The Base Ball Team.
The Editor of the Vidette:

DEAR SIR,—As the base ball season draws near, I am more and more puzzled by the silence of the University papers. I think I am right in saying that neither as a team nor as individuals have the base ball men received any criticism, either from the Quill or Vidette. Now I have watched the base ball practices with a great deal of interest, and while I must confess that my knowledge of the game is far too slight for me to venture upon technical criticism, still I can not resist the temptation to suggest some possible dangers in the general management of the team. For the art of captaincy is much the same in a crew as in track athletics. The foremost thing for a captain to keep in mind is that he must have a team that can safely be left where it was when he took hold of it. Captains are appointed just because every one realizes that no athlete is the same two years in succession, and it is the duty of the captain to find out the exact condition of every man under his control, and then to bring each one as nearly as possible into balance with all the rest, thus converting a squad into a team. Any captain who fails to grasp this conception of his work is unfit for the position, and ought to be put out of the way.

Now it is not my purpose to point out every fault with the University ball team, but there are a few questions demanding answers, not in words, but in deeds, which ought at the beginning of every season to be put to every team. Is it wise early in the spring to hand over particular positions to particular men, and thus do away with the stimulus of competition? Is it safe to let any player for a single moment take his practice as a joke? Does the captain appreciate the difference between the work of a captain and the work of an ordinary player? Finally, does he realize how much easier it is to ruin a team than to make it?

I do not attempt to answer these questions myself, for I know nothing of the inner workings of the team, and my point of view is that of the impatient outsider; still, as I said before, the art of captaining is the art of capting, and the questions which I have put are all of them in point. Permit me, too, as an apology for this note, to remind you that in all things pertaining to danger and failure in athletics, Harvard men, by sad experience, know whereof they speak.

Yours very respectfully,
N. W. STEPHENSON.

Ninety-five vs. Ninety-three.
The first regular game of the Inter-Class Base Ball League was played at the park on Saturday afternoon. The contesting teams were from the classes of '96 and '93, and although the former were defeated, they played a much stronger batting game than their opponents. '96's strength lay in their battery, Neal and Larrabee doing good work. McKinley and German held the points for '93.

There were about 150 persons present when Umpires Park and Pratt took their positions and called the game. The admission charge of five cents resulted quite satisfactorily, and about $5.25 was netted.

The Freshmen went to bat first, Gundersolus and German going out, but German and Maffit succeeded in crossing the plate on several errors and a sacrifice. '96 were unable to get a man past second until the third inning, when Stover scored a run on a base on balls and several errors. Peak scored the next three runs for the Freshmen, in the second, fourth and seventh innings. Their last run was made in the eighth, when Johnson scored on his own hit, and a lift given Gilmore by Myers' error, Gilmore also scoring. Total eight. The fourth inning for '93 resulted disastrously for '93. Why Johnson should have been substituted for McKinley, when the latter was pitching a fairly good game, has caused some comment, but the outcome of it was five runs for '93. With Larrabee and More on bases, Neal hit to center for two bases, scoring both of the above, and then Myers delighted the crowd by making a clean hit and bringing in Neal. Sanford scored Myers on a two base, and himself on an error.

In the sixth Butler made a good fly catch, and by a quick throw to Stover retired Johnson and Ingham. "In the seventh, with two men out, and, Gruwell, Stover and More on bases, Myers refused the chance of a life time and struck out. The following is the score by innings:

Baconian Club.

An unusually large audience was present at the Baconian Club Friday evening.

Dr. Andrews, the essayist, delivered a paper on "Philipp Aurelius Theophrastus Paracelsus Bombastus von Hohenheim and his Times." Paracelsus, who lived from 1503-1541, was the first alchemist to advance the theory that the book of Nature must be studied as well as those of the great scholars. All substances were in his opinion made up of three ingredients, mercury, sulphur, and salt,—mercury the fluid, sulphur the combustible, and salt the non-combustible portion of the substance. His theories in regard to the Lapis philosophorum were told in an interesting manner, and much was learned concerning the ideas of chemistry which obtained at this time.

Voluntary reports were offered by Professor Patrick on "The Origin of the Theories of the Four Elements of Aristotle," and Professor McBride on "The Cantilever Bridges of Switzerland." The next paper will be by Mr. Slatek.

Erodophilian.

Erodophilian Hall was filled Saturday evening to hear the first programme given by the society this term. Although shortened by the inability through sickness of one of the speakers to appear, the programme made up for this in the spirit with which it was carried out.

Mr. Joe Koza opened with a well performed violin solo which was heartily encored. Katherine Barber in a few farewell words resigned the Presidency to her successor, Frances Rogers, who in a brief and graceful speech thanked the society for the honor conferred upon her.

Emma Kalkofen recited a selection from the prettiest portion of the Courtship of Miles Standish, the proxy wooing of the Puritan maiden, after which the question "Which is the happiest, the English, French, German or American Girl?" was discussed by Mary McQuire, Kate Bostedt, Katherine Barber and Jessie Whinnery, the speeches showing considerable originality.

Zuzlma Kostomtatsky gave Chap. II of the Erodophilian serial—The Story of Hildegard's career as a Freshman at the S. U. I. A talk on the character and life of Walt Whitman by Jessamine Jones was followed by a college song given by the Erodophilian chorus. crowd ought to greet the players of the next game. Class yells and class colors might win the victory.

Bahama Expedition.
A meeting was held in Professor Calvin’s room last Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of making plans in regard to the proposed Bahama expedition of 92. It was found that there were more applicants for passage than could possibly be accommodated; especially was this true of the women desiring to be members of the party. Professor Nutting addressed those present, and placed in the strongest light all the inconveniences incident to such a voyage, yet the enthusiasm did not abate. It appears to be a settled fact that the expedition will actually take place.

THE VIDETTE - REPORTER.

TUESDAY, THURSDAY AND SATURDAY AT NOON.
Entered at the Post Office at Iowa City as second class matter, Sept. 17, 1891.

We wish to direct the especial attention of the base ball team and all interested in the work of the same to the consideration which we publish on the first page to-day. The writer of the article is a man who has a good knowledge of his subject, obtained by close observation of the methods of practice and management at the two great centers of college athletics in this country. Our base ball men have two courses from which to choose their own. They may, if they will, profit by the experience of Harvard by steering clear of her mistakes; or they may learn for themselves through the same lack of system that has always beaten Harvard. It stands to reason that the former is the only reasonable course to adopt. The suggestions of our contributor will of course be received in the same friendly spirit in which they are made, and we believe that their adoption will advance the work of the team.

Class enthusiasm is still lacking in the University. At the ball game Saturday its absence was marked. Only a few freshmen cared appear with class colors and but feeble freshman shouts were heard. The lack of enthusiasm on the part of the juniors was even more marked. Although they won the game, an ordinary spectator would hardly be aware of it. As the last freshman was retired in the ninth inning, a low echo of the yell of ‘92 was heard, but that was all. The entire enthusiasm that was manifested came from the grand stand. This was a commendable feature of the game. The crowd was non-partisan in its criticism, which, although mostly adverse, was well received by the players. Several men who knew better were mean enough to enjoy the game without paying the admission fee. A large crowd ought to greet the players of the next game. Class yells and class colors might win the victory.
