THE VIDETTE-REPORTER,

Iowa City, Iowa.

MONMOUTH College had her home contest last week. The successful one of the nine contestants was Mr. Graunahan. subject "A Nation Without a Nationality," referring of course to the Jew. This is the preliminary for next years State contests, giving ample opportunity to improve the prize oration or even to substitute another.

THE Iowa Wesleyan University, located at Mt. Pleasant, proposes to be abreast of the times. It has just established a college journal, the Iowa Wesleyan, a monthly magazine devoted to education in general, and the J. W. U. in particular. We congratulate the editor upon the success of the first issue. The name of Mr. J. E. Newson, of State oratorical fame appears as editor in chief.

Few people realize the extent of the plans upon which Senator Stanford founded what is destined to be California's great University. The endowment is $20,000,000. Compare this with Harvard's $4,803,938, John Hopkins $3,437,000, Columbia $5,866,090, Amherst $1,000,000, Cornell $2,267,561. It is the purpose of Mr. Stanford to make this institution equal to the best in the world. If money will do it, he is certainly placing it on the road to success.

Some of our exchanges are growing notably careless; for instance the Monmouth Collegian, of March 9th, says: "The oratorical contest for the State of Iowa took place at Cedar Rapids, the 4th of this month." Just a month behind. Also a number of college journals are advertising Senator Bayard as Commencement orator for the University of Kansas, for next June. This is news to Kansas people. Perhaps the mistake arises from the fact that he did deliver the address last June.

THE largest class in the history of the University has given its sanction in favor of class day exercises. At a class meeting Monday noon it was adopted, without dissenting voice, as the sentiment of '86 that we have a class day programme. In accordance with this spirit a committee was appointed to arrange an order of exercises and report it for the ratification of the class. This prompt action speaks favorably. It is to be hoped that the good feeling existing at present will continue and that nothing shall be allowed to interfere with the success of class day, '86.

IF Iowa colleges have any ambition to stand high in the Inter State oratorical contests, they should place themselves on a fair competing basis with other institutions and other States. There is not, as a rule, sufficient time and attention given to home contests and the time between the local and State contest is so short that no perceptible improvement in delivery can be made and, as was the case in our last contest, no change could be made in the successful oration for lack of time. Illinois holds her contest early in the Fall and her orator has more than six months in which to perfect his oration and correct defects in delivery.

THE University of Kansas in its efforts to head the times, has, to our mind, overreached itself. Their commencement speakers are all to be chosen by contest. Scholarship counts for naught. A short race of a few weeks is to determine who shall appear as representatives of the class. Naturally enough the change has raised a howl among the students of that institution. Nature frequently endows very poor students with qualities which bring success in oratorical contests, while good and faithful students seldom extensively cultivate the graces of oratory. We are not informed whether these places thus given are to be considered as commencement honors.

PRESIDENT PICKARD called the Senior class together Monday noon and announced a change in the manner of selecting commencement speakers. As before, ten will appear on class standing, but the remaining five will, this year, be selected by a contest in which all are at liberty to enter. The orations handed in will be graded by a committee on thought, style and delivery and the five receiving highest marks shall fill the five places heretofore filled by "general ability students." The selection of this five has always been a burden to the Faculty and, to speak candidly, has also been a source of dissatisfaction in the class. Genius now may through itself demand recognition.

THE Iowa City Press takes exceptions to our statement that the citizens of Iowa City, both native and of foreign birth, support the University. Its argument would therefore seem to be, that they oppose it. How patriotic this is, in view of the recent attacks upon the city, we will leave it to explain. The Press, however, knows well enough that the article referred to made no use of the words "Bohemian" or despised foreigner." nor did it attack Mr. Letovsky for any other reasons than his refusal to endorse the University. Yet by misstatements and skillful distribution of quotation marks, it attempts to throw these charges upon us, and, by implication, at least, accuses us of hostility to the foreign population of this city. The Press has been supposed to be a friend of the University, but it sinks to little business when, to gain favor with certain politicians who control the city or county printing, and with some of its subscribers, who do not very heartily endorse it, it makes the great show of championing their cause against an attack which was never made upon them. It is far more unfair than the Iowa City Post, whose position with its constituents is more secure, and which, therefore, did not have to purposely misunderstand us, in order to assure its readers of its zeal.

ALL of us have been disgusted and provoked, while perusing some interesting historical account, at running upon the archaic forms of the latter day disciples of realistic spelling. The March issue of the Library Magazine contains an article, "A Pedantic Nuisance," by Frederick Harrison, reprinted from the Nineteenth Century, which deals with this subject as one likes to see it treated.

Some forty years ago the Greek historian Grote inaugurated the modern mania for archaic forms by an attempt to supplant the old Roman spelling of Greek names, by a nearer approach to their original vocabulary, and his history tells us of Themistokles and Kleon, and Korkyra, which look to us like strange and foreign words. But archaism, or the desire to re-set the old and familiar names of history, into the spelling of the times in which the men themselves existed, found little favor until the Old English school of historians under the guidance of Professor Freeman, introduced the present furor for rusticity. The devotees of this particular school, hold that all historical names should be spelled as they were spelled by the contemporaries of the persons who bear the names, that Alfred should be Aelfred, Ethelbert, Aethelberht, Confucius, Kung-Foo-tsze, and so on, in all the languages. The familiar friends of literature are thus given names, that most people can't pronounce, and our old and dear idols, are chipped to rude forms which we can hardly recognize through our falling tears. Mr. Frederick Harrison has said some foolish things in his literary life, but this time, he has made a hit, a palpable hit. He points out that the Greek of Grote, destroys that harmonious filiation of the Greek and Roman literature which made them so easy to incorporate into the literature of Europe, while it, also, snatches from our view the old heroes who fought and bled in our school-books and for whom, as they were, we had a holy reverence. For who could admire Odusseus, or believe Thukydidies, or more correctly Thoukudides! To spell the familiar names of English history in the so-called "Old-English" manner, with diphthongs and gutturals, may look learned and indicate deep research, but it is not common sense. It is inexcusable because these names, as they now stand, have come to stand for facts in history, and to distort them by peculiar spelling, shocks not only our sentiment and our sensibilities but our sense of truth. The actual spelling of the olden times can not be clearly established and the attempt to approach it by roughening the language, to ordinary people would seem to be mere affectation. Even the high authority of Professor Freeman can not reconcile us to it.

To be consistent the archaists must take up every language, and passing from Greek and English to the Hebrew, we shall have not only Sokrates and Eadward, but Mosheb, Shelemoh, and Yeshayahu, instead of Moses, Solomon, and Isaiah. If this sort of spelling should come into general use, the education of the masses would be retarded, for most people can neither pronounce nor remember, the barbarities of the new orthography. It is not only annoying in reading, but this new fashion has crept into indices, book-lists, and reference-books, so that much time is lost by the searcher, in pursuing old subjects under new names. The notion has spread to art also, and our intimate Titian must needs be listed a Vecellio. The craze is popular at present but it cannot last. The old names are too well established in our hearts and memories, and the English language is derived from too many sources to be resolved into its original elements, and be made a discordant polyglot. Mr. Harrison keenly describes this peculiar orthography when he says, "It recalls the famous lines of our youth:—Trumpeter unus erat, coatum qui scarlet habebat."

The faculty of Political Science of Columbia College has arranged for the publication of a Political Science Quarterly which is to be devoted to history, economics and jurisprudence.

For the past five years the average yearly appropriations made by legislatures of several states for the benefit of state universities has been as follows: Michigan, $94,000; Wisconsin, $99,000; Nebraska, $82,000; Iowa, $43,000; Minnesota, $59,000; Ohio, $13,000.

There is just the difference between the two degrees of praise and flattery, that, whereas the former heartens up to brave and ever braver endeavour, the latter checks self-culture and destroys future progress by making one believe in attainment. According to the flatterer, the goal has been won and the great plateau of perfection reached; there are no more dreary distances to traverse, no more rugged mountain sides to climb. All that is needed is to enjoy what one has, and be grateful and glad for what one is.

The special programme of the Athenians was carried out last Friday evening before the largest audience that has attended the society for some time. The exercises were as follows: Music, Academy band. Salutatory oration in French, Julien Monnet. German declamation, Cora Eggart. Debate: Resolved that foreign immigration should be restricted; Aff.—W. J. Clair, Lee Croddy; Neg.—C. A. Lichty, Geo. Campbell. German duet, Misses Kile and Rath. Bohemian declamation, Chas. Tuerchek. French lecture, E. M. Marchael. Valedictory oration in Welch, T. P. Jenkins.

The Welsh and Bohemian speakers made a very fine appearance, though their words were probably unintelligible to the greater part of those present. The exercises in French and German could be better appreciated, and, particularly the German, were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Meek attended a party in Davenport Tuesday evening.
Bacon is entertaining his friend Mr. Hall of, New York.
Salvini played at Burlington last night. Oh that we had been there!
President Pickard went to Des Moines Tuesday, returning Thursday evening.
We have Brode Davis "on our list." He has been sick the greater part of the week.
"Major" Anderson was out of school two or three days this week on account of sickness.
E. R. Meek went to Des Moines last night, in response to a telegram from his brother.
Grimm has been the victim of a very severe cold all week, but expects to join his classes again Monday.
Miss Clara E. Hinman will hereafter read the VIDETTE in her southern home, at St. Augustine, Florida.
The Chorus Class met again Tuesday night and commenced work upon the new chorus, Farmer's Mass.
Miss Ankeny, of Des Moines, visited, during the week, with her niece, Miss Rose Ankeny and Prof. Susan Smith.

Tickets for M. B. Curtis in "Spot Cash" will be put on sale at Fink's store, Tuesday morning. No reserved seats in gallery.

The doctrine of "Baptism," examined and defended, from a Biblical standpoint, at the Unitarian church next Sunday morning.

C. E. Mills was quite sick with a severe cold the first part of the week, and went to Cedar Rapids yesterday to try a few days of home treatment.

Our business manager went to Burlington yesterday afternoon to "take in" Salvini. He returned this morning, reporting a splendid entertainment.

Jaques Bloom is in New York laying in stock a heavy bill of goods. Their extensive business enables them to buy in large quantities and get a good reduction in prices.

Professor.—What was the experience of the states when they found themselves out of debt? Mr. R. (who has evidently been there—confidently.)—They felt relieved.

Sabin's health became so badly demoralized during the latter part of last week that he determined to seek relief at his home in Clinton. He returned Wednesday evening, fully restored.

Miss Nellie French, an accomplished musician from Davenport, formerly a pupil of Marie Congdon, of this city, favored the Societies with some splendid music last night. The encores were well deserved.

The Athletic Association is in training for a public exhibition to be given during the first of next term. They will be assisted by the University Band. This will be the first exhibition of this nature ever given by the University.

Military Professor (reading lecture on Bull Run)—Soldiers and citizens fled precipitately toward Washington, some not stopping until they reached New York City. They had struck for the green graves of their sires, and now they were striking for their homes.

The Seniors at their meeting yesterday afternoon, proceeded at once to the election of class officers, with the following result, Pres. R. A. Smith; Vice Pres. Lillian Lewis; Sec. O. R. Young; Tres. H. M. Prouty; Sergeant-at-arms, N. C. Young.

"The Teachers Manual of School Exercises," by M. F. Sturges, is the title of a book now being published by the Art Publishing Company, of Des Moines. The introduction is by President Pickard. The work is now in press and will be issued in April or May.

The next attraction following M. B. Curtis, in "Spot Cash," will be "The Silver King," with Mr. F. C. Bangs and a great New York company, and the original Wallack Theatre scenery. The company is the same that appeared here last season, and our theatre goers may expect a rare treat.

P. B. Durley, Business Manager of the Northwestern Journal of Education, looked in on the University this week while attending to business interests of his paper. This paper is one that the S. U. I. may well take an interest in, for its editress, Miss Ella A. Hamilton, is a graduate of this institution, and Profs. Eggert, Fellows and Currier have all contributed to its pages this year.

An unusually large audience filled the Opera House Saturday night to listen to the "Operetta Little Bo Peep," and "Cantata, the Grasshopper." The entertainment, under charge of Miss Marie Congdon, was given for the benefit of the "Silent Ministry." The Operetta was finely rendered; but the Grasshopper took the house. The chorus composed of one hundred and twenty-five children pleased the audience as much perhaps as anything on the program. The whole reflects great credit upon Miss Congdon, for her untiring efforts in training the different parts, and the size of the audience, establishes the fact that Iowa City people are interested in the good work being done by the "Silent Ministry."

The concert Wednesday evening was one of the most enjoyable entertainments of the kind that Iowa City has seen for some time. Ida Mae Pryce is well known here, and never fails to please. Miss Merrill has a full, rich, smooth contralto voice, and articulates every word with faultless accuracy. The audience expected her to display the remarkable compass of her voice, and were somewhat disappointed that she did not do so, but were so well pleased with her singing that they could hardly criticize the omission of that part. Miss Cope is certainly a very fine recitationist, excellent, perhaps, in the humorous, "Babys Soliloquy" was especially fine. With Miss Cox, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clark, of our own town, who all did splendidly of course, and Mrs. Pryce formerly of this place, we almost imagined it a home entertainment and felt a pardonable in prideits excellence.

To Musical People.

D. P. Johnson has decided to bring to Iowa City, about the first week of the ensuing term, the "Mozart String Quartette" of Muscatine. The Quartette consists of the following members:

W. E. Battey, Violin.
D. P. Johnson, Violin.
Chas. Grade, Viola.
Prof. F. Grade, Violincello.

A very small admission fee will be charged to cover the expenses of the Quartette, and a classical program will be prepared. Anyone wishing to hear the program, will oblige the Quartette by leaving their names with any of the following persons, as soon as convenient.

Miss Nell Cox. N. M. Campbell
Prof. Eggert. A. S. Burrows.

Lawrence Barrett will address the Harvard students this year.

Yale complains that the western college are decreasing the numbers of students she gets from that region.

Lurline, or The Pearl of Minnetonka.

Have you heard the sweet, pathetic story, of Lurline.

I feel myself unequal to the task of describing her rare and glorious style of beauty. You should see her in her quaint, happy, home. You should hear her tell in tones throught which thrill a melody of triumphant gladness, how Courtney Vane won her. You should see her deep brown eyes, light up with a radiant glow, and her peach down cheek flush that lovely rose tint, as she sits and muses over that night in October. At the front gate she stood with Courtney, while the moon cast its halo on her golden hair. Happy lovers; Ah! what sound was that. A heavy thud crunching in the gravel, in its fierce haste. Heavens, the old man is coming. But he did not get in the accustomed kick. Oh no. His foot slipped on a bar of A. B. C. soap, and, well Courtney Vane escaped.

Sequel—Lurline and Courtney married, and of all the happy days in their little home, wash days are the best, beloved. They use A. B. C. soap, and toil becomes a pleasure. For sale by all grocers.

Thus on an average for the last eight years 66 counties have been represented in the collegiate department and the average number of representatives has been 105. During these years only two counties have not had representatives. From the above we can easily conclude that this is in reality a State University.

SADNESS.

BY GENIE O. CLARK.

The night is drear,
And chilly blows the wind
Across the plain.
It stirs leaves, fallen, sere,
And whispers of a rain
That will be here.

My heart is drear,
And bitter breathe my sighs
In saddened strain.
They stir thoughts, withered, sere,
While in fast falling rain
I drop each tear.

The world is drear,
And sighs but in the wind.
A morbid strain
Falls on my listening ear;
The world sobs in the rain
Her only tear.

The Yale Literary Magazine, the oldest college paper in the country, is just completing its fiftieth year. A semi-centennial number is to be issued, the contents of which will be furnished entirely by graduates of Yale, who, when in college were editors of the magazine. Among the contributors will be Donald G. Mitchell, Andrew D. White of Cornell, and President Gilman of Johns Hopkins University.

Pres. Eliot gives the result of the examination of the course of 350 students at Harvard and says: "Among all the 350 choices no two have been found alike, and no discernable groupings prevail among them. To fetter this spontaneous diversity of choice which corresponds to the infinite diversity of mind and character in the choosers by insisting that studies should be taken in certain mixtures or groups which some other mind has arbitrarily compounded, is as unnatural as it is unnecessary. The group system is objectionable because it commits a student early in his college course to a set of studies from which he will find it very difficult to escape later in his course if he changes his mind. To impose upon a youth for two or more years a wrong group of studies from which he cannot extricate himself is a much more serious matter than to allow him to choose amiss one or two studies which he can easily replace."

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty in whatever guise it appears, and your contempt for dishonesty and duplicity by whomsoever exhibited.

Inter-Ocean, Sept. 1st.

Mr. M. B. Curtis appeared in his new play, "Spot Cash," at Hooley's theater last evening and was encouraged to good nature by an audience that occupied every available part of the house fully. This new piece is in the nature of a sequel to "Sam'l of Posen," and represents the popular commercial eccentricity on a business tour of the country—the drummer on the road. "Spot Cash" is a trifle better than its predecessor, with a more liberal infusion of fun for other characters than the principal, and is a thing to be heartily laughed over; there are many comical incidents and lines that closely resemble cleverness and wit, and serve to amuse an audience that is chiefly concerned to be amused. Mr. Curtis is, of course, the same in both plays, and makes an artistic addition to his reputation in his last piece. The only difference we are able to detect in Samuel is a greater extravagance in the matter of dress. In the new piece Samuel has been graduated into that school of adventure and moral laxity designated by the term "one of the boys," and is therefore more interesting, and his performances in some respects funnier. The play was put together for the purpose of parading one character. There is some good character work done by the balance of the company, and Miss Albina De Mer, in her old character of Celeste, re-christened Hortense, repeats her former success as actress of the vivacious, unscrupulous and daring type of lawless woman.

"In the world there is nothing great but man:

THE LITTLE GIANT.

BY J. H. LIGGETT.

The same inordinate demand for exclusive privilege which an innate selfishness inspired in the priesthood and nobility of the old world, led to a warring conflict of ideas which marks the progress of the new. It had its origin far back in the past, when the rigid stoical ideas of the Puritan found a lodgement on Plymouth rock and when the Virginia planter profited by the labor of his slave. Here were implanted the germs from which sprang two civilizations, unlike in tradition, widely remote in tendency. Nurtured in colonial dependencies of another land these did not come into collision. Not till the more perfect union had been formed, not till each rival sought to control the nation's destiny, could there be described along the political horizon the fleecy gathering clouds of an "irrepressible conflict."

Time rushes on. The healing virtue of compromise extorted from a reluctant spirit of concession at last exhausts itself. Whirlwinds of passion continue to arise, defying peaceable adjustment. Patriotism is narrowed to a peculiar type of civilization. Oh! that the crisis might develop its leader, a man of destiny, under whose guidance the ship of state might avoid the quicksands of civil strife and escape impending wreck upon the rock of disunion. What a diadem ambition offered to him who had the genius to evolve and the skill to execute. Failure need not dethrone him—others, too, had failed—successful, and the fulfillment of ambition was bounded alone by its extent. What wonder that Douglas, ever alert to win the favor of the masses, ever courting popular applause, was eager to launch forth upon the sea of experiment and champion a novel doctrine, which might revolutionize the trend of public thought and prove a panacea for all existing troubles.

The avowed object of his doctrine of "popular sovereignty" was to set at rest the troubled question of slavery extension and quell its ceaseless agitation. It would take that question out of the halls of Congress, away from the public mind and leave its settlement to the local law, for was not the republic founded upon the unquestioned right of each State to regulate its own affairs? Thus would it remove contention and insure the perpetuity of the union.

Though pervaded by a spirit of apparent fairness, this doctrine contained original and marked defects. Its advocate premised that the fathers viewed with calm indifference this institution which flourished in their midst, when in fact they did but tolerate a necessary evil and clearly viewed it with disapprobation. He aimed to remove the question from the arena of congressional debate, forgetting that its agitation must revive, when territories should present their claims to statehood. He built upon the fallacy that a civilization may endure, whether it crush the sacred rights of humanity or no.

But if theoretically faulty, what of the practical application of this peculiar dogma? How should it be applied except as both parties to the controversy should invoke its arbitration and abide its result? Yet as neither was disposed to submit to the test of an uncertain arbiter, those questions dearest to its heart, in this lay an obstacle inherent and insurmountable.

It was local self-government carried to an extreme. In his zeal to proclaim this sacred right Douglas would brook no restraint to its abuse. Could that other twin relic of barbarism entrenched in a western territory ever be uprooted did the principles of Douglas hold to-day?

No wonder that popular sovereignty was a failure. No wonder that in view of its remarkable defects, in view of interests antagonized, its able champion was reviled and accused of intentional deception. Every act received the scorching criticism of hosts of eager enemies, every motive the heartless traducer sought to penetrate and analyze. Between opposing forces arrayed in deadly antagonism—arrayed in hostility to both—alike to both an object of distrust, Douglas was peculiarly exposed to the insidious attacks of the defamer. Actuated only by self-exaltation in the eyes of maligners on both sides, they sought to desecrate behind every act some base ulterior motive. If he battled for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, it was to secure the favor of the slave power in the interest of an uncontrollable ambition; if he rebelled against the party lash in its mad design to force slavery upon defenceless Kansas, and forever lost the friendship of the south, he did it because the north would have sustained no other course; if he pledged fidelity to the Union in the dark hour of need, it was to satisfy a spirit of retaliation and enjoy the sweetness of revenge.

That the Missouri Compromise was an inviolable compact must be admitted. That Douglas was ambitious, that he coveted the presidency it were folly to deny. Yet, may we not suppose that he expected the good results to overbalance the evil? He was eminently imbued with the virtue of one idea, and it was but natural to seek the removal of all obstacles to its progress. Not to justify the violation of that compact, is it not conceivable that he earnestly strove to promote the common weal? If this were a bid to the slave power of the south, why should he yield all vantage ground in opposing the Lecompton bill? Northern vituperation had done its worst. Northern men had allied themselves to the pro-slavery interest. But "The Little Giant" true to the principles he had proclaimed, opposed the partisan outrage and proudly vindicated the sovereign will of Kansas, though ambition's fondest hopes were blasted. To whom shall more honor be accorded, that the soil of that state was consecrated to the cause of freedom? Let any who are disposed to attribute his earnest opposition to the rebellion to unworthy feelings of political revenge, turn to his death-bed and ask themselves whether his dying sentiment, "Remember the Union," voices a spirit of base retaliation or of an doubted patriotism.

Douglas has been charged with inhumanity because he followed not the impulses of philanthropy, but what he conceived to be the plain requirements of the constitution. What was the spirit of the times? Was the nation's sympathy enlisted in behalf of the negro's oppressed condition? Was there an all pervading sentiment demanding that his sufferings be alleviated, that his wrongs be righted? No. It must forever detract from the boasted civilization of the century that the lusty champions of equal rights heard with complacent indifference the groans which escaped from the galled and fettered black. Individual exceptions did commiserate the slave, but the tale of misery and woe failed to awaken chords of responsive sympathy in the northern heart. The voice of the north opposed slavery extension not in behalf of an oppressed race, but because it dreaded the contaminating influences of the system. It was guided by self interest, not philanthropy. And because enabled to ground its action upon humanitarian principles, shall Douglas be condemned if led to take less philanthropic ground, or if lacking in virtues which the age did not possess?

Whether regarded as a statesman or as a politician, to his work can be traced much of the progress of the century. It was the doctrine of Douglas, which thwarted the aggressive designs of slavery while abolitionism was yet insignificant and helpless. It was his conservative policy, which formed a barrier behind which abolition gathered strength for a final onslaught upon this stronghold of barbarism, and his action which formed an eternal bar to reconciliation. Lastly it was his prompt unflinching espousal of the Union cause that gave to it a moral support which insured its final triumph.

He expected great results to follow his labors—great results did follow, but how different from his anticipation. He inaugurated a policy to establish permanent peace, only to arouse unprecedented strife and hatred. He would convince an arrogant opposition that the Union and slavery were not incompatible, yet only proved the great truth which he controverted, that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." He sought to still the raging billows of sectional strife, that the favored institution of the south on which was reared its social fabric might flourish as before, yet the practical results of his novel doctrine, served but to precipitate an "irrepressible conflict," that when its throes and agonies should cease, and the smoke of battle clear away, upon its sorrowful ruins might be reared an enduring structure—a permanent civilization.

No books sent except for 4 cents; stamps taken. See advertisement of incubator in another place.

Young Teachers Wanted.

The art of teaching is adopted by many to gain a start in life, and often enables one to graduate in a higher course of study. The work is pleasant, profitable and noble, and being a field constantly open to advanced scholars, any book calculated to assist them in passing school examinations or obtaining certificates is hailed with delight. Such a work is the "Common School Question Book," an advertisement of which appears in this paper. It is the most comprehensive review of twelve common branches ever published, and is so arranged in question form as to make it exceedingly useful. The publisher offers to send full descriptive circulars and specimen pages for a 2-cent stamp, in which he makes the best inducements to canvassers. The Question Book embraces 3,500 questions and answers on U.S. History, Civil Government, Parliamentary Rules, Penmanship, Reading, Physiology, Geography, Grammar, Written Arithmetic, Physical Geography, Orthography, Infinitives and participles made easy. The price of the book is $1.50 prepaid. Address, A. H. Craig Caldwell, Wis.

TOWN

A 4-Cent Poultry Book.

F. D. Craig, North Evanston, Ill., has issued a 32-page (72 columns) book, with colored cover, describing his Folding Incubator and Brooder, to which is added a large amount of information on poultry. Besides a full description of incubators, how they are built, operated, etc., instructions are given for building the best brooder ever invented, at a trivial cost; also illustrates a model henery in four pictures; shows how 1000 per cent can be made yearly from 100 hens; describes all breeds of fowls, over 75 varieties; vocabulary of over 60 terms used in scoring fancy fowls; tells all about caponizing; how to make eggs pay; small hen houses, winter laying quarters; incubator chicks; secrets of artificial hatching; Egyptian hatching ovens; poultry dogs; "Profitable Home Industry for Women," by Helen Wilman; a number of inquiries; eggs without roosters, and other matter. No books sent except for 4 cents; stamps taken. See advertisement of incubator in another place.

Young Teachers Wanted.

The art of teaching is adopted by many to gain a start in life, and often enables one to graduate in a higher course of study. The work is pleasant, profitable and noble, and being a field constantly open to advanced scholars, any book calculated to assist them in passing school examinations or obtaining certificates is hailed with delight. Such a work is the "Common School Question Book," an advertisement of which appears in this paper. It is the most comprehensive review of twelve common branches ever published, and is so arranged in question form as to make it exceedingly useful. The publisher offers to send full descriptive circulars and specimen pages for a 2-cent stamp, in which he makes the best inducements to canvassers. The Question Book embraces 3,500 questions and answers on U.S. History, Civil Government, Parliamentary Rules, Penmanship, Reading, Physiology, Geography, Grammar, Written Arithmetic, Physical Geography, Orthography, Infinitives and participles made easy. The price of the book is $1.50 prepaid. Address, A. H. Craig Caldwell, Wis.

20,000 PRESENTS

All of them magnificent, costly and useful. But at the same time we beg the public to understand (no matter what our competitors say) that we are not running a gift enterprise. You do not pay us a fraction of a cent for the chance to get the present. We are selling our A. B. C. Soap cheaper to-day than we ever did during the three years that it has been placed on the market, and consequently you get full value in Soap. We are simply our A. B. C. Soap on the most magnificent scale ever attempted by any one firm.

Three years ago we started out to sell A. B. C. Soap on its merits, to-day thousands of the most intelligent housekeepers in this and all the principal cities of the Union use our A. B. C. Soap and marvel why it is not used in every home.

The principal grocers throughout the Union tell us one reason why its use has not become general is that has not been sufficiently advertised; and another reason is, because many people who have bought it, did not give it the necessary and intelligent attention it deserves. They did not read the directions, and finding that it would not wash by laying A. B. C. Soap on top of the bundle of soiled clothes, they fell back to five cent soap.

Thousands write us: "Your A. B. C. Soap is all that you claim for it; it not only gives satisfaction, but we find that our most intelligent customers say that it is and are enthusiastic and speak in the highest terms of praise about it. Why don't you advertise it?"

It is therefore that we are making this extraordinary effort to bring A. B. C. Soap to the notice of every intelligent person and in order to induce every one to buy it, and continue to use it until they have fully tested its merits, we say to them

SAVE THE A B C WRAPPERS

And send them to us during the months of June or December next, and we shall distribute among you an array of presents which, for magnificence and usefulness, surpasses everything heretofore offered by any one firm.

Send four cents in stamps and we will send you a catalogue, which is now in course of preparation and which will give you a full description of all the presents and the mode

TO OBTAIN A PRESENT

Those who have not used A. B. C. Soap, of course, will ask, "what is it?"

A. B. C. Soap is our own invention, and all who have used it cheerfully concede to it the merit of being the greatest improvement ever made in domestic economy. A. B. C. Soap, and the MODE OF WASHING WITH IT, is as different from all other soaps, and the old way of washing, and is as much an improvement over the old system, as traveling by railway is over that by an ox-cart. A girl of 18, or the most delicate person, can wash in one hour, more clothes with A. B. C. Soap, than the most robust, with the hardest work and slavish toil can wash with the best soap, and the old way of washing, in three hours. And withal, A. B. C. Soap is the mildest and sweetest soap ever manufactured. We warrant you can wash baby with it and it will look as sweet and fresh as a rose.

Remember, that while you can use A. B. C. Soap in any way or manner you please, it is best to use it according to the directions on the wrapper, which will also teach you the new way of washing.

Remember, also, that in order to obtain one of these presents you must save your wrappers and send them to us by mail, during the months of June or December next.

LAW DEPARTMENT.

H. K. EVANS, Editor.

Arthur Bemis, of the Senior class, went to Des Moines on Saturday, returning Tuesday.

The bill establishing the Supreme Court at Des Moines has been engrossed, and will no doubt become a law.

In April the voters of Dubuque will determine whether or not they will organize a Superior Court in that city.

Friday the Senior class met and adjourned their Club Court on account of having so much work, which occupies their time.

From some cause the notes on Judge Love's lecture appeared in a promiscuous order, which very materially effects its readability, much to our regret.

W. H. Cobb, of the Senior class, was unexpectedly called to Charles City the latter part of last week, on account of the sickness of his child. His wife and child were at that place on a visit. A recent report announces that the child is no better. We hope a better report will soon come and he be permitted to return to his class.

The Senior class, on invitation, are largely attending the recitations in the Code, with reference to trial and judgment, which is, strictly speaking, a Junior study. The Seniors recognize that the final examinations are near at hand, and thus take advantage of this extra study principally through benevolence to the individual members of the class.

DUE PROCESS OF LAW.

All men have certain inalienable rights which government is understood to guarantee and protect; among these are the rights to life, liberty and property, and no person shall be deprived thereof without due process of law.—Arts. 5 and 14, Const. U. S.; Art. 1, Sec. 9, Ia. Const.

Due process of law means, "due course of legal proceedings, according to those rules and forms which have been established for the protection of private rights."—Kennard vs. Louisiana; ex rel. Morgan, 2 Otto, 481.

The phrases "due course of law" and "the law of the land" are also sometimes used; but all three expressions have the same meaning.—Cooly, Const. Linn. 437. These provisions have their origin in the Magna charta, the great charter of English liberties. They were incorporated into the constitution of the United States and the constitution of many of the states, as a safeguard against the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government upon the inherent rights of the people. This limitation is a restraint on the legislative, as well as the executive and judicial powers of government.—Davidson vs. New Orleans, 96 U. S., 107. For it is not left to the legislative power to enact any process which it might devise.—Tyler vs. Porter, 4 Hill 145.

Due process of law secures to every person a right to notice or means of knowledge, and a proper judicial investigation before a competent tribunal.—Portland vs. Bangor, 65 Me. 120. When the life or liberty of a person is in question there must, in every instance, be a judicial proceeding. But each state will prescribe its own mode of procedure; the accusation may be by indictment or information; the trial by jury or by the court; and whatever is established will be due process of law, provided it is general and impartial in its operations.—Edwards vs. Elliott, 21 Wall. 557; Walker vs. Sauvinet, 2 Otto, 92. There has been some question whether a state can abolish the grand jury system. The weight of authority holds the affirmative.—Hurtado vs. California, 110 U. S. 516; contra, Saco vs. Wentworth, 37 Me., 172. They hold that administrative and remedial proceedings must necessarily change from time to time with the advancement and progress of society, and if the state should find it expedient to abolish the grand jury and prosecute all crimes by information, there is nothing to prevent. There has been, however, more of a conflict of opinions as to the waiver of trials by jury. It has been held not to be an infringement of the prisoner's constitutional right, where a statute provides that in all criminal prosecutions the party accused, if he so elects, may be tried by the court instead of by a jury. In re Staff, 20 Rep. 254. But where there is a statute requiring it, or in the absence of any statute, the right of trial by jury cannot be waived. State vs. Carman, 63 Ia., 130. A commitment for contempt of court is not in conflict with this constitutional provision. State vs. Becht, 23 Minn., 411. But a person imprisoned for refusing to appear or testify before a county attorney, is illegally restrained of his liberty. In re Ziebold, 23 Fed. Rep., 791. The state has an interest in the preservation of the lives and liberties of its citizens, and will not allow them to be taken except by due course of legal proceedings. The right to acquire, own and enjoy property so it is consistent with the equal rights of others, and the just exactions and demands of the state, is universally recognized. The taking of private property without the consent of the owner, is the exercise of one of the highest powers of government. This power can only be exercised by an orderly proceeding adapted to the nature of each case.—18 How., 280. It is not due process of law to require a person to answer in a suit on whom process has not been served, or whose property has not been attached.—Webster vs. Reid, 11 How., 437. So an action against the property of a non-resident brought by constructive notice, unless aided by attachment is void.—Pennoyer vs. Whitman, 95 U. S. 714. When property is taken in the due and valid exercise of the power to tax the owner is not unlawfully deprived thereof.—Allan vs. Armstrong, 16 Ia., 108. The power of taxation when exercised for a public purpose, is unlimited. And the right to distrain real as well as personal property for the payment of taxes is valid.—Springer vs. U. S., 102 U. S., 586.

In determining what is due process of law regard must be had to the object of the taking, and if found suitable in the special case the proceeding will be constitutional; but if found to be arbitrary and unjust it will be invalid.
