They can do no more than they have been trained and equipped with tools to do. Nor can the students be blamed for wishing to study at home, for the law has none when it is absolutely necessary to have a laboratory or the scientific equipment in order to study their chosen profession and understand the branches of the law. And it is evident in many cases that the law students were taking their work at home and doing it with a good deal of effort and perseverance.

We have, however, a number of students who are working hard and doing a good job. They are taking their work at home and doing it with a good deal of effort and perseverance. It is evident in many cases that the law students were taking their work at home and doing it with a good deal of effort and perseverance.

Not long ago an article appeared in the Vidette-Reporter containing a plan for the management of the Vidette, and also advising material changes in the paper itself. The writers were not only in possession of the manuscript, and the writer desires to voice the sentiments of many of the students, besides giving his own view of the subject. First, we wish to take exceptions to the plan because it proposes to form an S. U. I. Vidette-Reporter Association, comprising the five members only. First, this should not give those persons who are members of literary societies any voice in the matter. Second, if we under this plan, it would necessitate the bearing of the expense, or the dividing of the profits, by the societies. This suggests a greater difficulty, viz., if, according to the proposal, the present sheet should be enlarged and the number of advertisements lessened, so that it would be necessary to advance the price to $3.00, would there be anyone who would be willing to undertake the business management of the paper under such circumstances? If news could be found to take the work, would it be best to have one or two to take this place? Obviously not. There would be no necessity to encourage the manager to try to obtain advertisements, and unless he was a very conscientious individual he would not exert himself to collect subscriptions. Now it is very easy to tear down a plan and fail to adopt it to, but quite a different matter from suggesting a new project. We cannot help thinking that the present method is a good one, only that the number of editors chosen from each society was suggested be reduced to the paper to the point, we have never considered it could not be considerable to enlarge the sheet. The best remedy consists, probably, in lowering the number of advertisements, and charging more for the same amount of space. This would give more room for literature, and the paper would be materially improved. This would enhance the value of the paper, making it worth say $1.25 per year. The circulation would undoubtedly be increased since the paper would be worth more.

The writer feels that a criticism would not be out of order while he has the opportunity to make it. The Vidette in its past has not been supported as it should be. Too many students have not subscribed for their college papers. They depend upon reading one or two others' work. Why, I have heard students kid because the Vidette was not placed upon the reading table in the library.

In conclusion, we would add that something should be done before the time for spring election in the way of arranging and equalizing the number of editors. The quality of a product depends largely upon the proper time to talk about such things, and the article writes criticisms and additions to his schemes.

Dancing School.

As the season advances, the Dancing School becomes more and more popular and Mrs. Travis feels much encouraged at the success which attended to the readiness with which her pupils take up the new steps. This is one of the best schools we have ever seen here, and at the same time affords a most popular means of instruction. Dancing as a mode of physical training, is a good accomplishment of mental development, and it is a pleasant recreation. No relaxation from the mental strain of the work. More of our boys and girls should take advantage of the remaining lessons. The music is invaluable and the door unimpaired.

ACADEMY COLUMN.

VENICE E. ROYSEY, GEORGE C. HENRY.

Miss Clark is on the sick list.

What are the news of the筋 on so many meetings?

He! He! He! Hurrah for the class of ’97.

Several of the Cadets took part in the entertainment given at Fairview church, a few miles east of the city.

The Central has been postponed till Saturday evening, March 8. Don’t miss it, for it’s the chance of a lifetime.

The Virgins will complete the fourth book, Monday morning. The class will omit the fifth book and begin the sixth.

Prof. N. Evans honored the Philomathian society with his presence, last Friday, and at the close entertained them very pleasantly with a short speech.

The Latin class has departed from the usual course in that branch, and has taken up a new work which is to be a steadily-building foundation of the Reader’s Grammar.

The Zetaalhains have purchased a numismata pin. The Athenians think, however, that they can be equally distinguished by their intellectual looks without having a nosepin.

The Juniors held a meeting on Monday and also one on Thursday. Both were very lively and exceedingly interesting. The class now enrolls over thirty members, and it means business.

The Zetaalhains think they have a good joke on the Athenians. But it is as much of a ruse as they think we the Alh’s enjoyed their program very much last Friday afternoon. The only criterion we would give is, that it worked. We are glad our sister Zetas are making progress and will be pleased to make them another call some day.

LAW DEPARTMENT.

F. E. MILLER, Editor.

The Juniors had their examinations in Contracts last Monday afternoon.

E. F. Sawyer’s father was taking in the sights about the city and University last Sunday and Monday.

The Tabor College Educational Notes has been discontinued. In its stead comes the Tabor Phil Delta, a year good looking journal.

The young women of the “Women’s College” in connection with the Northwestern University, are making a tight little trip for better accommodations. The Chicago Tribune is assaying them.

A PROJECT is on foot to form an Inter-Collegiate Oratorical League, between the University of Michigan, University of Wisconsin, the University of Minnesota and Northwestern University. A good idea indeed.

In the Michigan Alumnus of recent date, we find the following: “Even and hardened and scared beings as College editors, are not wholly free from the trepidations of examination week.

In view of this it has usually been permitted them to suspend journalistic duties during the aforesaid critical time. The present Board feels both to break in upon so beautiful a custom and accordingly no issue of this paper will appear next Saturday.” What’s the matter, Mr. Hufnagel, staff trying this plan?

The Signposts:

Should we not have a wider range of choice in selecting our students, or have them in the last two years of the course? The Zetaalhains have described the studies of these two years are largely optional with the student, thus enabling him to study in the line of his particular vocation. A knowledge of the coefficient of the various species of his master’s consumption is indispensable to one who intends to teach scientific branches or to engage in the manufacture of thermometers, but to others this kind of learning is only a “wasteh of the desk,” and might well be dispensed with for something more desirable or practically useful.

Brother, it’s because those two years of “optional” studies cost too much. Where there are elective studies there you will find the cost of instruction taxed twice as great. But this can be done because the system pays. If you try it once you will have to other.

The Harperian, University of Nebraska:

Several important changes have been made in this University, during the present school year; the first preparatory year has been abolished, and a new term marking with letters instead of with figures, has been introduced, and now by way of experiment it has been decided to dispense with orations by the graduating class at Commencement, and instead of this old worn-out exercise, to employ some prominent occasion to address us. All these changes are in the line of progress. It is about time for us to lay aside the customs of small Colleges and high schools and mark our position where we propose to belong. It is to be hoped that the same wise adoption for next Commencement will be made permanent and that in the future there will be no more debate between the Senate class and the Faculty in deciding who shall and who shall not deliver orations at Commencement.

Two very interesting articles that will repay any one for the reading have lately come out in the Popular Science Monthly. The first, “Plain Words on the Woman Question,” by Grant Allen, appeared in December, 1893, the other, a reply, by Mrs. M. P. Armstrong, “The Mission of Educated Women,” appears in the same issue of 1893. The first, very natural, is taken wholly from a man’s point of view, and is decidedly scientific and statistical. The author fails notably in one point, by not taking into consideration the fact that it is lately conceded that woman is capable of being and should be man’s equal and companion.

He says: “The first duty is to be pretty.” Plainly in his mind this is all that is necessary to make her attractive to the other sex. He forgets that prettiness doesn’t wear well, while a cultured mind is a lasting companionship. Mrs. Armstrong voices the sentiments of many educated ladies in a co-educational institution. She treats the somewhat archaic subject in a very bright, original and unprejudiced way. The present Board feels both to break in upon so beautiful a custom and accordingly no issue of this paper will appear next Saturday.” What’s the matter, Mr. Hufnagel, staff trying this plan?

Muriel Halsted will begin in the April number of The Cosmopolitan, the cure of a new department called “Review of Current Events,” in which he will discuss the leading topics of the day with a non-partisan touch. The same number will contain the first article by Miss Missand upon her “Fishing Trip Around the World:” “The Fighting Forces of Germany,” by Paul Whitney Bigelow, “Princeton College, By Professor Marquand, and several other important articles, all elaborately illustrated. The novel of the number will be “George Washington’s Last Duel” by Thomas Nelson Page, Archibald Forbes, the renowned war correspondent of the London Graphic is preparing for The Cosmopolitan a series of articles on “Great Battles,” in different periods of this world’s history, treating them all with the vividness of a war-eye-witness, and his comrade, Frederick Villiers, will illustrate them in the same realistic style. The Cosmopolitan will publish soon several articles by Henry George growing out of his visit to Australia.

A Freshman knows everything; he has explored the universe and has proved all things. A Sophomore has the wisdom of an owl, but like that sedate bird keeps it to himself. A Junior knows a little, but begins to be a little doubtful about it. A Senior knows nothing, and is at least as bad as the Freshman. This is supposed to explain the fact that so much information can be found in our colleges. The Freshman brings in a supply of knowledge, and the Senior takes none of it. —Spontaneous.

THE VIDETTE-REPORTER.
The contest edition of the Iowa "Wedges" displayed enterprise worthy of a large daily. While parts of the report show hasty preparation, on the whole it is an excellent piece of work. The first page contained a very good picture of Mr. W. Scott Prouty, President of the State Association. In speaking of Mr. Prouty, the Wedges says: "Mr. Prouty presided at the contest with much grace and dignity. In fact Mr. Prouty's whole official career has been a most excellent one. Few men indeed have such executive ability." Of Lyon, it says: "Mr. M. H. Lyon of the State University, spoke of 'individualism in Society.' His production was the most excellent of the most excellent poems delivered in the College Association. His voice was a trifle harsh at times, but what he lacked in that direction he doubly made up in enthusiasm and magnanimity. Mr. Lyon is a young man of exceedingly brilliant parts." From the account we learn that all the contestants are Seniors, except Lyon, who is a Sophomore; six are Republicans; two are prohibitionists; two are Baptists; two are Methodists; one a Presbyterian and one a Congregationalist. Not a bad combination. The decision of the judges was highly satisfactory.

On Friday night, March 14, Mr. Newton Beers, the well-known actor, will give to the public his first, and production of Tennessee's master poet, Mr. Beers has given to an enormous expense in the production of this grand musical drama and it is said by the press in general, especially the New Orleans journals, that his "Enoch Arden" surpasses the expectations of those who witnessed the play. The scenery, consisting of fifteen thousand, is said to be the finest ever staged. Quaint Cornish dances and delightful old Cornish airs interspersed throughout the play, making it altogether a most enjoyable entertainment.

The appearance of the program of regulations for the spring term calls out from students the usual amount of washing and guessing of teeth. Some try to submit gracefully to the inevitable. Others do not, because they cannot. Has it ever occurred to the Faculty of S. U. I. that in justice to each student the program of recitation for a year, or better, for his whole course, should be published at the beginning of each year? Why not devote a few pages in the catalogue each year to the program of recitation for the succeeding four years? This means the voice of reminding which is no hind this week, will be stilled for ever.

We hear that the students should refuse to time as their for department. M it how it is that the two or even three have , acquaintances in the friendly feeling? A certain but we have no who often in the of which cause the seniors to graduate on the. The seniors in in the joining the a law class, and a grand company hopes some day their diploma, and he will it be impossible in his thoughts the class spirit is all too far. Great growth is ing elsewhere less and probably more. But would not it be a have held them some. One speaker won the very best's proceeds, the others in their places in and then is finished in one body, it is enough than to have been to witness some
