THE BOOK BUYING STUDENT.

HOW RE IS HELPED AT WISCONSIN BY THE UNIVERSITY CO-OPERATIVE COMPANY.

In these days when students are paying amounts for textbooks that cause the parental eye to bulge when looking over the account of how the money is going, it is interesting to note that at the University of Wisconsin the students have combined to get their books under the co-operative plan. The business is conducted as a stock company, but the dividends are divided on a basis of the stockholder's purchases, just as in the case of his share of the stock. The goods are sold at a moderate advance over their cost to covering expenses, with the proceeds used as surplus. At the end of the year the profits are divided. A part of them is added to the capital of the company, and the remainder is divided among the stockholders in proportion to their purchases. Last year $400 was thus divided among the shareholders, and the company's business transactions paid for.

The business of the company is conducted by a board of directors and two managers, elected from the members. The "Co-op," as it is called, has also proved of great value as a headquarters for filling all the wants of college life.

The company was organized Jan. 13, 1894, and immediately accomplished the object of its organization; the prices on students' supplies of all kinds were immediately lowered.

"There is no room," says the Cardinal, "where students are crowded, and the conditions that existed before 1894, but look up on "the Co-op" use of the most beneficent enterprises ever carried out for the student body, and to-day the organization is regarded as one of the most indispensable institutions of the University."

Editor VIETTE-REPORTER: In view of the somewhat intolerant manner in which the entertainment tendered the alumni foot ball teams on last W. D. day has been handled by Miss polishing 92 of the 8. S. student publications, it may be out of place to ask whether the student body, or at least a majority of the student body, is not feeling the sentiment of the student body as a whole, or whether it is simply the private expression of opinion of a disgruntled few.

If it is, the editor most respectfully invites to each member of the S. S. whether an alumni game next year, and in succeed ing years, shall be the thing desired or not, it seems fair to assume that only a negligible per centage of college men and women have financial contributions to athletics, would find any objection to alumni games, and would welcome the opportunity of being in the party for the treasury of the Athletic Union.

Aside from this world view of the matter, which, however, seems to appeal to some men, let us ask whether it is desirable to keep the alumni in touch with their Alma Mater, and to establish an athletic tradition which is to be perpetuated by means of a really University spirit. If the alumni game is desirable as a feature in the athletic life of S. C. I. L., what means are being taken to end this? Does anyone imagine that those who have been instrumental in inducing the alumni to abandon their annual visits in the height of the season this year will be invited to repeat the experiment next season in the face of new means from those same alumni are obliged to read to the pulp paper. These means is not seen reasonable to suppose that these men who sacrifi ce time and money, so lawfully, to the old sod, will not be eager to help build the spirit of that which makes a University when they read that the students of Universitv have begrudged them a fifty cent suppue, will, in fact, feel that their energy and work has been wasted, if, of the bodies bruised in vain.

There is a large proportion of men of gentlemen houses among the students at S. C. I. L and it is much to be regretted that the unseasonal few should have had the opportunity to give Iowa a reputation for discourteous parsimony.
