No Credit at Northwestern.

The last Northwestern says of the action of the Faculty at Northwestern University is regard to allowing credit to students who volunteer at that institution.

"There can be no doubt as to the wisdom of forming a company, nor of the conservatism that sought for cleanliness in case of seed, rather than for aggressive action. It is evident that the response of men whose conceptions and family relations are such that they can go without inconveniences, will more than live up to the call of the President. Under such conditions, active enlistment on the part of those who have duties and the belief that prevents from being entirely free, is unnecessary, since the preferred services could not be used. However, readiness for any emergency is the part of vigilance. Many students, indeed, feel that the best means for constant readiness lies in the establishment of an elective military drill in the course of the college course.
