The present term of our Medical Department opened Wednesday with a full class. The Homoeopathic Department begins work next week.

The college work of the year is now fairly begun. Student leaves by this time acquired their old habits and are capable of their accustomed application. They are "broken in" and the hardest two weeks of the term's work are probably past.

A novelty has developed among the old students of the University in the person of Emerson Hough. For several years he has been connected with the Occam, of Chicago, and is now publishing a serial novel in that paper. The title we have forgotten. We must do better. The story, we are told, is very readable.

The Department of the Interior has entered upon an investigation of the recent earthquake disturbances and of the effects produced in different parts of the country. Prof. Leonard has been asked to report from this state. For this task he has excellent facilities, for as there are students here from all parts of the state he can ascertain the facts sought after by personal inquiry. All who were in the least shaken are requested to tell the whole story to him.

Wednesday morning, the President distributed over the chapel, a number of New Testaments, so that all students who wish, may now take part in chapel exercise, by joining in the responsive readings, that morning introduced. This is a new thing. The students themselves can now engage personally in all exercises of the chapel, except the prayers. These they offer up in the privacy of their own rooms.

President Adams, of Cornell University, advocates the erection on or near the campus of dormitories for the accommodation of the students. He also appeals to the students to make the atmosphere about Cornell more scholarly, more like that about the English Universities, where the influence of the students upon each other is as great as the influence of the professors. This suggestion is equally applicable to all other American colleges.

William H. Paysee, Professor of the Science and Art of Teaching in Michigan University, has just published a work entitled: "Contributions to the Science of Education." This is not the first work of the kind that Prof. Paysee has written. Considering the author's position and experience, the book will without doubt prove much value to the professional instructors of the country. His design in publishing the book is to encourage among teachers the habit of serious reflection upon some of the great problems in education, to the end that they may find a new delight in an occupation otherwise monotonous and uninspiring. He believes that teaching is a purely spiritual art, and the highest manifestations of this power are as dependent upon inspiration as poetry, eloquence and art.

Relaxation pays. The student finds this out. We do not mean dissipation. We mean mind rest. This rest may be taken in many ways. An hour or two each day spent in light reading is, aside from physical considerations, one of the best means by which to gain relief from hard study, in the mind, though constantly employed, receives the benefits of change. It is said that a horse can travel farther in a day on a road that has its moderate ups and downs, than on a road perfectly level. It is altogether probable that a student can acquire as much knowledge of his studies by diversifying himself by reading now and then, a half hour or an hour, as by digging away at his books continually, without any such diversity. A piece of rubber constantly stretched, loses its elasticity, and snaps.

This change of mental employment, however, does not imply any outdoor or physical exercise. When it is at all practicable, we believe a student makes a mistake, when he fails to spend an hour a day in the open air, simply for its own sake. If the mind be in a proper state there is an inspiration, there is a growth in frequenting "God's first temple." It is here that the mind expands without straining to expand. It is here that the ideas and thoughts come, unsought for. Nature's drawing room is the grassy earth, the trees, the river, the clouds and sky. There is mental and physical health thus in the field.

Needed — A German Dictionary.

We were surprised the other day to find that there is but one German-English dictionary in the library. That is Adams', and of course lacks much of being complete. Mrs. North informs us that Whitney's dictionary is at the binders and will be returned in a few days, but even then the two is very inadequate. Our students may expect a four year's course in German, as quite a number do each year. This term there are nine in a German class. Where such an extended course is open to students, the library ought to contain at least one complete or unabridged dictionary of that tongue.

In French we have such a one, Littre, in three large volumes, and we ought by all means to have a similar one of the German language. The library should also contain several smaller ones for reference and comparison, but we think it hardly proper that students should habitually use these in preparation of their daily lessons. A good dictionary should be the individual property of every student of a foreign language, just as much as the text book itself.

From a private letter we learn that the library of the State University of Illinois contains the complete works of Hufm, Schiller, Gotthe, Richter, Koenner, Chang, Clostoph. Letting and numerous others with French just as complete making in all about 3,000 volumes in German and French. We would be glad if our library appropriations were large enough to place us upon an equal footing, but as it is not, we will content ourselves by wishing for an early introduction of a complete German dictionary.

The others we can get along with but that we really need, and ought to have.

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

It is a lamentable fact that while every well informed person admits the importance of a wholesome, vigorous exercise for the enjoyment and preservation of life, very few of those "well informed" are fully awakened to the necessity of a judicious physical education and which, as it underlies, must precede the mental development. Nevertheless the number of enthusiasts for gymnastics is rapidly increasing, and the colleges and Universities all over the United States are establishing gymnastic departments. Here in this state there are going on even as far as to make attendance at the exercise hours compulsory and the passing of examination in gymnastics a prerequisite to graduation. Fortunately for the State University the Board of Regents recognizing the importance of a physical education, have made a beginning in this direction and given the means to secure a large and spacious hall for the use of the gymnasium and for proper physical education.

What is meant by the latter? As a mental education need not make a mental giant, so a physical education need not produce athletes. It is not the purpose or object of a gymnasm to produce acrobats, circus actors and powerful athletes, but to make sound and healthy the body, to develop every set of muscles in the human system, to expand the chest, making deeper the respiration, to develop the arm and leg muscle, to brace the shoulder, to strengthen and invigorate the spinal column, thereby leading to the habit of erect posture and graceful carriage, to impart endurance as well as agility. Therefore every act looking toward the former attainments is disapproved and even prohibited; every act leading to the latter result encouraged and practiced.

As no undertaking can be successful unless performed in a systematic manner, a few requirements will be made of students entering the course, such as constant and regular attendance and obedience to the rules and regulations. There will be two courses, one for the gentlemen and one for the ladies. Classes will be arranged as soon as possible and graded according to ability as will be the difficulty of the exercises. The large hall is well adapted to class drill in dumbbells, club swinging and calisthenics, and class perfection will be sought after. For the ladies' class a course of lectures has been arranged for, also Dr. Hess kindly consenting to aid in the ladies' department.

The apparatus, which will be increased as time goes on and especially as interest in the good work increases, comprises at present the following: horizontal bar, climbing ropes, climbing poles, parallel bars, horizontal and inclined ladders, "vaulting horse;" a complete set of iron dumbbells, 25 wooden pairs, 50 pairs Indian clubs, 10 wands and mats.

As will be seen the gymnascum is well equipped to meet the demands of beginners and success now depends upon the students themselves. Will they avail themselves of the opportunities afforded and in connection with their mental cultivate their physical education? It remains to be seen.

Director of Gymnastics.
C. V. Manatt, LL. B., of '86, visited the law class Thursday.

J. S. Sullivan took a short trip home Friday, returning first of the week.

A. W. McCay of the class of '85, is meeting with noteworthy success in Minneapolis.

The Juniors have an addition to their class in the person of Fred Blake, Strawberry Point, Iowa.

C. L. Marmon writes glowing of his location in Springfield, Neb. Charley also sends for the Vidette.

Who noticed the "in the wrong pew" expression which passed over Prof. Mc-

Clain's countenance last Wednesday at the beginning of the hour for real pro-

It is currently reported among the boys, that J. W. McGrath has improved his vacation by the securing of a better-half. If this be true, John has our best wishes and we feel sure that it is the fault of the wish, that his misfortunes may be small ones.

The Senior class held their elections last Monday, with the following result: Pres., J. W. McGrath; Vice-Pres., D. Menton; Secretary, E. L. Edmonds, Treasurer, A. E. Claassen. Also the following club court officers were chosen:

W. S. Kingley of the class of '86; has received the nomination for County Attorney of Bremer county. Willis is a thorough gentleman and an obliging friend. He showed superior ability while at this University. If the electors of Bremer county want to encourage a worthy young man and at the same time elect a competent officer, they can do no better than select Mr. Kingley.

A knotty legal question has arisen in the state of North Carolina, which may have to be decided by the Supreme Court of that State. All of this because a colored man called a brother descendant of Ham a bar, and the offended party beheld the head of the offending negro, with the only available weapon, which caused to be a ten pound mud turtle. The question to be decided is whether or not a mud turtle is a lethal weapon. The court is fully competent to struggle with this problem, one of its learned judges having already decided that a lead-dog is a "deadly weapon."

Sixteen members of the last law class have reported themselves located and ready for professional work:

Thomas F. Bevington, Sioux City, Iowa.
Frank R. Butler, Boone, Iowa.
Wm. H. Cobb, Batavia, D. T.
Thomas Daris, Walker, Iowa.
Evans Palmer, Holdredge, Kansas.
James G. Gardner, Chicago, Ill.
Elieith H. Hurd, Le Mars, Iowa.
Willis S. Kingley, Waterloo, Iowa.
Clement N. Mattart, Iowa.

While the court below concluded this to be the general rule, it did not give the defendant the benefit of it, because it held that the men engaged in the violent and riotous resistance to the defendant were its employees, for whose conduct it was responsible, and in that holding was the fundamental error committed by it. It is true that these men had been in the employment of the defendant. But they left and abandoned that employment. They ceased to be in the service, or in any sense its agents for whose conduct it was responsible. They not only refused to obey its orders or to render it any service but they simply arrayed themselves in positive hostility against it, and intimidated and defeated the efforts of employees who were willing to serve it. They became a mob of violence, law-breakers, to be dealt with by the government whose duty it was, by the use of adequate force, to restore order, enforce property, respect for private property and private rights, and obedience to law. If they had burned down bridges, torn up tracks, or gone into passenger cars and robbed the machines, upon what principal could it be held that as to such acts they were the employees of the defendant for whom it was responsible? If they had said the defendant for wages for the eleven days when they were thus engaged in blocking its business, no one will claim that they could have recovered.

It matters not if it be true that the strike was conceived and organized while the strikers were in the employment of the defendant. In doing that, they were not in its service or security. They did not suffer in its injury; they could not be considered in any capacity, even as a question of law, as agents for the railroad company. The railroad company is not in any way responsible for acts of violence.

The facts were that the plaintiff shipped a number of cattle and hogs on the trains of the defendant company and part of the journey had been accomplished, when by reason of a strike of the employees of the defendant, a stop was put to further progress, and the cattle and hogs were delayed for a considerable time, unspecified time. The strikers not only refused to work themselves, but also to permit any other person to fill their places, until their demands should be complied with. They were numerous and were supported by many outside sympathizers, and all together constitu-ed a force that the defendant company could not resist or overcome. When the company finally succeeded in moving its freight, and delivered plaintiff’s cattle and hogs to Buffalo, the animals were much deteriorated in value by the delay, and for this damage the shipper brought suit.

In the trial court, an order was granted in the following, in the following forcible terms:

"A railroad carrier stands upon the same footing as other carriers, and may excuse delay in the delivery of goods by accident or misfortune, not inevitable or produced by the acts of God. All that can be required of it, in any emergency, is that it shall exercise due care and dil-gence to guard against delay, and to forward the goods to their destination; and so it has been uniformly decided.

In the absence of special contract there is no absolute duty resting upon a railroad carrier to deliver the goods entrusted to it with what, under ordinary circumstances, would be reasonable time.

Not only storms and floods and other natural causes may excuse delay, but the conduct of men may also do so. An inclement weather may burn down a bridge, a mob may tear up the tracks or disable the rolling stock or interpose irresistible force or overpowering intimidation, and the only duty resting upon the carrier, not otherwise in fault, is to use reasonable efforts and due diligence to overcome the obstacles thus interposed, and to forward the goods to their destinations.

Hood’s Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, staff, rheumatism, dropsy, biliousness, headaches, colic, dyspepsia, biliousness and kidney and liver complaints, and all affections caused by impure blood or low condition of the system. Try it.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. I took five bottles of Hood’s Sarsaparilla and considered myself entirely cured.”

"Hood’s Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. My whole system has been built up and strengthened, my face cleared of spots, and my hair restored to its former lustre. I consider the best medicine a man can use, and should not know how to do without it." — Mary L. Perley, Salem, Mass.

PHILISTINISM AND ITS REMEDY.

Edgar W. F. Miller.

Everybody wants his daily bread, his comfortable home, his convenient vehicle. All the genius of this century has been created and created these things, and the result is a material civilization unparalleled in history. The object of all these steam engines and tools which we see about us is vitality; and we have primarily applied them to physical needs, but eventually seeking to ameliorate our spiritual condition. We build bridges that men may work and eat, and we invent reapers that wheat may be No. I. in quality; yet the essential motive back of all is to elevate the race, not to better eating, but those past better eating to better thinking.

The most hardened materialist must admit that on earth at least all gravitates toward man and toward his sentiment and his intellect, which are his center. And it would be the most pagan notion to assert that science and the steam engines were of any "use at all if they did not reach the lives and souls of men; and as this is so, so granted, they are little short of gods.

In the dense materialism of the age, many, overwhelmed by the leading ideas of the times, have failed to recognize this ultimate spiritual aim of our industrialism. Regarding trade, wealth and the practical arts as wealth, by back of progress, it is true, are the wheel and axle, but back of the mechanical powers is the law of God. And for the complete and wholesome evolution of the race, the sentiment and knowledge, the heart and science, deep sense of beauty, and excellent social manners, must be back of the law of God, through the social sweep. The act saw two great systems of culture, the purely intellectual of the Greeks and the purely sentimental of the Christ. As God, pure to man is the grandest system of ethics. As in the Lord's prayer there is all worship, in the sermon on the Mount there is all culture. Combine these three. Greek intellectualism, Catholicism and Christianity, and we are as far from the truth as we are to the spanning of the earth.

To practically interpret the soul like a "death to work" is an impossible feat. It cannot fail for others' woes. It does not burn its own. That heavy chill has frozen over the fountain of our tears. It seems as though the eye might sparkle still, the tears, there is none.

That will melt from front lips, and through the tears will run mutual groans. Through midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest. The bud by leaves around the ruined turret wreaths. All green is wretchedly without a tear, and gray beneath. Oh! could I feel as I have done, or as I would. Or were as I could have one hope of many a vanished scene?

As spring is like a flower found sweet, as briskly they be, so wild the wildest waste of life, those tears would flow in.

The following is one of the ancient laws of Yale, Art. VII: It shall be the duty of the Senior class to inspect the manners of the lower classes and especially those of the Freshman class. Mark Twain spent the last Fourth of July with his brother and aged mother at their home in Keokuk, Iowa, and while there aided in the celebration by making one of his characteristic speeches.

NEW BOOKS IN LIBRARY.

As mentioned last week, the Library appropriation is considerably increased, and we may expect the addition of many excellent books during the year. Through the kindness of Mrs. Nott, we are favored with a list of the books most likely to attract attention among those already received.

Stedman's "Poets of America." Hornaday's "Two Years in the Jungle." Froude's Ocean.

Morley's Miscellanies. The admirers of Geo. Eliot who have not already read "Cross Life," will find in it much of interest and profit concerning this last great novelist. Rimmer's Art Anatomy will repay a most careful examination. The following quotation from Bartlett's "Life of Dr. Rimmer," will give an idea of the nature and completeness of the work. "The book contains nearly nine hundred drawings, illustrating, in the fullest manner, the ethnological, bony, anatomical and artistic construction, movement, and purposes, of the human form of both sexes and all ages, as well as the expression of the passions, with full explanatory text on the same page with the drawings."

"The Art Anatomy is the most perfect compendium of pictorial and artistic knowledge on this subject that I have ever seen, and is without doubt unique." The first edition was so costly as to limit its distribution to a few libraries, but a second edition, reproduced from the original plates by the albertype process, has greatly diminished its cost and increased its distribution. Do not fail to see it.

Hornaday's "Two years in the Jungle" is also worthy of our mention since the author is the donor of the Hornaday Collection sold to be added to our Museum. It describes the author's adventures during a portion of the time he was engaged in collecting the specimens we are soon to enjoy, and will have special interest to us on that account.
