might cause streams of lava to pour down the slopes, 30,040 feet from the rim of the crater to the lower, vineyard-covered slope of the mountain.

One of the few European volcanoes in constant activity, Stromboli roars incessantly and spouts forth a stream of rock and cinders which usually fly harmlessly down the northwest slope.

Savage Gets $90 For Highest Honors In Show

Three Iowa Citians won high honors in the annual Iowa salon of art at the Iowa state fair, which will open today in Des Moines.

The awards were announced last night. Highest honor in the exhibit went to Thomas Savage, 25, of Ft. Dodge, an artist working here on the Public Works of Art project under Grant Wood. Savage won $90, highest award in the show, on a painting called "Butchering," the Associated Pres said. He won the $50 sweepstakes award and $40 first prize in oil painting.

Blom Takes Second Honors

To John Blom of De Witt, another PWAP artist, went the second highest honor. He won $45—$25 second sweepstakes and $20 first prize in the black and white class—on a drawing entitled "Foreign Entanglements," showing two stocky wrestlers in action.

Mrs. Mildred W. Pelzer, wife of Prof. Louis Pelzer of the history department, won third money with the $40 first prize on "Old Zion Lutheran" in the oil landscape division. Her painting was of Iowans going to church.

Studied Under Grant

Savage, whose career in art has been sensational, studied under Grant Wood at the Stone City colony, and spent one term at the Layton Art school in Milwaukee, Wis. This was all the art training he had had before coming to Iowa City on the PWAP.

His work, which portrays a winter butchering scene on an Iowa farm, besides bringing Savage prominence in a show in which more than 500 entries were made, is to hang in the White House in Washington, D. C.

F. R. Chooses Painting

President Roosevelt chose the sketch for the painting as one of 26 out of 1,600 paintings under the Public Works of Art project to be kept in the White House upon completion.

The painting, for a time after its completion, hung in the office of Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, where it was a subject of discussion because it depicts a bloodless butchering, and of argument over the size of the hams on the disemboweled carcass strung up for halving.

Savage, who lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Savage who rent 139 acres six miles southwest of Ft. Dodge, studied art one short term at Layton Art school in Milwaukee, Wis., and spent two weeks on two occasions at Stone City.

Savage is now in Iowa City completing work on a threshing picture, and will go back to his farm home this week.

Arranges Display

Mrs. Pelzer has been outstanding in Iowa art circles. It is she who arranged for a display of Iowa artists, to begin here soon. She was also instrumental in laying plans for the opening of an "art library" here, from which Iowa Citians may borrow famous Iowa art works to hang in their homes.

She attracted considerable attention last year with her art map of Dubuque, showing the history of that territory through drawings on the map.

Strong Winds Fan Northwest Forest Fires as Blazes Rage

Small Town Escapes Menace as Fighters Aid Residents

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 21 (AP)—Although it apparently had left Avery, a tiny lumbering hamlet, untouched, a forest fire roaring in the St. Joe national forest swept northward before a strong wind today and developed into one of the most dangerous fires of the northwest.

The blaze swept past the small community as residents pumped water on buildings. The wind died and more than 600 fighters dug trenches between the fire and the town.

Unless unforeseen trouble develops, it was not believed other communities will be endangered.

Discouraging reports came from the McLendon creek fire in the Selway forest of north central Idaho. Wind hampered the fighters, and the latest reports out of the area, at noon today, said only eight and a half miles of fire lines were being held. The fire has a perimeter of 150 miles. The fighting crew at that time numbered 979 men.

The 30-mile perimeter Martin creek fire also in the Selway forest yielded somewhat to fighters, and last reports said eight miles of line were being held.

An army of 2,577 fighters were closing in on the vast Pete King creek blaze, also in the Selway. The forest service at Missoula was advised 60 miles of lines were being held. The blaze had covered 27,000 acres and had a perimeter of 92 miles.

High winds boomed the Cardinal creek fire on the south fork of the Flathead river in western Montana, and late this afternoon it was reported to be running wild. Reports from the front contained only meager information on the size of this blaze.

Speaker Rainey— A Man Who Looked Ahead

AS ONE reviews the life of Henry T. Rainey, who served in 15 congresses of the United States, the thing that stands out above all others is that he was able to see the path ahead when many others could not.

His career in congress was by no means so distinguished as those of many other men. Even as speaker of the house he was capable and intelligent, but never so important as Nicholas Longworth in the "good old days."

But he saw the coming of a gigantic industrial depression and he urged preparedness for it. He saw the advantages of trade with Soviet Russia and he urged recognition and trade treaties with that nation.

For several years, during the boom days of the 1920's when America and Republicanism were inflated with the fluffy gold of pseudo-prosperity and Silent Cal Coolidge made a reputation by doing nothing and letting the country drift—for several years during that period Rainey talked of the coming industrial crisis in America.

He saw in the growth of machines a menace to society. He spoke of the time when millions upon millions of men would be thrown out of work because industry had not looked ahead. And he suggested a far reaching plan of spreading the savings from machines over the great masses of people.

At his own expense he financed a trip to Russia to "get the lowdown." What he saw there convinced him that recognition of the Soviet Union was necessary for the United States, in order to secure the advantages of trade with that nation.

He saw in Russia a growing power and foresaw the day when the United States would recognize the advantages of happier relations with the European country.

Rainey had often been in the center of political controversy. An ardent Democrat, he was in the first ranks of the men who caused grief for the Republicans at every turn. It was he who suggested investigation of President Theodore Roosevelt's Panama deal in the early years of the century.

But, of first importance in the life of the man whose shock of white hair and huge black pipe were landmarks in Washington, is the fact that he saw ahead.

Medical Science Forges Ahead

THE announcement that medical science may have a preventative for infantile paralysis and that the X-ray has been successfully used in the treatment of "high blood pressure" marks two great advances in the care of human life.

Idealists in medicine have looked forward to the day when the only cause of human death may be old age—when all disease shall have been eliminated from the earth. That day may never arrive, but for hundreds of years men have given their lives to the attainment of even a small portion of that ideal.

A century and a half ago medical science found the means to alleviate the suffering and death from a great scourge, smallpox. In the last century such discoveries as the use of anaesthetics to make possible delicate operations, Pasteur's treatment for hydrophobia, and the development of antitoxins for many diseases, are outstanding.

The first three decades of this century have seen many important advances. The use of radium and X-rays in medicine are only two of many.

From the magnificently equipped hospitals in metropolitan centers to the country doctor, with his knowledge in his little black bag, medical science has hundreds of years of service to humanity behind it.

What Others Think

An Unnecessary Miracle

(From the New York Times)

The Greeks had an epigram to the effect that a snake once bit a Cappadocian but that it was the snake who died. If the rattlesnake that bit the preacher in the Southern mountains had died, there might have been reason for concluding that there had been a special supernatural intervention. It is stated on high scientific authority that untreated rattlesnake bites are not necessarily fatal, though any person bitten who goes without a doctor's care is liable to become desperately sick, as did the preacher.

There are authentic cases of recovery, but not enough, it is stated, to form "a good statistical basis for an exact percentage estimate" of recovery probabilities. The snake may have lost a "good deal" of his venom if it had been recently captured. Moreover, the exhorter was a man of natural strength and good health and could be expected to "pull through" without making unnecessary demands of Providence.

It is cited as a basic principle of theology that "supernatural causes should not be sought until all possible natural explanations have been tried and found impossible." In this case natural explanations are adequate. Science Service in pronouncing the preacher's claim an "unnecessary miracle" seizes the opportunity to say that the traditional snake-bite "cure," whisky, is worse than useless. The first brief stimulating effect causes the blood to race through the patient's body, carrying the venom with it. This is followed by the narcotic effect, lowering the natural resistance. Emergency measures are suggested awaiting the arrival of the doctor, but nature herself may sometimes heal the victim even if a doctor cannot be had. It must be recalled by the mountain preacher that Paul shook off the viper that fastened on his hand "and took no harm." There was then no claim of divine intervention.

GOOD MORNING

Gov. B. Floyd Olson of Minnesota does not have the unbounded admiration of those who think the government already is too deeply involved in business and that prosperity can best be recovered by letting private enterprise take care of itself.

But what he says about present day conditions carries weight even with these. And when he says, as he did Monday, that the United States is faced with two alternatives—permanent breadlines or government control and operation—nobody but a fool can laugh it off with a shrug.

The whole country today is feeling the effect of strikes which threaten to disrupt the whole machinery of industry. Three hundred thousand textile workers already have been called on strike, and 500,000 more are waiting for word from their strike committee. A general transportation strike is imminent in Chicago. Truckers in Minneapolis were still on strike yesterday after a long and bitter conflict that has paralyzed the city for weeks. Unrest is boiling to the surface once more in the automobile industry and threatens to cause another conflagration.

All these strikes and threatened strikes, says Governor Olson, are the result of labor's attempt "to collect the promissory note given by the federal government through section 7-A of the national recovery act."

Now that the harm has been done, it is apparent that the government has done a rather poor job of handling the labor phase of recovery. When the NIRA set about to organize industry under codes of fair competition, it made no attempt to control the activities of labor in a similar way. On one side it attempted to bring all industry under a codified set of rules; on the other it left labor groping in the wilderness, armed only with a vague and high-sounding promise which meant nothing.

For disputes between employers, the government set up code authorities with power to enforce their decisions. For disputes between employers and labor it set up labor relations boards with no power whatever except to cause trouble. Actually, it gave labor nothing it did not already possess, and made it imperative that labor use the only weapon at its command, the strike.

Until some reliable and authoritative tribunal is established whose decisions can be depended upon both by labor and by employers, and until labor organizations are brought under the same degree of government supervision to which industry is now subject, strikes will continue and will increase in violence, and impotence.

As for the alternative between the breadline and government control and operation, opinions may differ but the facts are incontrovertible.

Already 20,000,000 American citizens are on the breadline, and it is estimated that 20,000,000 more are eligible for it. Fully half the population is living today on charity or in destitution.

If we could be assured that this would be only a temporary condition, and that improvement in business would bring a cure, it would still be bad enough, but perhaps there would be some excuse for treating it rather lightly. "A hundred years from now nobody will know the difference."

But the facts and the most reliable opinions say otherwise. Even though industry should suddenly boom—which would be nothing short of a miracle as long as half the population can no longer buy—improvements in technological processes would see to it that five or six million men still would be unemployed.

There must be a solution, and a drastic one. If the present administration does not find the way out and follow it, somebody else will. Most of us would prefer that it be done by those now in the saddle.

Much To-Do About "Much Ado"

University Theater Concludes Summer Season With An Orchid for The Immortal Bard

By TOM YOSELOFF

University theater, B. Iden Payne, the reproduced stage of the old Fortune theater, and everybody and everything else concerned is hereby vindicated.

For the production of "Much Ado About Nothing" which a cast of University Players introduced upon the public boards Monday night was enough to restore one's faith in the immortal bard, in Mr. Payne's judgment, and in the technical and dramatic qualities of the local stage.

"Brilliant Conclusion"

"Much Ado About Nothing" was a brilliant conclusion to a summer season of Elizabethan productions. Carefully and colorfully mounted, well costumed, well acted in the major roles, and presenting Shakespeare at his comic best, it gave the large audience an entertaining evening—and that, this writer has always held, is an important function of the theater, be it commercial, academic, or otherwise.

University theater had much to live down. The memory of "Cymbeline," which was perpetrated last month upon a guiltless collection of cash customers, still was fresh and tender. Let it be said that University theater is forgiven even "Cymbeline." For "Much Ado About Nothing" was a good show.

"Shakespeare Playworthy"

It has been the contention of Mr. Payne these many years that Shakespearean drama should be acted as it was written, without cutting or changes. This is neither the time nor the place for consideration of this question. Modern audiences can not and will not accept the long speeches and improbable situations of Shakespearean comedy. However, "Much Ado About Nothing" was not tiring and it had enough good modern laughs to prove Shakespeare still playworthy. Which offered the final summer's audience that happy combination of an academic project well performed and a play worth seeing.

Matson Scores Again

Much of the credit for an enjoyable evening goes to four of the players. Cecil Matson, with another outstanding and believable performance as Don Pedro, makes his score for the summer 100 per cent. He has appeared in all four productions, and he has scored four hits. Especially does Mr. Matson deserve credit for the fact that he alone, of all the players in all the Elizabethan plays this summer, could be perfectly understood. As Simon Eyre in "The Shoemaker's Holiday," as the banished nobleman in "Cymbeline," and as the prince in the show just concluded, his lines were spoken with intelligence, enthusiasm, and at the same time a clarity with which the other performers were not endowed.

"Perfect Fool"

Edmund Evans, as Dogberry the constable, was a character lifted right from the streets of Queen Bess' London. Dogberry is the perfect fool in which the stalls and the pit alike delighted in the theater of Shakespeare, and no less in the summer theater of the University of Iowa. Mr. Evans was properly blustering, stomping, officious—and harmless.

Shakespeare's shrews were never more delightful, in my experience, than the Beatrice of Gladys McClain. She showed an understanding of the quick repartee, the mischievous spirit, and the shrewish wit of the character—a wit exceeded only by the clever and funny scheme of the prince. Donald Winbigler as Benedick, male counterpart of Beatrice, gave a fine performance, in spite of a noticeable hesitancy in his lines.

There were others who were good and some who were not so good. To the "Much Ado About Nothing" company goes the highest praise possible to Shakespearean actors—they put on a good show.

Resume of Season

With the conclusion of the summer season, the time for stock-taking is at hand. The theater presented a total of eight performances of Elizabethan drama—two performances each of two productions of "The Shoemaker's Holiday," two performances of "Cymbeline," and two of "Much Ado About Nothing."

Despite a slow beginning, the first production of "The Shoemaker's Holiday" was well done, and was far superior to the performance of last month. "Cymbeline" can not be excused even as a project of academic value, for it was produced with about 10 days of rehearsals, and it was a net loss as far as audience value is concerned.

"Much Ado About Nothing" is by far the best of the summer's shows.

Worthy Educational Project

A resume of the season is by no means complete without mention of the series as an educational project. University theater deserves credit for bringing to life these old plays. Professor Mabie has the courage which it takes to bring forth an Elizabethan series in these times, and the theater has a technical staff composed of men who know how to mount Elizabethan productions.

There are certain things to be gained from seeing Shakespeare which are not to be secured from a reading, no matter how thorough. On the other hand, seeing destroys some of the aura which surrounds Shakespeare for many of us. On the whole University theater and Mr. Payne have done well by the Bard of Avon.

"Much Ado About Nothing" was again performed last night, with several changes in the cast.

"Off the Record"

Unofficial Doings From Washington, D. C.

By SIGRID ARNE

There is a far-western sheriff who must be a little red about the ears since the president went through his town.

Mr. Roosevelt was sitting in an open car surrounded by a large crowd when the sheriff started to elbow his way through.

He elbowed and elbowed, with the sun flashing blindingly on his brightly polished badge.

The president's eye was arrested by the bright flash. He grinned and called over the heads of the crowd, "No hurry, Mr. Sheriff. We've behaved while we were here."

Illinois showed a sly sense of humor, conscious or unconscious, when she held a homecoming celebration for her congressmen.

There is no more famous "chin decoration" in congress than the "pink" whiskers of Senator J. Ham. Lewis, senior senator from the state.

The homecoming party was held at Beardstown, Ill.

"Jim," a Negro truck-driver who "preached the gospel" on Wednesday and Sunday nights, is the leading character in one of the stories told by little, red-haired Stella Akin, special assistant to the attorney general.

Jim seemed in a big hurry to be free of his wife, and "Miss Stella" was his attorney back home in Savannah. The date for the trial was set, but every other day Jim would drop in to say:

"Miss Stella, Ah sure got to git dat dee-vorce on de day we goes to cote."

"All right, Jim," Miss Akin told him, "but what makes you so anxious?"

"Well, y'see," he explained, "Ah's fixin' to marry a sassiety black woman nex' day after and de invitations is already out."

Raymond Moley, who used to be known as "Brain Truster No. One," slips in and out of town so unobtrusively that his visits often pass unnoticed.

But one sure way of finding him is to search the Cosmos club at lunch time. There he usually is found with Under-Secretary Rexford Tugwell of agriculture, present "Brain Truster No. One."

Their presence recalls a favorite Washington story, which goes: "There are only three clubs here—the Cosmos club, where men with lots of brains and no money belong; the So-and-So club where men with no brains and lots of money belong; and the This-and-That club where—well, you figure it out."

When Washington's ambitious building program is completed, historic Pennsylvania avenue—street of many notable parades—is scheduled to relinquish its prominence to the new and handsome Constitution avenue which is emerging from the confused building operations.

The younger Washington crowd is enjoying some laughs at the expense of the pretty and popular Helen Defrees, daughter of the commandant of the navy yard.

She is afraid of only one thing—thunderstorms.

One terrific storm struck as she was entertaining a caller in the parlor of the commandant's home.

Without a word of explanation Miss Defrees grabbed a sofa pillow, pulled it over her head and refused to emerge until the blow was over.

Peterson to Speak on "Freedom, Dictatorship, Education"

Reveals Subject of Address For Address at Convocation Ceremonies Tomorrow Night

More Than 200 Will Receive Awards At Affair

"Freedom, dictatorship, education" will be the subject of an address by Prof. Elmer T. Peterson of the college of education at the August Convocation of the University of Iowa tomorrow at 8 p.m. on Old Capitol campus.

More than 200 men and women will receive degrees and certificates in the ceremony, which will bring to a close the thirty-fifth summer session of the university.

Ceremony on Campus

As has been traditional for several years, the ceremony will be on the west approach to Old Capitol. Officials and graduates will be seated on the cement terrace, and 2,000 chairs for the audience will be provided on the grass.

To the processional played by the all-state high school band, the academic procession of graduates and faculty in caps and gowns will begin from Iowa Union following the traditional graduates dinner. The band will also play an overture and recessional.

Gilmore to Award Degrees

The final list of graduates will be made today, on the basis of final examinations of the 220 who have applied for degrees and certificates. The awards will be made by President Eugene A. Gilmore, acting in this capacity for the first time at an August Convocation.

Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh, head of the political science department, will have his traditional place as master of ceremonies. Candidates for degrees and certificates in various colleges will be introduced by the deans of those colleges.

Dysinger Chaplain

The Rev. Wendell S. Dysinger, pastor of the First English Lutheran church, will serve as chaplain, giving the invocation and benediction. Prof. Vance M. Morton as university marshal and Prof. Harry G. Barnes, who will assist him, make up the roster of officials announced by Prof. Frederic G. Higbee, director of convocations.

President Gilmore will address the graduates, their friends, and faculty members at the graduates dinner in the river room of Iowa Union at 6 p.m. tomorrow.

The dinner and the Convocation exercises will be broadcast over station WSUI.

Gilmore to Return For Convocation

President Eugene A. Gilmore is expected to arrive in Iowa City tomorrow to officiate at the August Convocation ceremonies tomorrow evening and to address graduates at the traditional dinner in Iowa Union.

The Iowa head will return from Milwaukee, Wis., where he has been all week attending the annual meeting of commissioners on uniform state laws.

President Gilmore is a member of the Iowa state commission on uniform state laws.

Nephew of Vice President Garner Marries Sept. 10

James Roe Garner of Bethany, Okla., who received his Ph.D. degree in political science at the University of Iowa this June, will be married Sept. 10 to Jewel Mae Stewart, according to wedding invitations received by Iowa City friends. Mr. Garner is the nephew of Vice President John N. Garner of Texas.

The ceremony will take place at the Nazarene church in Bethany. Following the wedding, Mr. Garner and his bride will leave for Idaho, where Mr. Garner will teach political science in the Nazarene college at Garwood.

Elks Ladies Play Bridge at Clubhouse

Prizes at the Elks Ladies bridge party yesterday afternoon in the clubhouse were awarded to Mrs. L. R. Reed, Mary Brennan, and Mrs. Fred Miller. Seven tables of players competed.

Mrs. Erling Thoen was hostess for the afternoon. Mrs. C. Struttmatter, who is visiting Mrs. C. C. Ries, 726 N. Van Buren street, was an out of town guest.

Woman's Club Members Picnic in Iowa City Park

Iowa Woman's club members and their families will attend a picnic supper, the second club gathering this summer, on the upper terrace of the city park tonight at 6 o'clock.

Mrs. E. J. Strub is chairman of arrangements. Each member will bring a covered dish and sandwiches and table service for herself and her family.

·SEEN· from Old Capitol

By TOM YOSELOFF

And now that summer is practically over—what with talk of Convocation in the air and all—it is time to count one's blessings and take inventory of "What the thirty-fifth summer session has meant to me." So a columnist takes stock:

We went to so many lectures and learned much about whither drifts our educational system, literature in the Renaissance, characteristics of acids, the NRA as it successfully operates in England, the cosmic rays, and a lot of other things which we very quickly forgot.

We went to so many plays produced by University theater. And we went to so many plays at Cornell college. We went to so many band and orchestra concerts. And we went to so many piano recitals at Cornell college.

We met so many people. Some were nice . . . We read so many books, including novels, detective-fiction, a treatise on boy and girl tramps. We immediately forgot all the plots of all the novels. We renewed our acquaintance with Gertrude Stein and found her assumed autobiography very interesting, thereby joining the parade of soda clerks and stenographers who have . . .

We went on so many parties. (Editor's note: Remainder of this paragraph censored. For further details, see the author).

We predicted so many coming events . . . And uncovered so many very minor vices . . . We had so many little discussions in this column . . . And almost discovered which is the front and which the back door of Old Capitol . . . We made so many new friends and so many new and renewed enemies . . .

We had so many discussions on the weather, which was often very warm . . . We met two students on this cornfield campus who are destined for great things in the future . . . And we met one who might be, if . . .

And this could go on forever. But the major conclusion is that in spite of the fact that we didn't do much this summer, we somehow managed to soak in a lot of the Iowa atmosphere. . . And had a great time doing it . . .

A columnist's assistant jots down a note: "You may be interested in knowing that the parting used by students over in radio headquarters now is 'N.B.C.-n you.' Do you suppose there's some high powered radio propaganda behind the things."

Today's word for the campus dictionary:

Degree—academic awards, so called because they are graduated according to the amount of tuition paid.

Martha Mitchell, Student Here Last Year, Weds Shepard

Martha Mitchell of Mason City, student in the college of liberal arts last year, and Lynn Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shepard of Ft. Myers, Fla., were married Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell. The Rev. G. G. Parker of Manly, officiated.

Attendants for the couple were Actea Young of Des Moines, the bride's roommate last year, and Roy Shepard of Colfax, brother of the bridegroom.

A buffet supper was served to guests following the ceremony.

Before attending the University of Iowa, Mrs. Shepard graduated from Mason City junior college. Mr. Shepard is manager of Grassfield shoe store in Oelwein, where the couple will live.

Williams Writes On Soil Mechanics

A discussion by Dean Clement C. Williams of the college of engineering appeared in Proceedings, a publication of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

The article is entitled, "Earths and foundations progress report of special committee," and includes information relative to soil mechanics.

Cagney Denies "Isms"

Denying he gave the Communist movement in California financial support, James Cagney, above motion picture star, declared he was proud to call himself a "100 per cent American." Letters in which Cagney's name was mentioned were to be introduced in a criminal syndicalism trial in Sacramento, where the letters were seized at Communist headquarters. Cagney asserted he was "against all 'isms' except Americanism."

Nero Did Some Coin "Fiddling" Too, Chemical Analysis Shows

PRINCETON, N. J., (AP)—The chemistry of ancient coins reveals Nero as the first grand scale inflationist in history.

Nero didn't originate any methods not already known. But he applied the simplest of them on a scale that probably lasted longer and went over bigger than anything of the kind since. Modern economists would call his method debasement.

But Nero was so conservative in his work that the inflation he started lasted about 300 years. It paid for some Roman wars and imperial amours. In the end, historians rate it as one of the spectacular events leading to Rome's downfall. But Nero's part was not widely known.

German Gathers Data

Chemical tests and dates on the coins show his hand most clearly. These records were gathered by J. Hammer, a German, who combed the chemical world for them and published them in Zeitschrift Fur Numismatik years ago, in a volume now scarce.

Some recent work on the composition of silver coins from ancient Parthia conducted at the Princeton university laboratory by Earle R. Coley, assistant professor of chemistry, calls attention to Hammer's records.

Dionysius, the Greek tyrant, seems to have been the first inflationist recorded. He adulterated his coins. But as a rule the Greeks practiced "monetary rectitude."

Greeks Started Money

When Nero came on the scene in the first century A.D., coined money was only a few centuries old. The Greeks started it in Lydia; the Romans established coinage about B.C. 385. Early inflationists usually decreased the weight of their coins.

But not Nero. When he came in, the Roman silver coins, under Augustus, contained by modern chemical analysis 96 to 97 per cent pure silver. Nero melted them up and re-issued the coins with the silver content dropped to 92 per cent.

Not enough to make a noticeable change, but enough to issue many more coins, and these extra pieces belonged to Nero. Seldom has an economic experiment had a longer run, or a more complete finish.

Silver Finally Zero

History credits the emperors with finally running their silver content down to 2 per cent. But the modern test tubes show they went much farther. After Nero, Trajan dropped the silver to 85 per cent. In about A.D. 100 Commodus took it to 75. Copper then was the alloy mainly replacing the silver. By A.D. 256 the silver was down to 40 or 45 per cent.

After that rapidly came the final drop. Considerable lead was substituted for the silver. The percentage of precious metal went to 21, 17, 14 and to silver plate at 5.6 per cent.

Then to nothing. The chemical analysis shows finally less than 1 per cent, .38 per cent exactly. This may have been merely "impurity," that is silver the money makers did not know was there. At the last the coins had to be washed in silver for the sake of appearance.

That was the end of the great experiment. Aurelius improved the coins, and Diocletian reformed them to 94.3 per cent silver.

Mrs. Evers Wins Prize at Pinochle

Mrs. John Evers won first prize, and Mrs. John Novak, second, at the Jolly Pinochle club meeting yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Fred Dvorsky's home, 910 Kirkwood avenue.

Eight members attended the social gathering. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The club will meet again Sept. 4 at Mrs. Evers' home, 520 E. Church street.

Garden Department Invited to Luncheon

As a branch of the federated garden clubs of the state, the garden department of the Iowa City Woman's club has been invited to a club luncheon in the administration building at the state fair in Des Moines Friday at 1 p.m.

A flower show exhibiting contributions of gardeners will be held in connection with the luncheon and program. Iowa City garden club members wishing to make reservations for the luncheon may call Mrs. L. V. Dierdorff, 4675.

Feature Programs Scheduled For WSUI During September

Will Repeat Series Of Talks On Education

Three feature programs have been scheduled for station WSUI for September, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Pearl Bennett Broxam, program director of the station.

A series entitled "On the way to an education," inaugurated last year, will be repeated, with addresses by university staff members. Ossie Solem, head football coach and director of athletics, will broadcast a series of football talks for the layman every Wednesday at 8:30 p.m., and a series of daily football "snapshots" will be given by Jack Gurwell, J4 of Chariton, at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 to 21.

The "On the way to an education" series was suggested by Prof. Fred M. Pownall, director of university publications, and arranged by Jean Stout, J4 of Iowa City. The complete schedule is as follows:

Sept. 4—"Becoming a student at the University of Iowa," Charles H. Maruth, assistant university registrar.

Sept. 5—"University home life for women students," Adelaide Burge, dean of women.

Sept. 6—"University home life for men students," Robert E. Rienow, dean of men.

Sept. 7—"Earning your way at the university," Benjamin Robinson, manager of student employment service.

Sept. 10—"Extra-curricular activities for the students," Prof. Rufus H. Fitzgerald, chairman of the university social committee.

Sept. 11—"The fraternities, sororities, and the university," Russell Beeson, manager Fraternity and Sorority Business Service, Inc.

Sept. 12—"Activity point possibilities for the new student," Helen Reich, associate hostess of Iowa Union.

Sept. 13—"Athletics for all at the university," Coach Solem.

Sept. 13—"Religious influence at the university," Prof. William H. Morgan, adviser to campus religious organizations.

Kiwanis Club Sees Pictures of Park

Moving pictures of Lake Macbride park, taken and shown by Norwood Louis formed the Kiwanis club program at the Jefferson hotel yesterday noon.

Guests at the luncheon were W. H. Towner of Cedar Rapids, W. Otis Teeters, William Mohr of Cedar Rapids, Hal Warner, W. H. Gemmill, and W. G. Noth, all of Des Moines, Glen Derfinger of Kearney, Neb., and E. J. Ashbaugh of Oxford, Ohio.

Virginia Ball Honors New Jersey Guest

Mrs. Dwight Brown of Plainfield, N. J., who, with her husband and son, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nyle Jones, was honored at an informal tea Monday afternoon, given by Virginia Ball, 325 S. Summit street.

PERSONALS

Arriving today to visit at the F. D. Francis home, 529 E. College street, will be Mrs. N. E. Steele and sons, Hugh, Granville, and Charles, of Sioux Falls, S. D. They will attend Convocation tomorrow when Mr. Steele will receive his Ph.D. degree.

Mrs. I. J. Fuiks and daughter, Beth, 351 Beldon avenue, has returned from a seven week visit with Mrs. Fuiks' mother, Mrs. Nettie Meldrim of Sacramento, Cal. Returning to Iowa City to spend several weeks at the Fuiks home is is Mrs. Fuiks' niece, Margenette Meldrim of Monterey, Cal.

Fay and Anna Gay of Minneapolis, former Iowa City residents, are visiting friends here this week.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nyle Jones, 30 S. Governor street, are their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Brown and son, Dwight, Jr., of Plainfield, N. J., Mrs. Jones' sister, Ada Haldeman of Torrington, Wyo., and another son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Stickford of Monticello. The guests will leave this evening, Miss Haldeman for Chicago, where she will attend the Century of Progress exposition, and the Browns to Bloomfield to visit Mr. Brown's family.

Mrs. Elda Popoff, 406 Magowan avenue, is cruising on the Great Lakes, aboard the S. S. Juniata.

P. I. Hardwick, who was graduated from the University of Iowa college of engineering in 1930, visited here over the week end. The engineering graduate is now distributing engineer with the Detroit Edison company in Port Huron, Mich.

Lucile Feulling to Wed Paul Richmond

Lucile M. Feulling, University of Iowa graduate, and Paul C. Richmond, senior medical student, will be married Sept. 5 at 10 a.m. in St. Joseph's church in New Hampton, it was announced Sunday. The Rev. Thomas J. Dowling will officiate.

Miss Feulling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Feulling of New Hampton, attended Iowa State college at Ames before graduating from the university, from which she also received her master of science degree.

At the present time she is head dietitian in the state hospital at Clarinda. She is the daughter of the Democratic state chairman.

Mr. Richmond, son of Mrs. Mary B. Richmond of Riceville, will graduate from the college of medicine next year. He is a member of Alpha Kappa Kappa medical fraternity.

Wife Sold for $700

In jail at Jersey City, N. J., while authorities investigated the strange case whereby her husband "sold" her to another man for $700, Mrs. Hildegarde Rost is pictured above. The $700 was represented as the life savings of Paul Herman an engineer, while Mrs. Rost's husband, Richard, was said by police to have used the money to buy rare stamps. The two men also were held.

F. W. Palmer Elected President of Family

Francis W. Palmer, 505 Iowa avenue, was elected president of the Palmer-Chandler family, gathering at its sixth annual picnic Sunday in the Wellman city park. Mrs. Elizabeth Chandler Sunier of Iowa City was elected historian of the group.

Fifty-five members of the family from 11 towns were represented at the reunion. An invitation to attend the annual Chandler reunion near Philadelphia in 1935 was read by Mrs. Sunier.

Shambaugh Lectures On Dictatorship

Prof. Benj. F. Shambaugh, head of the political science department, will give a public lecture this morning at 9 o'clock in room 315 A-B Schaeffer hall. His subject will be "If the dictator comes."

A similar subject formed the basis of an address in the Baconian lecture series last winter by Professor Shambaugh. In it he considered the drift of European nations toward totalitarianism and the tendencies in America toward this form of government.

What the American dictator will do and how he will gain his power form part of Professor Shambaugh's discussion, based upon current events in the United States.

The lecture will be given during the regular class period and will be open to the public.

Florence Rohrbacher Honors Houseguests

Honoring her house guests, Jane and Joan Turley of Springfield, Ill., Florence Rohrbacher, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Rohrbacher, entertained at a party for 14 guests last night. The evening was spent playing bunco and dancing in the recreation room of the Rohrbacher home, 811 E. College street. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Guests included the honorees, Marilyn Leighton, Frankie Sample, Betty Jean Lynch, Richard Schenck of Des Moines, Duane Means, Keith and Kenneth Smith, Bob Yetter, and Raymond Tiffany.

BITS ABOUT SPORTS

Menagerie . . . Polish Up the Cups in Trophy Case . . . Riding the Little Donkeys . . . Football Season Is Rapidly Approaching

BY JACK GURWELL

WILDCATS and Gophers, with a Cyclone tossed in for good measure; Cornhuskers, Hoosiers and Buckeyes, with a dash of Boilermaker and Coyote, will add to the racial, zoological and color interest of the Hawkeye football schedule this fall. . . Thusly are nicknamed Iowa's opponents for the coming season. . . "Dutch" Fehring, famous Purdue athlete who will take up his new duties as head freshman football and basketball coach, has a brother, Ted, coming up for his junior year of competition with the Boilermaker squad and who bids fair to follow in Dutch's footsteps. . .

* * *

WHILE WANDERING among the University of Iowa athletic trophy cases the other day the thought came to me that a little silver polish and some elbow grease could be put to good use polishing the various cups and mugs and plaques. . . Then the words on the trophies could be more easily read by the curious. . . That the football season is rapidly approaching is quite evident. . . Saw a family touring the stadium last Sunday and from their conversation judged they were planning to attend the Homecoming game. . . Every day brings new "dope" material about various grid teams in these parts. . .

* * *

WONDER HOW A coach feels when, after losing his star players through graduation, he is tilted back in his chair dreaming of some husky boy who can kick like Everhardus of Michigan, pass like Purvis of Purdue, crash the line like Crayne and made all-American his junior year and a thunderous knock upon the door awakens him from his reverie and in strides a little gent, about 5 feet 2, who demands a football uniform in which to play football? . . . Probably what the shortstop thinks when he fumbles an easy grounder in the last of the ninth and the winning run scores. . .

* * *

IF MY MEMORY serves me well, I don't think any of the donkeys to be used by the boys who play in the game of donkey ball will name their mounts Pegasus. . . I have yet to see a donkey of the winged variety, although some I have seen have taken to the air upon occasions of unruly disposition and unseated their riders. . . Was once leaning against the ribs of a mule when it took a notion to kick at a fly which had become obnoxious. . . This little gesture of self-protection made me feel as if wings would have come in handy. . . George Wright, member of the original Cincinnati Red Stockings, first organized professional baseball team in America, is still living. He is 90 years old. . . .

* * *

PASSING UP mules for horses, the most popular song in 1924, as shown by phonograph sales and sheet music, was a ballad entitled "Horsey, Keep Your Tail Up." . . . This must have been popular in such horse racing towns as Louisville, Ky., New Orleans, Agua Caliente and others. . . It wouldn't be nice for a diamondball hurler to try "dusting off" tactics in the game next Monday night. . . You know, he might clout a donkey and get a horse shoe for good luck. . . Will the base runner be automatically out if his steed is hit by a batted ball? . . . The steed would probably head right out of the park with a frantic jockey astride and wishing he was elsewhere. . .

Plans Progress for Donkeyball Game at City Park Monday

Solem to Talk In September Radio Series

Four September radio broadcasts on the subject of football will be given from station WSUI of the University of Iowa by Coach Ossie Solem, Hawkeye head coach and director of athletics.

Coach Solem will appear before the microphone at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 5, 12, 19, and 26 to tell of rule changes, Big Ten prospects, and other facts about the 1934 season.

Although the Iowa mentor has given brief talks and has been interviewed frequently during radio programs, he never before has been scheduled for a series.

The broadcasts of Coach Solem will comprise the September section of the university's sports review program, a regular weekly feature throughout the academic year.

Tommy Goodwin Leads Metropolitan Amateur Golf Stars

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 21 (AP)—Tommy Goodwin, husky Monroe, N. J., youngster, dropped the only sub-par round of the day into the metropolitan district's qualifying test for the national amateur golf championship today, finished with a 36-hole total of 146 and led a group of 25 star shotmakers who will perform at Brookline, Mass., next month.

Vines, Heston Wallop Foe In Pro Title Play

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP)—Ellsworth Vines, paired with Paul Heston of Washington, D. C., opened their campaign for the national professional doubles tennis titles today by walloping Allen Wylie of Chicago, and Rudolph Noble of Forest Hills, L. I., in straight sets.

The tall Californian and his eastern partner completely dominated the match, and required little time to bat out a 6-0, 6-2, 6-1, victory. Vines' service had Wylie and Noble baffled, while Heston teamed so smoothly with the former amateur champion, that the outcome never was in doubt.

Edwin Faulkner of Philadelphia, and Ernest Kuhn of New York, also advanced to the second round, defeating William Triest of Philadelphia, and James Mitchell of Richmond, Va., 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. Triest and Mitchell put up a strong battle for two sets, but became erratic and were easily subdued.

Demons Lose, 11-4

DES MOINES, (AP) — Topeka pounded two Des Moines pitchers tonight to defeat the Demons 11 to 4.

Championship Frays Slated For Afternoon

Eve Gilbert, Ken Cline Favored to Repeat Singles Wins

By KERMIT BUNTROCK

Favorites advanced without an upset in the first day's play of Iowa City's third annual net tourney yesterday. Activity was centered in the men's singles division, where with the exception of one match, the semi-finalists were decided after two rounds of play.

Irvin Kieler, Charles Okerbloom, and John Van der Zee are already in the semi-final bracket and Ken Cline, defending champion, plays Sidney Miller this morning to decide the fourth man in this bracket.

Preliminaries This Morning

According to Leck Merritt, director of the tournament, an attempt will be made to get all preliminary matches in the three divisions played off this morning. This will leave the afternoon free for the championship battles.

Although all of the pre-tourney favorites came through as expected, two of them were extended to down their early round opponents in straight sets. After out-stroking Horace Redman 6-1 in the first set, John Van der Zee, University of Iowa player, was extended to win the second set at 7-5 after his redheaded opponent rallied effectively. Van der Zee won another straight set match when he defeated J. H. Sayler 6-2, 6-3 in the second round.

Stiff Opposition

Irvin Kieler, another seeded player, encountered stiff opposition from Don Chapman, runner-up for the city junior title, when Chapman rallied after losing the first set 6-2 to run the second set to 7-5 before Kieler pulled out. Chapman was obviously "on" his game as he made remarkable gets and placements. Kieler's speed in covering the court was a big factor in his triumph. Earlier in the day Kieler had downed Stanley Smith 6-0, 6-3. He will oppose the winner of the Cline-Miller tussle in a semi-final battle scheduled to be played this morning.

The other semi-final contest will find Van der Zee across the net from Charles Okerbloom, former star and captain at Ohio State. The odds favor Okerbloom despite the fact that he has played little tournament singles this summer. His play as part of the Cline-Okerbloom doubles combination, runners-up in the Mississippi Valley and Middles States tournaments, marks him as a favorite. However, Van der Zee, who possesses probably the prettiest style of any player in the tournament is expected to make a battle of the affair.

Eve Gilbert

The women's division finds Eve Gilbert, city champion for the last two years, favored to dominate the play. She drew a bye in the first round and plays the winner of the Romona Todd-Margaret Farrish match in the semi-finals this morning. In the other semi-final bracket, Mrs. George Buis will oppose Margaret Miller. As in the men's singles and doubles, an attempt will

Virginia Van Wie Rallies To Take Seven Stroke Lead In Women's Western Golf Play

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP)—Back on the Beverely country club course, where she learned the golf that gave her two national championships in succession, Virginia Van Wie of Chicago equalled par over 36 stubborn holes today to come from behind and take a seven-stroke lead in the women's western derby.

Rallies

Miss Van Wie trailed the first round leader, Lucile Robinson of Des Moines, Ia., yesterday by five shots with an 83, but today she came back with rounds of 76-82 to post a 54-hole total of 241 as Miss Robinson fell to a pair of 87's and landed in third place at the three-quarter mark. Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, former western champion, was in second position with successive rounds of 86-82-80—248. But her chances of catching Miss Van Wie over the final 18 holes tomorrow seemed remote.

As Miss Robinson and most of the other contenders fell victims of the yawning traps and numerous saplings lining the fairways, the national champion broke par by three blows in the morning with scores of 38 each way.

Putter Falls

In the afternoon, her putter failed her and she fell three strokes over par, but her score was easily good enough for a sizeable lead. Miss Van Wie was four over par for the 54 holes.

Mrs. Hill, off to a shaky start yesterday with an 86, recovered her form today to go into second place. The Kansas City golfing mother, too, had a fine chance to trim par only to fall victim of the numerous traps.

Miss Robinson, who defeated Miss Van Wie in the western finals last year, was steaming along under full sail until she reached the sixth hole of the morning round. She was even par to that point, but her ball seemed to fall into one trap after another from there on.

Trail Leaders

Rena Nelson, Chicago district champion, was in fourth place with scores of 82-87-85—254 with Patsy Berg, Minneapolis, fifth with 85-83-91—259.

'Schoolboy' Hurls Tigers To 8 to 4 Victory Over Red Sox

Wins 15th, One Within All-Time Record Of 16 Straight

BOSTON, Aug. 31 (AP)—Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe, Detroit's 22 year old hurler, today recorded his fifteenth straight victory by pitching the Tigers to an 8-4 win over the Red Sox.

19th of Season

The victory, his nineteenth of the season, brings him within one game of equalling the all-time American league record of consecutive wins now held jointly by Walter Johnson; "Smoky" Joe Wood and Lefty Grove.

The onrushing league leaders finished their series with the Sox with a three-one advantage having won three in a row after dropping the opener. Today's win stretched their lead to 5 1-2 games over the second-place Yankees who spent the afternoon losing to the Browns.

Allowed Nine Hits

The lanky youngster allowed the Sox but nine hits. Two of these were by Fred Ostermueller, the Red Sox starting pitcher, a double and a triple in the second and fifth respectively, which proved prominent factors in the Boston scoring.

Hawkeyes Point Plans Toward National Race

How all of the University of Iowa's cross country plans are pointed toward the national A.A.U. championship race here in November is shown by the official schedule released by Coach G. T. Bresnahan.

Since the national title race is over a 10,000-meter course, or about 6 1-4 miles, the Iowa team in its earlier meets and tryouts will work gradually up to that distance so that the runners may slowly attain maximum condition.

Beginning against Drake over a 1.9 mile course, the team will take on Carleton at 2.5 miles, Minnesota at 2.9 miles, and Wisconsin at 3.4 miles. Between Nov. 9 and 23, there will be time trials over 4, 5, and 6 mile distances.

Yankees Fall To Browns In 8-6 Triumph

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Browns salvaged the final game of the series of four today as they pounded Russel Van Atta and Danny MacFayden for enough runs to overcome the effects of Lou Gehrig's thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth homers of the season. The score was 8 to 6.

It was the only St. Louis victory of the season in the Yankee stadium and the fourth in 18 games against the Yanks. The defeat, coupled with Detroit's victory over Boston, put the Yankees 5½ games behind the Tigers.

Gehrig's two homers, one off Ed Wells and one off Jack Knott, accounted for five New York runs and put him one ahead of Jimmie Foxx in the major league race. Van Atta, making his first start in nearly two months, was driven out in the fourth when the Browns scored three times.

Proceeds To Local Relief, Charity Fund

Teams Chosen From Iowa City Service Organizations

By JACK GURWELL

For honor of their respective organizations, two Iowa City service clubs will do battle Monday night at City park for the donkeyball championship of our fair city.

Be it the Lions vs. the Kiwanis; the Junior Chamber of Commerce vs. the Rotary; or vice versa or otherwise, two teams chosen from two organizations will stage the exhibition of donkeymanship combined with baseball ability for edification of fans who turn out for the strange and different entertainment.

Proceeds to Charity

Under the auspices of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the game will be played with proceeds being turned over to charity. No admission will be charged but contributions of 10 and 25 cents will be asked at the gate.

Now let us look into the game. Trained donkeys, or burros, to be exact, will be the means of locomotion used by the outfield and by base runners. These burros have been especially trained in this sort of thing by eastern advocates of the sport and are quite capable of taking care of themselves. Yes, indeed.

Some of the problems facing the base runner would make a team manager get the jitters—unless he knew his burros. The batter, if he hits the ball, must then race to the vicinity of third base where the steeds are tethered, mount his burro, and ride—and ride—and ride. His object is first base, he to get there atop his mount before the ball.

Oh These Artists

A fit of temperament would not help the cause of the batting team, for while the burro and rider are meandering in the general direction of the first base the fielder, if the ball goes that far, may gallop up to the ball, dismount, retrieve the ball, remount, and hurl in the sphere to nip the batter. There is a special base provided, a sort of square-like object in which must rest some portion of the burro before the runner is safe.

The game will be for five innings and the hope that a few tallies have been hung up by the time the regulation contest is completed. In case of a tight game with the score tied, a few extra innings will be played.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce will provide eight burros for the game. Three will be with the team in the field and the remaining five for the team at bat. The animals are said to be of a very docile species. They also have their moments, a peculiar feature of their makeup which few people have been able to understand.

Idiosyncrasies

Some of the little idiosyncrasies include balking, a practice generally reserved for the pitcher, just before touching home plate; bull-headedness when it comes to the hitter trying to get the mount under way for first; stopping to graze between bases; and just plain cussedness in denying the ball player locomotion in tense situations.

Plans call for the choosing of one, and maybe both of the teams today. Then classes in the proper method of handling a burro will be conducted. A few hours of practice should suffice the average man. He should turn up at City park a horseman indeed. No telling, though, what he might turn out to be atop a burro.

Tony Canzoneri Said Ready To Resume Training

Cards Defeat Boston 6 to 2

Dizzy Dean in Uniform; Carleton Wins 4th Of Series

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21 (AP) — Tex Carleton outpitched Bobby Brown here today and the Cardinals took the fourth and odd game of a series with Boston, 6 to 2.

Randy Moore hit a home run for the visitors in the ninth inning, but none was on base and the homer ended the scoring.

The Red Birds' big inning was the second when a double, two singles, a walk and a sacrifice netted three scores. Durocher singled two of the three runs home.

Dizzy Dean was in uniform. It was his first appearance since settlement yesterday of differences between himself and the Cardinals over his failure to attend an exhibition game in Detroit.

Grimm Rushes Back to Cubs

Rumors Cause Manager to Drop Rest Plans; Wants Pennant

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP)—Disturbed by rumors that followed his sudden departure for St. Louis to recuperate for a few days, Manager Charlie Grimm rushed back to take command of the Chicago Cubs again today.

At the suggestion of Owner Philip K. Wrigley, and President William Walker of the Cubs, Grimm left Sunday night for St. Louis to rest a few days and seek the advice of his family physician about a leg injury that has bothered him for some time. Immediately, rumors flew about that he was being "eased out" as pilot.

"The rest did me good," Grimm said as he explained his sudden return, "but when I read about all those rumors and the gang in there fighting for the pennant, why, I just hopped a midnight train and came back."

Phils Pounce On Cubs By 6 to 1 Score

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP) — Phil Collins' six hit pitching beat the Cubs, 6 to 1, today and gave the Philadelphia Phillies their first victory in the eight games of this western trip. Only a pinch homer by Augie Galan in the eighth inning spoiled a shut out for Collins.

Filling the bases on three infield errors, the Phils gave Collins two runs in the sixth, with Johnny Moore's single driving in the pair, and then added three more off Lon Warneke, Cub starter, in the eighth on doubles by Bartell and Chiozza, a single by Camilli, a walk and a fourth Cub error.

Chiozza got three of the Phillies' seven hits, following two singles with his double.

Reds Drive Fitzsimmons From Mound in Five Innings; Defeat Giants in Series Final, 4 to 3

Winners Bunch Hits In 5th; Hold 5½ Lead Over Cubs

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21 (AP)—Fred Fitzsimmons found the Reds a different proposition today as he attempted to repeat Saturday's two-hit victory and Cincinnati drove him out in five innings to defeat the Giants 4 to 3 in the final game of the series.

Cubs Also Lose

As the second-place Cubs also lost today, the Giants finished their final visit to Redland 5 1-2 games in front and with a record of 13 victories in 18 games against the last-place club.

The Reds got only five hits off Fitzsimmons and one off his successor, Al Smith, but they bunched them with telling force in the fifth after an error by Travis Jackson let the world champions in for trouble.

Jackson Errs

Jackson let Chick Hafey's grounder go through his legs for the third Giant error. Harlin Pool flied out, but Adam Comorosky smashed a single and so did Ernie Lombardi, bringing in Hafey with the first Cincinnati run. After Pitcher Paul Derringer popped one up, Toney Piet singled to bring Comorosky home and Gordon Slade's two-bagger scored Lombardi and Piet. At this point Smith replaced Fitzsimmons and halted the rally. He gave only one hit, a double by Comorosky in the seventh and that was a fluke affair as Weintraub got his glove on the ball but couldn't hold it.

Perry, Wilde Turned Back In Doubles Tilt

Gene Mako-Don Budge Combination Stops English Greats

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21 (AP)—Tow-headed Gene Mako and his red-haired partner, slim Don Budge—a pair of persevering California youngsters with a lot of "what it takes" in tennis—turned back the ranking foreign threat in the national doubles championships today to furnish the tourney with its greatest upset.

The Pacific coast lads came from behind to crush the English greats, Fred Perry and Frank Wilde and brush into the quarter final round at the Germantown Cricket club.

Drop First Set

After dropping the first set, they rallied by splendid team work and "do-or-die" attitude toward every shot to conquer the foreigners, 3-6, 6-0, 7-5, 6-3.

In quest of their second national crown, Lester Stoefen, the California giant, and his speedy Chicago partner, George M. Lott, Jr., played all over Arthur Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., star, and Burtz Boulware, of Atlanta, to gain a straight love set victory in what is believed to be the record time of one half hour for a three-set, national competition match.

To Four Sets

Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, former champions and one-time Davis cup team mates, felt the pressure of play along with the others. Opposed to Jack Tidball, former intercollegiate titlist from California and Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., they too, were carried to four sets before they came through 6-1, 6-2, 8-10, 8-6 in a bristling two hour set-to.

The third-seeded pair, Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, America's Davis cup singles players in the competition just ended, nosed out the New York-Georgia duo, Amand Bruneau and William Reese, 6-0, 6-2, 6-8, 6-3, only after displaying all their net guile.

Foreign Pair

The surviving foreign pair, Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, and Roderick Menzel, Czechslovakia, took their victory in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4, over John McDiarmid, Ft. Worth, Tex., and Robert Bryan, Chattanooga, sixth-seeded, but the southerners gave the invaders plenty of trouble before bowing.

The men's doubles provided only half the day's competition as the national veterans' play got under way. All the seeded stars headed by Fred Baggs and William Rosenbaum of New York, came through handily.

Goodman, Rodney Bliss Qualify For Nat. Amateur Golf

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 21 (AP)—Two youngsters and a veteran qualified for the national amateur golf tourney in the 36 hole qualifying play at the Omaha Field club today. The youngsters were Johnny Goodman, former United States open champion, and Rodney Bliss. The veteran was Jack Hughes. All are of Omaha.

Goodman had a 74 in the morning and a 76 in the afternoon for 150. Bliss had a pair of 76's for 152. Hughes had an 80 in the morning but came back strong to record a 74 in the afternoon for a total of 154.

Jack Hoerner, Nebraska state champion, playing here in an attempt to qualify from the San Francisco district, carded 75-79 for 154.

Denmar Miller of Des Moines, was off his game and took 80 strikes in the morning play. He failed to rally in the afternoon and needed 84 strokes, giving him a total of 164 and placing him tenth in the field.

Ralph Reed of Lincoln, Neb., was fifth in the field with a total of 155. Reed took an 80 in the morning but braced in the afternoon and turned the course in 75.

The life of Marion Painter, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton H. Painter of Brownsville, Tex., was insured 20 minutes after her birth.

Indians Score 9 in Ninth To Nip A's 12-11

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21 (AP)—Six bases on balls, coupled with four hits and a boot by Pinky Higgins, enabled the Cleveland Indians to score nine runs in the ninth inning and wipe out an eight run lead to beat the Athletics 12 to 11 today.

The Athletics, who went into the ninth with a lead of 11 to 3, pounded Oral Hildebrand and Belve Bean for 18 hits, among them Pinky Higgins' twelfth home run of the season.

Illinois Baseball Coach A Victim Of Heart Attack

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Aug. 21 (AP)—Carl Lundgren, baseball coach and assistant athletic director at the University of Illinois, died suddenly tonight of a heart attack.

Lundgren, who formerly pitched for the Chicago Cubs, had been baseball coach at his alma mater since 1921. Later he became assistant to Athletic Director George Huff, in addition to handling the baseball squad. His Illini won the Western conference championship last spring. Before returning to Illinois, Lundgren coached at the University of Michigan for several seasons.

Explanation Of "Strange As It Seems"

What is perhaps the greatest institution of its kind in the world, the Smithsonian Institution, in Washington, was given to the United States by a man who was not an American, who was never in this country, who apparently had no close friends or relatives in the United States, and who, so far as can be determined, never even wrote to anyone who lived in this country.

The man was James Smithson, a famous mineralogist of England. He was born in 1765 and died in 1829. It is a mystery why he gave his fortune to the United States instead of to his own country. It has been explained by some who say that Smithson was bitter against England because his father, a titled Englishman, never recognized him. This is borne out to some extent by Smithson's own declaration, "My name shall live in the memory of man when the titles of the Northumberlands and the Percies are extinct and forgotten."

The words were almost prophetic, for in less than 100 years since its establishment, the Smithsonian Institution has grown to be a world famous institution devoted to the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men" as directed in the will of Smithson.

It conducts research into various fields, and publishes findings of investigations. The Smithsonian Institution's investigations into storm conditions led to the establishment of the Weather Bureau.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP)—Winfield Day of Chicago and Notre Dame, and Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., turned in cards of 150, six over par for the Oak Park Country club course today to lead the 16 qualifiers from the Chicago district for the national amateur golf championship tournament.

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

SYNOPSIS

Seifert Vail, the most unpopular patient at exclusive Sherwood Forest Sanatorium, is murdered. Two wounds are found on the body; one apparently from a sharp weapon and the other, from a dull, rusty instrument. Dr. John Calvert and Mark Hillyer, playright and patient, agree the wounds could have been caused by a pair of scissors. Felipa, the maid, discovered the body when she went into Vail's room to turn off the phonograph. Vail, a former opera singer, broken-hearted over the death of his wife, had a habit of repeatedly playing the record "Waiting For You," sung by himself. Dr. Calvert claims Vail had been dead an hour before the phonograph started playing. Vail shared a cottage with Willis Clendening, Milton Cross and James Ruxton. Ruxton's nephew, Loren, and Dr. Calvert are rivals for the affections of Sue Faraday, Mark's nurse. Ruxton had changed rooms with Vail the day before the crime because the former's room had a private entrance and Vail expected a visitor he wanted to receive secretly. A letter the victim received from New York is missing. Sheriff Finn asks Felipa how she knew Vail had been murdered when he had been covered and the wounds were not visible. She appears to be hiding something and, next morning, disappears. Clendening claims he saw a piece of paper under the clock on Felipa's table, but no trace can be found of it. Loren Ruxton claims he was out with Sue at the time of the tragedy and took a snapshot of Lakeside Cottage a little after two o'clock, yet Sue had not left the hospital until five minutes to three. Mark's theory regarding the note in Felipa's room is that Dr. Caldwell, having gone there alone, may have found the note but denied seeing it.

CHAPTER XV

The telephone on his bedside table rang.

"Hello," Mark said. "Yes, he's here. Sure send him right in."

He turned to me with a satisfied smile. "Guess who's about to honor us with a visit! Dave Finn, the bungling bloodhound of the law, the slipshod sheriff in person."

"Does he want to see me?"

Mark nodded. "Wants to sweat you about the mysterious doings this morning, I suppose." He chuckled. "Am I all a-quiver with anticipation?"

Sue came in at that moment, and she looked very distressed. She did not even try to smile at us. She avoided looking at Mark as she went by toward the porch.

"Sweetheart," Mark said. She stopped and turned, but still she would not look at him. "Don't do it," he said sharply.

She drew in her breath sharply and color spread slowly in her throat and cheeks.

"Listen," Mark said. "I've only got a minute before the sheriff comes. If Loren asked you to back him up, don't do it. Don't get yourself in trouble—and when you see Loren, tell him not to be a fool and try to lie to Finn. Get it?"

She nodded, still staring at him, surprised and a little frightened by his clairvoyance

"There's nothing to worry about," Mark said, smiling reassuringly. "Loren lost his head, that's all. I'm not going to tell on him, but don't let him know I'm in on it."

"I won't," she said, and she smiled on him, gratefully, dazzlingly. "I've already told him to tell the sheriff the truth, but please tell me how you knew he was—telling a lie."

"Mañana," said Mark. "The old hidalgo's about to receive a visitor now."

The sheriff's heavy footsteps had already announced him. He entered at Mark's command.

"Well, Mr. Finn," Mark said, smiling and holding out his hand. "I'm awfully glad to meet you. I'm Mark Hillyer. This is Miss Faraday, my nurse. You know Mr. Fowler, of course. Please sit down."

"Why, thanks, Mr. Hillyer. I'm glad to know you," Finn said.

He sat down heavily in one of Mark's chairs, pulled his handkerchief from his pocket and began to mop his forehead.

"Another scorcher," he said. "It ain't often we get three hot days like this hand running."

He put his handkerchief in his pocket and began to pull his mustache.

"It's rotten weather for work like yours," Mark said sympathetically.

"It sure is, and what a case, Mr. Hillyer! You know, I wanted to hold that girl as a material witness last night, but—"

Mark nodded. "I know. You didn't want to act too hastily. No one can blame you."

Finn sighed. "It's just a bad break, Mr. Hillyer."

"Did you want to see me, Mr. Finn?" I asked.

"Why, yes," he said. "I understand you was at the cottage this morning. I'd like you to tell me just what happened."

I repeated my story, and while I was talking, Sue rose quietly and went out on the porch. When I had finished, the sheriff nodded and said, "That checks, all right." He shook his head and sighed deeply.

"May I make a suggestion, Mr. Finn?" Mark required.

The sheriff looked up hopefully. Obviously, he would welcome any advice that might lead him out of his dilemma.

"Sure," he said.

"I understand you've established the fact that Felipa didn't take the train from the village." The sheriff nodded. "You know that she's a Mexican, and that she was saving money to return to Mexico?"

"Yes, I know that."

"Have you inquired whether she kept her savings on deposit with the business office?"

"She didn't have a cent there but a week's wages due her."

"Then she must have had her money in the bank in the village," Mark said. "Why don't you see if she closed her account there recently?"

"Say, that's a good idea!" Finn exclaimed. He sat thinking for a minute and then said, "If she did, it looks suspicious, don't it? Looks like she planned to make a quick getaway."

"Yes, but I think you'll find her money is still there. I believe she ran away on the spur of the moment, with probably no more money than she needed to get to New York. If she did, and she tries to get her money out of the bank, you can find her. I don't see how she can get far without her savings."

"That's right, Mr. Hillyer. You got a good mind on you, if you don't mind my sayin' so."

"I love it," Mark answered, grinning. "And now let me get another idea off my mind. When Felipa ran away, she very probably went along that path through the woods, beside the lake. That leads to the county road to Mount Hollins, and it's not much further from there than it is to Cold Valley. She may have caught the train there. Why don't you look along that path?"

"Sweetheart," Mark said. Sue stopped and turned. "Don't do it," he said sharply.

"Say, I think I'll make you a deputy!" Finn said. "Lord knows you're more of a help than the two fools I brought with me."

Mark did not answer. He had suddenly become very grave. He sat frowning at the foot of his bed. Finn stood up, but as he was about to leave, Mark held up his hand.

"Have you found anything to indicate that Felipa might have left that note Clendening said he saw in her room?" he asked.

"Well," Finn said, "somebody here in the sanatorium sent her a note last night."

Mark sat up. "Really? Have you been able to trace it?"

"No, darn it! There's a box in the lobby for letters from one part of the sanatorium to another. Somebody dropped it in there last night, and a bellboy took it down to the cottage."

"Did he recognize the writing on it?"

"It wasn't writing, her name was printed out in pencil. I figure that was what Clendening saw."

"Lord," said Mark. "That's bad!"

The sheriff caught the contagion of fear from Mark's voice. He demanded sharply, "What do you mean, it's bad?" and he sounded alarmed. I braced myself mentally for a shock. It seemed certain that Mark was thinking of Dr. Calvert's connection with that vanished note, and was going to speak of it.

'New Deal' Party to Open Demo Campaign Tomorrow

Young Democrat Clubs Of Six Counties To Be Here

Iowa Democrats will open their fall campaign here tomorrow night as party members from six nearby counties gather for a "New Deal" rally and dance in the American Legion Community building.

The party, given by Young Democrats clubs, will be open to all persons who wish to attend, according to C. A. Boyle, local chairman. Ed Dunn of Mason City, will give the principal address, followed by dancing to music by the Rhythm Rascals, a nine-piece orchestra from Washington, Ia., and refreshments.

Doors of the building will open at 7:30 p.m., and the program is to start at 8 p.m.

Prominent guests expected to attend are Congressman Edward Eicher, Senator Louis Murphy, Gov. Clyde Herring, Atty. Gen. Edward L. O'Connor, Mrs. Alex Miller, secretary of state, Leo Wegman, state treasurer, C. W. Storms, state auditor, Ray Baxter, Iowa's national Young Democratic committeeman, and candidates for county positions.

Commission May Approve Lease

DES MOINES, Aug. 21 (AP)—The state liquor control commission is expected to approve today a lease for a store building at Valley Junction. The store may be ready for sale of liquor by Sept. 10, commission officers said.

AROUND THE TOWN with John Pryor

Busy

Employes in the county treasurer's office have been busy for the last several days preparing tax statements for mailing to thousands of Johnson county residents.

Please Don't

People are apparently becoming increasingly modest—or something—according to the marriage license book in the clerk's ofice here. About every fifth application is marked, in pencil, "Please publish ages as being legal." Some applicants make pretty designs around the messages. But the effort is wasted on us, for The Daily Iowan doesn't print ages in marriage stories unless there is something very odd about them.

Former Resident Here Dies in Fire

Clede L. McGinnis, 29 of Aurora, Ill., a graduate of St. Patrick's high school and former resident here, was killed in an Idaho forest fire recently while, as a CCC member, he was battling the flames.

Word of his death in the Selway national forest was received here yesterday. He is survived by his widow.

Non-Stop Car Is Viewed By Local Persons

Local automobile and oil men had an opportunity yesterday to see the car which recently ran from coast to coast without the engine stopping, without a radiator, and without water in its cooling system.

The car, which is a stock Plymouth PB, exhibited by the Simmons Motor company, Iowa City Plymouth dealer, is fitted with instruments which record the high temperatures of various parts of the engine so that observers may see for themselves the heat generated under such conditions.

This Plymouth car is reported by Orville Simmons to have to its credit a run of 3,700 miles from coast to coast without the motor stopping; 10 hours continuous running in Death Valley followed by 1,000 miles in second gear up Mt. Whitney and in and out of Death Valley, without radiator or water. After 2,500 hours of "still" running and 65,000 miles on the highways this car shows little wear and still performs in a very satisfactory manner, according to Mr. Simmons.

The exhibition is sponsored by the Socony-Vacuum Oil corporation which recently sponsored the transcontinental "economy run" of the DeSoto, and whose produce, "Mobiloil" will hereafter be handled in Iowa City by the Capitol Oil company. The fact that Mobiloil has been developed to the point where it will protect a motor under the trying tests of this "torture" car indicates what automotive engineers may have to their credit in the future.

Dr. H. J. Burgstahler, Cornell College Head, Injured in Accident

SIOUX CITY, Aug. 21 (AP)—Dr. H. J. Burgstahler, president of Cornell college at Mt. Vernon, Mrs. Burgstahler and their daughter, Faith, were injured Tuesday afternoon in an automobile accident near Lyons, Neb., and were brought to Methodist hospital here for treatment.

It was reported at the hospital that none had suffered serious injuries. Dr. Burgstahler's right wrist was cut badly and he was bruised considerably. Mrs. Burgstahler was severely bruised and the daughter was less seriously hurt.

Miss Burgstahler was driving the car at the time. The car was said to have swerved in loose gravel and plunged into a ditch.

Local Packers Will Kill 25 Cattle Daily

The Iowa City Packing company is expected to slaughter 25 cattle, bought in drought areas by the federal government, daily, according to an Associated Press report last night.

Although all other Iowa concerns handling these cattle will remove the meat from the bones, preparatory to freezing or canning, the local plant will only halve and chill the meat. A Muscatine plant will bone the meat from Iowa City.

The herd of fur seals at the Pribiloff islands, Alaska, which is under supervision of the bureau of fisheries, numbers 1,400,000 and is increasing at the rate of 8 per cent each year.

Council Bluffs Raid, Third in Two Days, Seizes $6,000 Liquor

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 21 (AP)—In the third raid in two days, Iowa oficials today seized $6,000 worth of liquor at the Hammond Liquor company storehouse here today and placed the bottled goods under seal. Yesterday Iowa state agents had seized liquor in two other warehouses, some belonging to the Globe Distributing company and the rest to the Old Time Liquor company.

Today's raid was led by Leslie Francis, counsel for the Iowa liquor commission, and Sheriff Joe Perry. The raid, he said, was based on a charge that the Hammond company had made sales in Iowa contrary to its permit. Yesterday's raids were based on the same charge.

Mellon Adds to American Art

Announcement that Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, paid Soviet Russia authorities $1,500,000 for the Raphael "Alba Madonna" recalls that America houses some of the finest private art collections in the entire world. At the turn of the century, America's capitalists sent a golden flood to Europe in exchange for whole cargos of old masters. Joseph E. Widener, Belmont race track czar, possesses, according to eminent critics, the most harmonious private art collection in the country, worth many millions. A Philadelphia suburb neighbor, Dr. Albert C. Barnes, has the seond largest collection of modern paintings in the world. With the death of the elder J. P. Morgan, the internationally famous collection of canvases was dispersed. Most of the Morgan treasures now consist of priceless books and manuscripts in the famous Morgan library.

PHILADELPHIA (I.I.N.) — Cable dispatches that Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the U. S. treasury spent $1,500,000 to buy a Raphael painting, the "Alba Madonna" from the Soviet government, recalls that this country houses some of the finest private art collections in existence.

Since the turn of the century, America's capitalists have turned their surplus wealth and leisure into the gathering of as many old masterpieces as their pocketbooks could stand or were offered in the world art marts by impoverished aristocrats.

Stewart and Peale

For years, Mellon has quietly interested himself in Gainsboroughs and Chinese pottery. His collection of early American portraiture ranks among the most important, including works by Gilbert Stuart, who painted George Washington a number of times, and Rembrant Peale. From his great mansion in Pittsburgh, where the Mellon dynasty stands like a colossus over the steel valley's enterprises, millions of dollars have flowed to the corners of the world to bring the Mellon collection its distinction.

The House of Morgan has earned praise from internationally famous art critics, though the famous collection of paintings which the late elder J. P. gathered together and had housed in a special wing of the N. Y. Metropolitan museum, was broken up by the younger Morgan who is said to have needed ready cash after his father died. At present, the Morgan art treasures housed in the world famous library consist mostly of invaluable books and first editions.

The magnificent galleries of the late Henry Frick, Pittsburgh coke king, were bequeathed to the public by his widow.

The collection regarded by discerning critics as by far the greatest in private hands is the famous Widener collection, housed in the eighteenth century Georgian mansion, Lynnewood Hall, near Philadelphia.

Here Joseph E. Widener, head man of Belmont racing circles, and heir to the Widener utility millions, has brought together 14 Rembrandts, three Titians, two El Grecos, Van Dycks, a Bellini, besides a Raphael Madonna, which is said to be one of the few genuine Raphaels in the country. Behind the great bronze doors of the house also are to be found, a matchless selection of Cellini's jewelry, a world famous collection of Chinese porcelain, Donatello sculpture, Shakespeare first folios and other virtually priceless treasures.

The Wideners have seen their investments in art increase by a thousandfold in value. In Lynnewood, each object of art is arranged to harmonize with the room and its furnishings.

Fine Modern Works

In Merion, another Philadelphia suburb, dwells Dr. Albert C. Barnes, who became a millionaire before 30 by discovering a medicine to safeguard the eyes of new born babies. His limestone palace holds the finest collection of modern paintings in the world except that in Moscow.

Examples of the recent French schools whose paintings went begging before they were recognized as masters, hang on the long walls of the Barnes foundation. Renoirs, Cezannes, Picassos, Matisses are there in numbers, along with many works of the classical painters.

So absorbed in art Dr. Barnes has become, that he frequently lectures, and has written a book on art appreciation.

STRAND CONFECTIONERY

Features Special "Jumbo" Ice Cream Cones; Novel Method Used in Filling Cones.

When you come in to the Strand Confectionery, at 131 E. College street and ask for a "jumbo" ice cream cone, you get just what you ask for—a jumbo sized cone packed with super-creamed ice cream.

The Strand Confectionery started serving the "Jumbo" cone early this season and it has continued to increase in popularity as the summer months went along.

A novelty means of filling the cones is found at this place of business. Instead of handling the bulk ice cream with a disher and filling the cone, the ice cream is made in specially cone-shaped moulds which fit right into the cones when customers call for them.

The contents of the super-creamed ice cream are first measured carefully and then mixed in the super-creamed process. The cream is then poured into deep paper covered cone-shaped moulds and frozen hard in modern electric refrigerators. As customers call for the "Jumbo" cones, the thin paper is removed from the ice cream and it is dropped into the cone itself.

These "Jumbo" ice cream cones contain about two ordinary cone dippers of ice cream. Strawberry, chocolate, vanilla and a variety of special flavors are kept on hand for customers' convenience. The cones themselves are kept crisp and fresh until ready for use.

In spite of the cooler weather during the last few days, the demand for super-creamed "Jumbo" ice cream cones continues to hold up well. A great many persons particularly like to come into the Strand Confectionary during the middle of the afternoon about the time that the usual afternoon letdown comes along and refresh themselves with a big "Jumbo" cone.

VOGUE BEAUTY SHOP

Well Qualified With Latest Equipment and Trained Assistants to Give Quality Beauty Work.

Modern, attractive, and individualistic hair arrangements for women and girls are a specialty of Mrs. Leota Shalla, proprietress of the Vogue Beauty shop, 107 S. Clinton street.

Not only are Mrs. Shalla and her assistant trained in beauty work, but the shop has the latest equipment. Mrs. Shalla is particularly known for her permanent waving.

The most important thing in beauty work, she says, is painstaking care and the proper notice of details. Unless proper caution is taken, a permanent wave, for example, might ruin the hair instead of beautifying it. For this reason, clients of the shop are asked to make appointments for permanents, so that ample time may be taken to insure quality workmanship.

Besides permanent waving, Mrs. Shalla handles finger waving, shampooing, facial treatments, and manicuring from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

The shop offers a special line of cosmetics, the Paradise, although clients may choose from other lines also on display.

Located at 107 S. Clinton street about a year ago, the shop is attractively decorated in pale green and ivory, and contains six booths. Mrs. Shalla has been doing beauty work in Iowa City for more than four years.

The shop has both direct and indirect lighting, and there are mirrors placed so that clients may easily see what is "going on."

If you are planning a vacation, Mrs. Shalla suggests, think about your hair. And, if it needs waving, she is ready to fill your need promptly and satisfactorily.
