Be Ella M. Monson, physician at Vassar College, is Vice-President of the New York Association of Michigan University Alumni.

The Hon. Leland Stanford has a wife about as much interested in educational matters as himself, for she devotes considerable time and money to the cause of education in California. She has put in successful operation four large kindergartens, and her latest benefaction is the establishment of a night school for the pupils and stable-boys employed by her husband's stables. These facts we learn from the Woman's Journal. Another lady interested in educational work is Mrs. Sarah S. Belcher, of Farmington, Maine, who has left $60,000 to Bates College.

Our readers will remember the fierce and persistent attack made upon the University last year, by half a dozen (or less) persons. It had never before been the subject of such an assault, but few, if any, institutions had ever been represented as so nitrous corrupt and contemptible. In pamphlets and in newspapers, the Regents were represented as flagrantly unjust, the financial officers as armed of amazin frauds, the professors were charged with incompetency, and the University was said to be seeking hiding impecuniosity, and its halls becoming dilapidated. Step by step, the conscientious (assailants have been thwarted, their declarations been disproved, and their prophecies shown to be as absurd as Wiggins' forecasts of the weather. The last few weeks have been most disastrous for them. The greatly increased attendance of this term, bore them deep enough, but the new Regents, some of whom had begun to think that "where there was so much smoke there must be some fire," have just completed the Sepulture. Gov. Larabee, J. W. Rich, of Vinton, and Alphonso Matthews of Dubuque, have just reported that the University finances have been honestly managed, and done out after a most search ing examination, made with the assistance of the University's most determined, most persevering and most intellectual assitant. This was the point in which the public was specially interested, which had been pressed the most of late years. The last winter, and which was almost sure to involve something seeming to demand apology, or a laborious defense. The investigation has shown a financial accuracy and a business honesty of which all concerned may be justly proud. Some interested in the University have sometimes armed themselves with experiments with the boomerang. This attack has been the most perfect specimen of the boomerang, ever known here.

At a meeting of the Oratorio Association on Wednesday afternoon it was decided to hold the home contest January 12th, and also that the orations must be handed to the secretary not later than January 6th, the second day of the winter term. It is a serious mistake that this matter was not considered at the beginning of the present term so that more time could be given for practice on delivery both between the time of the selection of the six final contestants and also between the latter and the state contest. As it is, the successful six can have but three or four days for prepara tion from the time of the decision on thought and style until the home contest, and the successful one in that but three weeks before the state contest occurs. All admit that these intervals are ridiculously short, especially the first one. This arrangement, however, is probably the best that could have been made, considering that no orations are as yet written or even commenced, judging from the tone of the discussion. Under these circumstances the winter vacation will have to be more profitfully employed in writing than in practicing on delivery. The mistake is not in the action now taken, but that the matter was so long delayed. If a meet ing had been held the first of this term or better still, before the summer vacation, and the time of the home contest fixed near the close of this term, much more time could have been given to delivery, and there would also have been an opportunity for the successful orator to have Improved his oration in thought and style, before sending it to the judges of the state contest. There is now no opportunity for this, as copies of the successful oration must be sent to the state president the very next morning after the home contest. Knox College, the literary association, has had rather remarkable success late in years in both state and inter-state contests, and we might profit being considering her methods. Their home contest was held during the past spring term, very shortly after the inter-state contest. Its contestant thus had all the summer vacation to improve the thought and style of his oration, or to write another if he saw fit to do so, and to practice delivery, with the zeal and earnestness that must come from knowing that he was to represent his college in the state contest. This contest was held near the beginning of the present term, and the Knox boy came out ahead. He now has the remaining six months before the inter-state contest to again polish or rewrite his oration and train his vocal powers under the stimulus of knowing that he is to represent his state in the inter-state contest. It needs no argument to show the immense advantages this system gives to the successful orator. We all know how near Mr. Lovell came to representing the state in the inter-state contest of last year. It is evident and we think generally admitted that it was only the shortness of the time between the home and state contests that prevented his taking first place in the latter. Mr. Lovell, it will be re membered, was also successful in the Junior contest the year before, Suppose that had been our home contest, making him our orator in the last state contest. Does anyone doubt that the S. U. C. would have again represented Iowa in the inter-state contest, and that we should have had at least an equal chance for one of the first places there? Or suppose the same thing regarding the Junior contest of last year. There may be no reason, that under such circumstances Mr. Patterson would not have polished his oration and improved his delivery in the time elapsing before the coming state contest, beyond a point likely to have reached under present circumstances either by himself or anyone else. Of course it cannot be argued that such would have been the result, but are not the chances nine to one in his favor? If this be admitted, then let us establish better regulations for the future. It is now late to effect any improvement for this year, but if we are loyal to the S. U. C. we will be glad to plant for future harvests. Any action we may take cannot benefit the present Senior class, but may be of advantage to those who follow us. Let us discuss this question and if we are agreed let us adopt measures at once to fix future home contest at that earlier date.

Last Monday morning as the students were making their way to the University they met Prof. E. W. Crane with his grip sacks taking his departure from the University and from the town. This was consequent upon the action recently taken by the Board of Regents. At the last meeting late they elevated Mr. Crane to be associate professor of civil engineering. It appears that such a step was not satisfactory to Prof. Philbrick, and he therefore at the last meeting of the Regents brought to him a choice between his own resignation and the removal of Prof. Crane. They chose the latter and called upon Prof. Crane to resign. With this request he refused to comply, preferring to consider the action of the Regents as a matter of regret. It would have been well if in the first place the Regents had more carefully contemplated what effect such a step was likely to produce. Prof. Philbrick has filled the chair of Civil Engineering for many years and has filled it ably, but if an associate was necessary in June an associate is required now. Either in June or in October a mistake was made. If the promotion was wise, the deposition was not, and vice versa. We do not yet know the exact condition which caused the Regents to have been so mistaken. The necessity that dictated the employment of an associate professor should have been a necessity of more weight than the personal feelings of any one man. Whether it was such we do not give an opinion, but we are inclined to suspect from the hasty method of their action by the Board that no very important considerations influenced their course in the first place. We believe that neither the honor of Prof. Philbrick nor that of Prof. Crane is implicated in the affair. It is altogether an unfortunate matter.

Of the charges against Mr. Crane laid before the Board by those who wish to bring about the removal of Prof. Crane we can find no satisfactory

TREASURER.

I have reason to believe that all monies due the Association for the fiscal year 1877-78 have been paid to the Treasurer. The Association has paid $4,968.87 for the year ending November 30, 1878, of which $875.00 has been paid out during the year ending June 30, 1879, leaving a balance of $4,093.87 in hand for the year ending November 30, 1879. The Treasurer is now ready to make an audit of the accounts of the Association for the year ending November 30, 1879.

Students, as well as the public at large, should become acquainted with the fact, that at the Republic-ian office they can procure printed letter paper and envelopes at but a slight advance of the usual prices of stationery at retail.

It is now becoming the custom for private parties, as well as those in business, to use printed station-

Last Wednesday, Oct. 27th, Miss Lin-

Mr. H. C. Coffman, a druggist on South English. The wedding took place at the home of the bride near Oasis, and the tions are of a very excellent sort, we proudly extend them, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Coffman much happiness and property in their new home on South English.

It appears that the wedding fever is going violently among the University alumni and alumnae. O. S. Fellows and A. T. Freo were married on the 14th, Miss Ela Hamilton on the 20th, Floa J. Camp on the 21st, Linne Hunter and Iva Miller on the 27th. Nell Custor was married not long since. We fear that as we go to press another knot is being tied, of which we do not learn. Let the good work go on. October has been a beautiful month, November may be as beautiful. The disease must be taken, and they say it is a lovely thing to have.
May God bless all the patients.

are in for perpetrating the usual kind of Halloween jokes. If when that night ends a common week, it be some harmless desk-jive is played, in which everything is to be laughed at and nothing regreted, then we have no objections to it. But when some one is seriously inconvenienced, property destroyed and private premises invaded, we have no word of paliament. A joke is no joke when it is an insult, a robbery, or in any way a violation of law. Those jests on fun may have no considerable purpose at first, yet when they collage together and turn themselves in the path that leads to mischief, they are quite apt to go too far. We sincerely hope that none of the boys, to-morrow night, will be compelled to form a more intimate con-quaintances with the "cops," than has which exists, and we hope that none will so near it as to only save themselves by virtue of being fleet of foot.
Jokes at any time that are not practical, are by far the least objectionable. If you must indulge in a prank, play it as possible, since it will be Sabbath.

THE APOSTLE OF TEMPERANCE.

By A. R. Noble.

We learn from example more than from precept. The question, "what can I do, is intimately related to what oh! have done. Sympathy for human effort gives to biography its enduring charm, and the force of example clothes it with practical results.

Ireland, some fifty years ago, threw open three in quick response to the voice of a single man preaching what was then a new reform. Within three months 150,000 had joined. In 80,000 of these the habits of Cork had enveloped themselves under its banner. Although a little band of Quakers had maintained a "Total Abstinence Association" for several years, the war was new. In Ireland, the United States were also wonderfully successful, but less marked than in Ireland. It is there that his work merits especial study. And there it is that it had to be, largely, a natural outgrowth of the needs of the time. Drunkenness was so fearfully prevalent, and sweeping the Irish so rapidly toward the bankruptcy of the nation, that it was not difficult to see that the tares could not be pulled out without plucking up the wheat also. Many of his converts, likewise, attached a superstitious significance to his medals, believing them charms possessed of a magical influence. We rejoice that the day of such superstitions is rapidly passing away, but we must not forget that no man could have accomplished Father Mathew's work without adhering to the beliefs of the time.

His labors in England, Scotland, and the United States were also wonderfully successful, but less marked than in Ireland. It is there that his work merits especial study. And there it is that it had to be, largely, a natural outgrowth of the needs of the time. Drunkenness was so fearfully prevalent, and sweeping the Irish so rapidly toward the bankruptcy of the nation, that it was not difficult to see that the tares could not be pulled out without plucking up the wheat also. Many of his converts, likewise, attached a superstitious significance to his medals, believing them charms possessed of a magical influence. We rejoice that the day of such superstitions is rapidly passing away, but we must not forget that no man could have accomplished Father Mathew's work without adhering to the beliefs of the time.

This was the time of O'Connell's agitation for the "repeal of the Union." With his wonderful eloquence he had aroused his countrypeople to a feverish expectancy. And one of the distinctive features of his teaching was that to combat a single crime was to delay the long awaited liberation of Ireland. So, when Father Mathew showed how intemperance caused crime, that seal which has often led Irishmen to suffer and dare for their country, gave an increased impetus to the new reform. Besides, this was the first temperance wave. No thought of the evil that must be yielded up, the masses on the island, would leave on the shore.

Thus a combination of circumstances prepared the way for that remarkable impulse, which has given its great leader the richly-meditated title, "The Apostle of Temperance."

It would be unjust to criticise him because the reform did not endure in all the granaries of its first proportions. Not all who sign the pledge to-day can keep it. Appetite and habit were far as difficult to overcome then as now, and it was but natural that many should fail. In immediate effects no temperance orator has ever surpassed him, and who shall say that any have equalled him in ultimate results.

He labored at a time of intense bitterness between Protestants and Catholics. But in his presence, this prejudice was totally disarmed, and the involuntary testimony paid him by the very people as well as Catholics will ever stand an enduring monument to the nobility and grandeur of his character.

His entire life was one of constant activity. His intensely practical nature knew but one object, and that a philanthropic one: to improve the condition of those about him. Was choler devastating the land? His post was in the hospital at the side of the plague stricken. Was it intemperance that was leading so many to ruin? His voice rose strong and clear, urging them to assert their manhood and gain that grandest liberty of all: freedom from self-torture. Was it the famine that dropped like a pall over the land, closely endangered that the tares could not be pulled out without plucking up the wheat also? Many of his converts, likewise, attached a superstitious significance to his medals, believing them charms possessed of a magical influence. We rejoice that the day of such superstitions is rapidly passing away, but we must not forget that no man could have accomplished Father Mathew's work without adhering to the beliefs of the time.

Standing of the theatre. The audience Mr. Thomas M. Johnson, Jr. and Charlie Bell, The Academy in front of the Student, Mr. John Wilson, Jr.

We have the following from the Mt. Pleasant, N. C., Sun concerning B. R. Galer, B. Ph. '95, who has been connected with Howe's Academy at that place since his graduation: Prof. Galer's ability as an instructor has never before been surpassed in the history of the school. At present he is giving a series of lectures on astronomy, for the benefit of the students during the fall and winter. The third was given Tuesday evening his subject being, "The Solar System in Detail." He treated his subject in his usual plain, practical and comprehensive manner, and all express themselves highly pleased.

The Star Theatre was crowded last evening when Messrs. Lester and Allen, and their troop of negroes began an engagement. When the concert went up there was a long line of persons in front of the box office wanting to purchase tickets, and when the performance was finished it was impossible to find standing room in the auditorium of the theatre. The audience was very liberal in its applause, and the wearies of the burned cork had no reason to complain of lack of enthusiasm on the part of their listeners. Messrs. Lester and Allen were well received, and Mr. George Byrdom came in for a fair share of the applause. In the after-piece "Mark of Blackberry rules," the Mme. Mathieu was the small boy, as John L. Sullivan, Jr. and Charlie Mitchell, Jr., created roars of laughter by the earnest manner in which they handled the choreography. - New York Times, Aug. 17th, 1886.
