The Political Joint Discussion.
A fair sized audience gathered at Chicago University to listen to the presentation of the political issues of the day by representatives of both Democratic and Republican Clubs.

Three speakers appeared for each club, Messrs. Keefe, Hughes and Folk representing the Democrats, and Messrs. Jacobs, Wilcox and Anderson the Republicans. Messrs Evans and Troy, chairmen of the Republican and Democratic Clubs respectively, introduced the speakers.

After a piano solo by Mr. Cohn, Chairman Troy introduced the first speaker, Mr. Keefe, who outlined the issues of the day as he saw them, discussing the pension and silver questions, the industrial legislation and the need for the control of the liquor traffic in and out of the state, and the need for a strong party to maintain the Republic in the state ballot. Mr. Keefe gave his reasons for supporting the Republican party for the governorship of the state. He believed that the Republican party was the party that could control the liquor traffic in the state, and that it was the only party that could do so. He also believed that the Republican party was the party that could best handle the industrial legislation, and that it was the party that was best equipped to handle the pension question.

Mr. Keefe further stated that the Republican party was the party that was best equipped to handle the silver question, and that it was the party that was best equipped to handle the pension question. He believed that the Republican party was the party that was best equipped to handle the pension question, and that it was the party that was best equipped to handle the pension question.

Mr. Keefe then introduced the second speaker, Mr. Hughes, who emphasized the importance of the industrial legislation. He believed that the industrial legislation was the most important question of the day, and that it was the only question that could be handled by the Republican party. He further stated that the Republican party was the only party that was best equipped to handle the industrial legislation, and that it was the only party that was best equipped to handle the industrial legislation.

Mr. Hughes then followed for the Democrats, producing arguments to substantiate the claim of his colleagues which the second speaker had denoted, namely, that the Republican candidate for governor was a "railroad king," and not a friend of the people. He then discussed the liquor traffic in the state, stating that the Republican party was the only party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic, and that it was the only party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic.

Mr. Wilson was the next speaker. He emphasized the charge against the Democratic party, and stated that the Democratic party was the party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic, and that it was the party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic.

Mr. Fitzpatrick then spoke of the separation and national politics of the state, and stated that the Democratic party was the party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic, and that it was the party that was best equipped to handle the liquor traffic.

It appears, upon the evidence of the Unit, that the result of the foot ball meeting between the University and the law school, is not influenced by the University's failure to send any delegates, but is due to the superior ability of the University team. The University team was led by W. H. Brown, who entered college and graduated in 1890, and who is now in the law school.

The Unit and the law school are in agreement that the foot ball game should be resumed, and that it should be played on the University grounds.

It is a fact which we have reason to believe is well known to the Unit, that some of the students of the Unit have been engaged in the manufacture of foot ball equipment, and that they have sold their wares at a high price. We are informed that the Unit has no objection to the sale of foot ball equipment, provided it is sold at a fair price.
