Yesterday was a blue Monday for our ball team when the quasi-professional game from Tulsa came down to bat with their batting clothes on and knocked out thirteen base hits and scored twenty runs against us. We hate to say how it was done, but must confess that the visitors furnished us with a first-class exhibition of base-ball, both in the field and with the stick.

None of our players were in uniform and the arrangement of the team was necessarily changed by the absence of Arey and Larrabee, so that many of the men had to play in new positions. Our "hard hitters" did not seem to be very successful in finding Myers' curves.

Our first two scores were made in the first inning. Maytum hit the second base on an error of Burley, and Griffin, after getting struck by a pitched ball, scored on Burley's, cautious throw to Kempy. The visitors opened up their first inning with two base-hits by McConaughey and Burley, and Miller, which had a rather depressing effect on our players from which they did not entirely recover during the game.

In the second and third innings two and three base-hits followed each other in rapid succession, and six scores were made in each inning. With the bases full McConaughey reached second, and from the right field, which materially lessened our chances for victory.

It was a close call in attendance and game but a Branch success.

Below we give the summary:

It was a very fast game, except from the fifth inning on, when the score was kept up to a point of interest.

Irving.

Last Friday night while the band discoursed inspiring music in the convention hall, the delegates began to arrive for the tenth National Republican Convention. At length, when the last delegation had arrived and the time for opening the convention gone, the chairman of the National Republican Committee subjudged the conference and announced the temporary officers.

The convention then listened to an enthusiastic address by the temporary chairman. On motion the temporary officers were made permanent.

The committee on credentials made its report, admitting all delegations save that of Alabama, which was not.

It is to be regretted that the art of public speaking, much cultivated in our early national life, now receives comparatively little attention in college halls. The intellectual strength of Webster, Clay, and Calhoun was greatly enhanced by their remarkable powers of expression. Oratory, logic, and oratory were to them what science, mathematics, and language are to us. Perhaps our "brave and better" course is worth more in practical life than their logistics, but notwithstanding that fact, it is certain many well educated men of today would be far more eulogized by the public they good public speakers.

Under existing college methods many of the students leave their thoughts on paper in a very respectable way, but probably as many take their diplomas before their acquired skill is sufficient to write a good magazine article. Then out of the number that have attained skill in writing perhaps fewer than half would be able to express their thoughts before an audience. The ability to write well is most desirable, as written thought may be so easily read at the time of its publication, or even during the ages that follow. But the ability to deliver a good extemporaneous speech, and, the power to think while facing an audience are also of great value. In public life an occasion often demands impromptu action; a question is suddenly raised in a deliberative assembly and there is no time to prepare a comprehensive article or an address on the subject. It is then that the capable and fluent speaker, who has acquired the power to think while facing an audience, is of inestimable value.
Wisconsin-Northwestern Debate.
The following is taken from the Daily Cardinal of April 25: "That Wisconsin stands unrivaled in the American arena of college debating was abundantly demonstrated at Central Music Hall, Chicago, last night, when the Badger team came up in their might and rode roughshod over all opposition. Northwestern is sorry to the extent of a manifest vote that it ever threw down the gauntlets to the Cardinal. So clearly did the Badgers out-class their opponents that it took the judges but a moment to come to a conclusion. It was fully as true and complete a victory as that over the "Gophers" a week ago. The press of the country is unanimous in its praise of the confidence and ability of our team and the enthusiastic support of the cheering alumni present. This victory establishes Wisconsin's supremacy in the northwest. Northwestern had defeated Michigan in two consecutive contests and now downs Chicago. Hon. Robert T. Lincoln presided."
