Grinnell Stands Pat.

Contrary to the hopes of Drake's wire pulling Athletic committee Grinnell stood pat on the matter at issue between S. U. and the Grinnellians. The matter has been discussed by hand and Drake on the other, and refused to play the game so readily suggested as a Senate on bad advice for yesterday. This is due to Drake's cancellation of his contract with S. U. I. for October 14 and with Grinnell for October 7th and Thanksgiving Day. The loss of these two games means the loss of an not little money to Grinnell. She is to be congratulated for the sacrifices she makes to maintain the position she has assumed with S. U. I. for the enforcement of the spirit of the rule preventing professionalism in Inter-Collegiate athletics.

Volunteers Recognized.

The Board of Regents have followed the lead of several prominent colleges in granting favors to Spanish-American volunteers. The following resolution was passed by the board at its last meeting: "That four of the Spanish-American volunteers in the College department who have served as soldiers and sailors in the Spanish-American war be recognized and made members of the faculty of the college and veterans in the Spanish-American War." We congratulate the Volunteers.

Fred Paul Williams.

Each succeeding year brings to our University its sororities and its joys. But sorrow comes with renewed force, when the student body, full of health and vigor leaves its halls for but a brief time, to return to a place made vacant in the family circle of our University. Such is our experience in the death of Mr. Fred Paul Williams, who was drowned in the Des Moines river, August 19, 1895. The following brief sketch taken from the Des Moines Daily Capital nicely depicts his true character and personality:

"He loved books and hosts of friends, for Fred was everywhere a prime favorite. It would be hard to find a more popular among his associates. He was one of those genial, jolly souls, who literally carried sunshine wherever he went. It was evident he never was at home—there was the light and life as soon as he crossed a threshold. It was so in his preaching, where he was full of vigor and fire and where he was exceedingly convincing. No matter where one met him, he always saw the bright side of everything.

"With all his god homor and fun, he was a most earnest young man, with large plans for a useful future, and certainly a brilliant career was before him. He had just accepted a call to the pastorate of the Christian church at Adel, where he was to begin his work Sept. 1. It was with the greatest con- consolation he had entered into the field, and he had planned wonderful work for the year to come, saying he was all out of sympathy with the mad rush after money, and was going to give his life to the good of his fellow men. He had delivered a few times a lecture upon the suppression of crime, the title of which is "The Mark of Cain." It is a remarkably strong effort for so young a man and in it are set forth the deep life principles, which moved him. While the deep gravity in it is extended by all his friends to his family, yet all cannot but feel that for some reason, in some way, this will all come out for the best, somewhere, sometime.

"In the war and wolf of life the dark shadow of life may fall appear as light on the other and now we see through the glass darkly, there we shall see face to face the loving and loved heart has ceased beating but the and will live on always in the memory of hundreds of friends." Committee.
