DR. HEBLEY'S LECTURE.

ONE OF THE MOST MAGNIFICENT LECTURES OF THE DAY.

The persons forming the large audience which greeted Dr. Hebley at the Opera House last evening were rewarded in their attempt to hear one of the most magnificent lectures of the day. Dr. Hebley, as an orator in his particular line, and as a lecturer, has few superiors. His decision, power over his audience, and manner of telling his thoughts, are wonderful, and many were the expressions of pleasure and satisfaction given by his hearers.

In considering the subject the speaker attempted to answer the question: "What conduce to the greatest qualities must one have to wear a gilded crown? Some think a strong body is the prime essential for wisdom and happiness. However, Adam and Cain, in their perfect condition and state of innocence, were not wise. On the other hand, the poets, Page and Byron, might have been better fitted than the physical nature for such a crown. But physical instances do not disprove the profoundest success of Herbert Spencer, one of our greatest and most celebrated thinkers, the body, and wisdom is of psychological rather than physiological.

The question: When do these qualities spring from the mind of the individual? As shown by the speaker, many men, as Solomon, Socrates, and Diderot, have been wise in word and deed, but not in their own body. Their own wisdom is often inferior to the plane, practical teaching of experience. A man may be a genius, a Cato, but is dead and characteristic of a perfect man.

Dr. Hebley next portrayed the character of the three competitors for the Johnson County Society's crown. The first, a man whose theme was empire and cities; the second, a poet, with a thought to create a kingdom in the realm of the imagination; the third, in presenting his speech, proved himself to be a man of industry, simplicity, consistency and control. He was so well said to be received the ring. Plato, the son of philosophy's teacher, Socrates, the magnificent prince of the emotions, was not happy or wise in the highest sense. To the one must be added love, to the other lovelessness.

After mentioning numerous other historical characters, as illustrating types of intellectual wisdom, the speaker considered artists and musicians in an attempt to seek an answer to the great question. Here also it was shown that great emotions do not constitute wisdom, but that reason, common sense and conscience must guide into the paths of fame. The words of many poets and great musicians prove this.

Intelligence is not the only thing. A philosopher might be found, attempting to see the world through a hole in a door, and he might be an orator, but he is not trying to solve the mystery by the laws of logic. Emotion is not of prime importance. Self-control, a life filled with action, and conscience, are the supreme measures of wisdom.

The speaker closed with a beautiful tribute to the One whose life stands today as two thousand years ago, for all worth striving for, whose example shows how to be truly wise—Jesus of Nazareth.

In the scope of a brief article it is impossible to mention all the points of such a lecture as "Wisconsin's Herbal Drug," or describe its many strong features. The speaker at no time behind word, but entertaining throughout his entire discourse. His wit and sagacity, and sparkling appearance on the stage full of power and imagination. Above all the lectures are so arranged in that it uplifts and enhances common sense. As enough to be read by one of his stories, each one can truly say, "Dr. Hebley had done me good; he has helped me in solving the problems of life, and pointed out to me the essentials of wisdom."

"Hampton Roads." The new drama, "Hampton Roads," was produced for the first time at Austin, Texas, the following morning of its being written by "the greatest of all the great." The Times Herald.

"Darvantis, Iowa, Dec. 1.—"Hampton Road," a war drama dealing with the Monitor and Merrimac, was produced here to-night to the best audience of the season. The play is by Charles' upon Banks, the Chicago host, and Professor George Cook, of the Iowa State University. The play has been submitted to prominent managers, and will probably be put on the road.

All friends of the University will be gratified to note the success of this production in which Professor Cook has a part. Should in management councils the drama here we feel sure it will be heartily supported by the students and friends of S. U. 1.

At the joint indoor games of the 710th Regiment Baltimore Athletic Association. The scores of the Baltimore gunners, Garrett, of Princeton, put the 10 lb. shot (40 lbs.) 51 ft. This is better than in the field games which a Sound player can make, a perfect, 50 lb. plate glass, which are placed on the bottom. The tank will also be used by the crew for indoor training.

The Yale naval management sent a challenge to the Cornellligtng authori- thies. The challenge is for a duel race, to be run at New London in the spring after the Yale-Harvard race. It is understood that it would be agreeable to Yale to have Cornell enter their race with Harvard and make it a triangular contest, if this should be satisfactory to them. A reply to this challenge has been received from Yale, asking for a conference on the proposal.

The Yale-Harvard debate was a fair contest, and resulted in a fast but close victory for Yale. Taken simply as a debate, it was the least interesting in the Yale-Harvard series. It was direct all the way through. It never hung on the wording of the question. The only point of difference was the question of either side. Another characteristic was the intense interest aroused by essay. The Yales put a lot into the debate by the exact knowledge of the subject shown on both sides, and perfect form of presentation of Harvard, and the convincing earnestness of Yale—Yale News.

F. BENJAMIN ANDREWS.

SUCCEDED AS A SPECIAL-NUMBER OF THE S. U. L. LECTURE COURSE.

To every one who professors to know anything of current events the name of President Andrews, of Brown Uni gersity, calls up the words of last summer, and the final triumph of one of the greatest educators in the world.

No newspaper of the nation but felt compelled to discuss the affect, and few of them but felt forced to take the side of the President. A course of opinion which connected with the action of the alumni of Brown University, caused his complete reinstatement.

In response to repeated invitations, President Andrews will deliver a few lectures in the West, just before the holidays, and will deliver his famous creation on General Sherman here during that time.

He has already spoken in Chicago before the students of the University, and been given a grand reception and banquet by the Faculty of Arts, recognition, receiving the praise of every paper in the city.

President Andrews, in addition to his wonderful personality as a teacher and leader of thought, has a reputation among the eastern universities as one of the most, imposing public speakers on the platform. His thought is elevating, his language stilted, but exact. It has been said of him that "Despite the success he has attained as a president of a University and a teacher, a great success would assuredly have been had he entered the lecture field." It will be a grand treat to hear him, and an opportunity perhaps never to be had again, as his duties in the city are necessarily confining.

The United States is the only nation in the world that spends more money on education than on war equipment. The Faculty of the University of North Carolina recently abolished the system of awarding honors to the Freshmen, Sophomores and Junior classes.

On February 10, 1899, Columbia University will open its new gymnasium which has been built at a cost of $60,000. The building will include the exercise hall, a booth room, a room for boxing and wrestling, and a swimming and rowing tank, which is the best equipped in the world. The exercise hall is 130 feet long, 130 feet broad, and 26 feet high. Suspended 22 feet above the floor is a running track, 22 feet broad, which extends all around the building, making nine laps to the mile. In the basement below the gymnasium proper, is the swimming tank, semi-circular in shape, with a diameter of 100 feet, and a depth ranging from five to ten feet. This is the first to be illuminated by electric lights, protected by a screen of glass, which are placed on the bottom. The tank will also be used by the crew for indoor training.

The New York Times reports that the Yales and Harvards are making a tour of the American universities in the interests of the students' volunteer movement.

The University medical schools will be gratified to know that F. W. Hasekell, correspondent for the Marshalltown Times Republican from Des Moines, has generously corrected his misstatements with regard to the medical department of this institution. In his first article Mr. Hasekell condemned every medical college in Iowa as poorly equipped and lacking in clinical material. In his yesterday's communiqués, however, he admits his error so far as it concerns the medical faculty of this University.
