LITERARY DEPARTMENT

The author of the following poem taken from a Chicago Daily is, well-known in Iowa City and University circles.

Still in Fashion

Shakespeare wrote a queer tale once
About a certain lady,
With little sense, and less of heart.
And little of the other kind.
A fairy coat, in fairy sprite
Had thrown her in a spell;
A state wherein the difference
Of ass and man she couldn’t tell.
A doxey’s ears may often hide
The brains of author, wit, and ye.
For what a moment follow still
The fashion that “Vitality” set.

Commencement at Tufts.

About six miles out of Boston, on the Boston & Lowell R. R. one comes to a station called College Hill. This hill, which is prominent in Somerville, is the seat of the college. It is a short distance from the main road to the top of the hill, on the pavement, but the easier way is to go up the steps of the reservoir, which is on a level with the college grounds, and directly north of them. From this reservoir, which supplies Cambridge, one can have a fine view of the country. Thirteen villages can be counted; the glide dome of the state-house, and Bunker Hill monument, can be plainly seen.

Commencement is certainly the most pleasant time to visit a college. I arrived at the Hill a few days before the festivities, and in the little time I had before they commenced, I spent looking around.

One of the handsomest of the many buildings on the campus is Goddard Chapel. It is built of rough-hewn stone, low, and wide, with a high square tower on one corner. One end is covered with “Boston Ivy”; this ivy though, for all its fine name, differs little from the common climbing ivy. However, it gives the exterior a very artistic appearance, and prepares us for the greater beauty of the interior decoration—wood work, windows, and pipe-organ.

Barsum’s museum is also built of stone but not at all in the style of the chapel. P. T. Barnum, whom the college boys have since immortalized in a song, donated either the specimens, or the funds for erecting the building, perhaps both. But of all these buildings, the most mysterious in appearance is the gymnasium. Set apart from all the others, with its high windows in the rear, its broad, low, and arched proportions, it excites the inquiry of strangers. “Oh, that’s our prize!” says the student—but he says it lovingly.

This, then, was the end of the year. The seniors, having laid off their dignity, were already playing the roles of active students; the juniors, too, were looking out for a position. But although they held the bright side of their affairs to all other students, yet

OUR COLUMN.

The Night of the Banquet.

C. E. Hutchings.

She was a guileless girl, for she was young; she was pretty, for she was a Freshman girl; and, as she came alone down the walk past the Main Building, a glance at her face, with its far-away look, told that she was unconscious of the stare’s of the Laws on the front steps. It was plain she was lost in thought on exalted themes. And so, of course, it was only an accident—that simplest sort of an incident—that a note fell from her book, just as she turned to go down the east walk, and fell near—suspiciously near, as certain persons afterwards remembered—a certain person who sat at some distance from the other boys on the walk.

At any other time this Sophomore would have been gentlemanly enough to write an article upon the consequences; but it was nearly time for the Freshman banquet, and it was more than probable that this Freshman girl’s note contained information the Sophomores wanted—not nothing concerning the date of the banquet—oh, no; that had been given away long before by one not a girl, of course. So, instead of instantly returning the note to the fair girl, this gentlemanly Sophomore hastily read it, first the address,—Iowa Avenue, City, and then the note, which was not sealed:

“Mr. X.—Certainly. Call for me at North Clinton Street, at eight o’clock. You are going up to C.—room after drill, you said, to stay there until time to go, and you will not expect you from that direction. I have not the slightest idea to see about Sophomore, you have waited an hour or two for you to come out of your room. Years, friends, and I beg you to excuse me, except I should be there with a chaperone ready. I will be there with a chaperone ready.”

Clinton Street, at eight o’clock,” said the Soph to himself, as he slipped the note into the envelope.

“He’s on to respond to a toast, too. We’ll be there to meet him.” Then, instantly replacing his grin of delight with an expression of amusement, he started down the broad stone walk, overtook Miss M.—by the time she had reached the post-office, and said, as he touched his hat;

“Pardon me—haven’t you dropped a note? I thought I saw this fall as you passed, and I have just overtaken you.”

“Why, yes,” she said, with easy look, starting up, “I was only going to visit the post-office; I didn’t even know it was open.”

Reserved for the last was the crowning event of the week, that is as necessary to commencement as the exercises themselves—the commencement dance.

Not the least memorable event of that delightful week was a concert given by the Glee and Banjo Clubs. Of the numbers on their program was the “grasshopper” cutata, produced in an impassible manner, their famous “P. T. Brown and Little Dick song; and, variations of the “warble.” Thus passed commencement.

A snatch of song is floating through the air, and, to show my sentiments, I repeat the first verse: radiant with beauty and resonant with wit.

“Hurr’ah for the Brown and Blue! Rah, rah, rah, Tuffs!”

"What was the matter last night?" says a chorus, next morning. "It's caught a wretched cold, lying on the ground, and we didn't even see that man X. - the victim who was left for never came," he adds, sorrowfully.

His friend looks amused.

"Well, the fellow you wanted came to the hotel early. The carriage that was driven rapidly up the Avenue from the east, and got out alone before we could do anything."

Edition.

S. S. Wright leaves the last of this week or first of next to "stamp" the fourth district.

A. P. Stiefel, Senior Law, went to Mt. Pleasant, Friday - on business of a Sunday evening nature, it is imagined.

Question: "If my horse is in your barn and the barn burns down, what becomes of the horse?"

Answer: "It's gone up."

A cablegram to J. E. Mershon, from Milan, Italy, is to the effect that his sister, Miss Emma Mershon, made her debut in Opera, in that city, the past week, scoring a decided hit.

The Seniors were installed in their new room, Wednesday. The event was celebrated with a chorus of yells, and cat calls, which would have put a crossroads church choir on its mettle to beat.

Mr. Elliott, a graduate of the Law Department, S. U. L., in 80, visited his Alma Mater Monday. He told the boys that the graduates of Iowa's University were "getting there" all over the great West.

The Junior class had three additions during the last week. Waldo Becker, of Davenport, Chas. E. Humm, of Des Moines, Marion Wappl, of Mitchellville. We are glad to welcome these gentlemen to our number.

The Denison Review announces the marriage, at Denison, Iowa, on the 8th inst., of M. T. Kuehnle, of that place, and Miss Lillie M. Lamb, youngest daughter of the Hon. H. C. Lamb, also of Denison. The groom is a graduate in classical and Law courses of the S. U. L., and is now Junior member of the law firm of Straw & Kuehnle, of his home city. Here goes an old shoe.

Commencing as early as a date as can be made up, Professor d' Anjou will deliver a series of special lectures, evenings, continuing throughout the year. During this fall term the Roman Law will be discussed, the History of Institutions being the subject of the winter course, followed, in the spring term, by a consideration of the common law down to the time of the second Edward, beginning with the first traces of that system, or, rather, growth, as found in the Germanic of the Tactatus. That this will prove a valuable addition to the advantages enjoyed by the students of this department, it is scarcely necessary to add.

Foster, better known to his Senior friends as "Foss" - much as it may sound like it, this abbreviation is not intended to convey the idea of a fossil, and don't you forget it - went down into Madison township Friday night, and rattled the bones of Thomas Jefferson for the decoction of: the natives and in the interest of the party of Demon - the people, the g. o. p., which, though she's frequently and thoroughly "licked," will never die. Foster has not been interviewed nor has a croak been heard from the inhabitants since his speech, but it is imagined that Foss tore the Republican party into strips, chewed the strips and spat them out all over the surrounding country. If we have missed our guess, we should like to be set right by the Madonnians - that is, if there are any left down there and who, at present, care enough for the things of this world to communicate with us.

Students wishing good pocket knives, scissors, razors, revolvers, guns, ammunition, files, plectra, etc., should not fail to see us. We also have a gunsmith. Guns and rifles for rent.

THE BANQUET.

They have come and gone once again—the speech—the toast—the banquet—likewise "the dollars of our dad.
There were the usual number of narrow escapes, the usual amount of humiliating circumstances attendant upon appearing in ragged uniforms, wretched clothes, disheveled hair; the customary anxious expectancy of the fair ones, but the "goodies" were none the less palatable, nor the speeches none the less eloquent, nor the dance none the less enjoyable, nor the beautiful girls in beautiful costumes none the less beautiful.
Three years only fortunate ones succeeded in being entrapped and spirited away for a time—and we can imagine their bliss on their return at being fed on a pedestal and profoundly worshipped. By eleven o'clock, the lambs were all in the fold and all was mirth, movement and happiness. The repast was worthy of the occasion, and after Rev. H. O. Pratt had invoked a Divine blessing upon it, he received the undivided attention of each and every one.

Owing to the absence of the President, C. E. Hutchings, Alhur Chaffee very graciously assumed the duties of toastmaster. Eight toasts were responded to with wit and eloquence which will henceforth be characteristic of class '90; they were as follows:

Girls of '93, "What cannot beauty, joined with virtue, gain," Murray Campbell.
Boys of '93, "Beauty is excelled by many grace and wisdom, which alone is truly fair," Miss M. Eliza Willis.
Married and Married, from the New World and the Old," Miss Frances L. Rogers.

The banqueters, "Des Forsch ist schau aber noch schauster ist derenje der ihm faucht," Class of 90.

Sequenx,

"But optics sharp it needs, I ween, To see what is not to be seen," Miss Luella H. Head.

Iowa,

"The roses, Iowa; we use the, The honey, all our works, with which, we base,"

President Schaeffer.

On account of the unavoidable absence of President Schaeffer, the toast master read this response.

Teraphsore,

"Youth and pleasure meet, To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Rush Butler.

This last response was the signal for the "first waltz," and then twenty glad hearts were made glad, and twenty pairs of tired ankles were made more tired, or more tilled, and twenty flushed faces were made more flushed, but the enjoyment was equated. We do not think that the hours were very "long" or very "small" when they needed must separate, but we are quite positive that they were not heeded. It was a pretty party—a success—and no small amount of the success was due to the exertions of the Reception Committee, Misses Anna Perkins, Miss D. and Maggie Greenan, and Misses Rush Butler and Almy Chaffee.

We hope May be long and prosperous.

Conundrum for the Juniors—The Physiology says that blutabas is identical with baumaera. Is Wm. Green the same as a M. Riddor?

Since it was understood that the first two rows of seats were reserved for the Seniors, let all those non-Seniors take notice who are in the habit of crowding on to them, especially at the clinics.

According to Chaffin, starrvation is a sensation experienced thrice a day. This statement, at first a trifle缴费 to us, was cleared up when it became known that he boarded at the Rohlf club.

In clinic when Rohlf should have been in class yesterday, he was matching pennies, and betting "flies!"

The above was handed in; but the writer seems to be mistaken in regard to watching eyes. We think that that is all he did do.

Credit, one of the many products of coal tar, has of late been written about, as the best disinfectant in Midwifery, as being a non-irritant to the mucous membranes as are phosphate and the sublimate solutions and as having a non-dissagreeable odor, and when taken internally, is said to be bland and harmless, and the cost below that of carbolic acid.

A rather peculiar accident happened last Friday, before clinic, as a result of misunderstanding between one of our ladies and Roch. The latter, in discharge of his duty as door-keeper vowed that none but those properly armed with the necessary document, would enter the sanctum, but alas, during an unguarded moment, the First years, same along demanding admittance; on refusal of which Will received a stunning blow on the head from the fair one. He has, by this time, partially recovered from the shock, to resume work.

The resolutions of the Board of Regents, last week, requesting the Faculty to expel any students guilty of the offense of intoxication, is indorsed. In no case can it be interpreted as referring to this department, because, first, we have no time to indulge in such luxuries, and, 2d, we know that it is injurious to health as well as ungentlemanly. Surely, the cause for the above resolutions must be looked for further north.

Our last surgical clinic was honored by the presence of Governor Larroche accompanied by Mr. Swalm. After the patients had been disposed of, Prof. Peck introduced the Governor, who was received with tremendous applause, after which he favored us with a short speech, in which he alluded to the present rude hospital facilities. Continuing the chief of the State referred to Dr. Swalm being the most scientific man the S. U. 1. could procure for the chair of surgery. He then yielded the floor to Mr. Swalm, who, also spoke, in strong terms, of the necessity for a new hospital and was willing to guarantee it inside of two years. Then congratulating the students on the prosperity of the S. U. 1. in spite of the fire that had been kindled about it, he said that not only the people of Iowa, but the martyrs themselves who went through it, could rejoice.

Mr. Swalm also impressed on the students that each one ought to be the soul and spirit of his respective legislative representatives in such a way that they would promise to come down with the dust for a new hospital.

We are thoroughly in harmony with the above as any one, familiar with the present conditions, will be and invite all who have a vote for or against this proposition to go to our next legislative body, investigate and be convinced of the fact before voting negatively and thus, perhaps, frustrate such a noble cause. That is the only element of the State which has any influence of advancement of their educational institutions, is evidenced by the patronage this department enjoys since the time of study has been increased to three years.

DENTAL DEPARTMENT

C. Kercher, Editor.

C. A. Marshall spent Sunday in Burlington with his family.

Gen. Gurney went home last Friday and returned on Monday.

Our genius 'Bonnie' seemed to enjoy himself hugely largely on Sunday.

Owing to a severe cold, Prof. Hunt was unable to lecture on Tuesday morning.

Some one said to Riggs "It is too bad; Mas is in the soup." "What Mr. Dun­ ald' said?" "No, Macaroni." Chorus by the gang.

Messrs. Riggs and Spencer had a visit from a former classmate, E. D. Abram, who spent several days in the city this week.

Ed. Taylor, a royal good fellow, was with us last night, arrived Tuesday evening. All of his old classmates were heartily pleased to meet him once again.

An increase in two years of one hundred per cent in the number of students in our department. This ought to tickle that very discerning (?) "investigating committee."

Student in receipt of a pleasant call from his friend, who is engaged in the rubber stamp business in Waterloo. He contemplates entering the Dental Department next year.

C. L. Spray has been sick during the past week. His ill health has obliged him to leave school. We heartily sympathize with Mr. Spray, and the Juniors wish that he be a good, earnest worker from their ranks.

Last Saturday, while playing ball, Morton has broken his knee so badly that he was unable to walk. A cab was called and he was taken to his room, where he will probably be obliged to remain for some days.

One of our boys, having been told of a man, who had swallowed a silver dollar, picked up a skull, and, being unable to pass a dollar through the Foramen Magnum, said—"I knew darned well that fellow was lying."

Thanks to the uniting efforts of Prof. Hunt we are going to have more room. Secretary Haddock has moved his office into the Main building, and his old quarters are being transformed into very nice operating rooms. Let the good work go on.

"There being no lectures on the 11th inst., our boys engaged in a game of baseball." We can not speak of the game as an ardent lover of the game, but our colleague, Mack Spencer, sprained his ankle, and was forced to desist. He has nearly recovered from the injury.

The Junior class met on the 11th inst., for the purpose of organizing. President Marshall, Vice-President Haro, and Secretary Bushong, were elected by a unanimous vote. Through unfortunate circumstances, and after some deliberation, your humble chronicler was chosen, and forced to respond to the cry of Speech! Speech!

That was rather a mean trick that Morton played on Gibson last Friday. It appears that Gib had made arrangements to escort a young lady home. Morton happened to be a "regular monster" praised so curiously at his virtues that he finally bid Gib's hat, and while the little fellow was wildly searching for it, and utterly excusable anomalies. Morton proudly and deliberately walked away with the fair one.

RICHMOND STRAIGHT CUT NO. 1 CIGARETTES.

Cigarette smokers who are anxious to pay a little less than the price charged for the ordinary "name" of the present day will find the result of their inquiry in RICHMOND, V. fhian, and the fact that no "NAME, MANUFACTURER, or CIGARETTES, is sold." The price is a full measure of the goods. Always inquire about "NAME OF MANUFACTURER, and observe that the finishes of labels is all in every package.

Last Monday Mrs. Trippe being absent, Mr. Hillman took the chair in Geomentry. All did nicely, even the boys.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Engineering students was held in the Chemistry lecture room, Tuesday evening, to organize an engineering society. A constitution was adopted, and the following officers elected: Pres., C. A. Lichten; Vice-Pres., J. H. Hess; Secy. and Treasurer, A. H. Brown. The object of the society is to have at least one paper read at each meeting on some engineering, or allied subject, followed by a general discussion. A part of the program will also be given to voluntary reports, as well as to reviews of the prominent engineering magazines, by such members as are appointed for that purpose. A nearly similar organization was effected during the winter of '84-5, but owing to the small number of students in the department at the time, it was soon abandoned. At present we think the move is decidedly a good one, and we hope it has come to stay, as it will undoubtedly be a valuable source of information to those interested in this line of work. The meeting will undoubtedly be held each Tuesday evening, in Prof. Jameson's lecture room, and all those interested are invited to be present.
