'99 TEAM BANQUETED.

PRESIDENT MACLEAN ENTERTAINS THE FOOTBALL PLAYERS AND MANAGERS.

The banquet in honor of the football team of Iowa, '99, tendered by President MacLean at the Kirkwood Dec. 9, was one of the most delightful in every respect and long to be remembered by the fortunate guests, the players, coaches and managers of the first and second elevens and the Board of Athletic Control. The guests began arriving as early as 8 o'clock and by 9 all were assembled.

In the dining room President MacLean took his place at the head of the tables, which were arranged in the form of a hollow rectangle. At his right were Dr. Knipe, Max Mayer, Manager McCutchen, Captains Eby and Ingham and the first team. At his left were President A. G. Smith and the remaining members of the Board of Control and the second eleven. On the wall back of the head of the table was suspended the banner with the season's scores, including the score made by Chicago against Wisconsin. In the hollow rectangle was a football crowned with laurel, mounted in state above cards bearing the inscription, "Heil dir im Siegerkranz." Old gold bunting completed the decoration of the room. The hard training during a long season detracted in no wise from the justice done by the guests to the excellent menu.

The first toast of the evening was that which should always be first, "The Varsity." In his response to the sentiment, "Athletics in the Old Days," Professor Loos presented a felicitous sketch of Iowa's athletic history down to the present, the new order of things. President Smith's response to "How to Build a Fence," disclosed the facts that you can build your own fence better than anyone else can build it for you, and that all sorts and sizes of material are necessary to its construction. To the sentiment, "The First Team"—"the first team in the University and the first team anywhere," Captain Eby responded, expressing his gratification at the treatment he had been accorded by the players, the coach and the management. Captain Ingham told of the honor he and "The Second Team" felt in the privilege they had enjoyed in contributing their services to the end of making the first eleven what it was, and of the sympathy he felt Thanksgiving day for Captain McLain's men when our Varsity's rushed their line and rounded their ends. Iowa's honored alumnus, W. H. Bremner, than whom there is none more true and self-sacrificing in its interests, was to have responded for "The Alumni," but he was unable to be present. President Egan, of the Athletic Union, supplied words even more enthusiastic and felicitous than usual. Max Mayer, true representative of the liberality of the townspeople, told of their intense interest in the Varsity's athletics. "Athletics and the Dental School" led Dr. Hosford to say that by birth and training the Dents were all right, as was further attested by the men they had representing them on the two football teams. In the course of his remarks on "Athletics and the Medical School," Dr. Harriman averred that the Medics were satisfied with and heartily interested in every game played and every number used by the '99 team. Chancellor McClain spoke on "Athletics and the Law School," closing with a reference to the Thanksgiving game, exclaiming, "I wish I'd done what Reddy did." Dr. Knipe was introduced for one last talk with "My Boys." As any true leader would part with the men who had won their battles under his direction—almost in tears—so parted Dr. Knipe with the '99 football team. A memorable evening in Iowa's history closed with "America," sung in chorus.

At Princeton Minnesota, Beloit, and Wisconsin the students pay a fee of one dollar per half-year for athletic purposes.

BACONIAN.

DR. ANDREWS LECTURES UPON THE AIR WE BREATHE.

The discussion was limited to the composition and constituents of the air. Poets and others have regarded air as light and immaterial. The weight and impetus of limited portions are manifested in storms. Figures are inadequate to express the quantity. The weight of the atmosphere would equal 159,000 times a cube of copper $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles square. The atmosphere is a reservoir from which materials are being constantly removed and added. Oxygen is removed by ished one-half without permanent distress. The normal amount of carbon dioxide is .03 of one per cent., which may be increased 500 times. The injurious effects of respired air cannot be ascribed to deficit of oxygen or excess of carbon dioxide, but rather to poisonous secretions of the lungs. Brown-Sequard ascribes it to an alkaloid secretion, others to zymose, a soluble ferment. Other eminent authorities have failed to find any poisonous substances.

The moisture in the air varies from one-tenth to three per cent., subject to diurnal and yearly variation. Other elements present are hydrogen, 11 to 18 cu. cm. in 100 meters of pure air. Ammonia is always present, about four parts in a million million parts of air, removed in greater or less extent by rain. Oxides of nitrates are present in excessively small amounts, and are destroyed by every combustion. The amount of hydrogen peroxide varies with the time of day. Traces of argon and helium are found to exist. Ozone is a constituent of air which presents tremendous difficulties, as it has no exclusively characteristic test. The amounts of these materials in the air are small, but aggregate much in the whole atmosphere.

The quantity of extraneous matter in the air varies. It may contain dust—terrestrial or cosmic—organic matter, dead or living germs. Spores of algae containing iodine are found not more than 100 miles from the seashore. Sodium chloride from spray is found in the air 200 miles from the sea. Abnormal or occasional substances are not regarded.

The therapeutic properties of air in mountains, pine forests and seashores were afterwards discussed. Dr. Rockwood stated that much of the organic matter in expired air in inhabited rooms comes from exhalations from the surface of the body.

Professor Veblen then described experiments with the new method of rapid telegraphy invented by the Hungarians, Poldak and Virag, which has been successfully tried in both Europe and America. Two hundred and twenty words in ten seconds were sent over a 1050-mile circuit. The maximum rate between Chicago and Buffalo was 100,000 words per hour. The professor illustrated the mechanical details of the invention by lantern slides.

An All-America Team.

This gives four players to Princeton, three to Yale, two to Harvard and one each to Cornell and Pennsylvania.

At Columbia a strength test is required of all those who are to play on University teams.

New York University has just accepted a gift of $2,500 for the perpetual endowment of annual prizes for excellence in public speaking by under graduate students.

CAPTAIN JOHN G. GRIFFITH.

Iowa's New Captain.

The election of John G. Griffith, '01, to be captain of next year's football teams, has met with universal approval among the students and athletic friends of the University. Griffith makes a striking figure in football clothes, and has always been a prime favorite with the spectators at Iowa's football games. Griffith is a versatile athlete, being a member of the U. of I. track team and its manager for next year, and the captain of the local basket ball team. He played his first football on the Iowa City High School team. He played quarter back his first two years on the Varsity and on the '99 team played at full back.

Sophomore Cotillion.

The invitations for the Third Annual Sophomore Cotillion were issued today. This will be the first formal party of the year, and everything has been done to make it one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season.

breathing and combustion. If the oxygen was not replaced, an amount equal to twenty of the afore-mentioned cubes of copper would be removed in 100 years. In 10,000 years the change would begin to be appreciated by chemical processes.

The oxygen of the air is about one-fifth in volume. It was formerly supposed to vary from one-half to 2 per cent. Recent experiments with air collected simultaneously at various points on different continents: Tromso, Norway; Dresden, Para, Cleveland, showed a minimum of 20.90 per cent. oxygen, and a maximum of 20.94 per cent., an average variation of 1-100th of one per cent. Air from the same place, collected for 45 successive days, showed that the quantity of oxygen did not vary for night or day, rain or shine. The results of 800 experiments show that the amount of oxygen increases gradually toward the poles. Various methods and apparatus for determining the amount of oxygen in the air were exhibited and explained.

Plants exhale oxygen and inhale carbon dioxide; animals vice versa. Lower plants, those containing no chlorophyll, consume oxygen rapidly. We may breathe air containing 75 or 80 per cent. of oxygen, or the oxygen may be dimin-

A Return to an Old Institution.

A daily morning chapel has for two years been a dead institution at the University of Iowa. Many things lead us to believe that a return to this old institution would be desirable. Not to the old chapel in its entirety but to a chapel which shall be a real, live, earnest, helpful sort of a chapel. The right sort of a chapel really affords some religious good to nearly every student that attends it. That is its primary object and we do not think that a daily, non-compulsory chapel period would do any harm at least. A daily chapel gives students an opportunity to associate together once a day and become better acquainted with each and with the professors. This is one of the greatest benefits of a daily chapel, that it gives to the students a sense of unity of purpose and of aim; that it makes them feel their common brotherhood and their common and individual relation to their Alma Mater as a series of widely separated though enthusiastic athletic contests can only partially impart to them.

The university chapel as conducted two and three years ago died a natural and deserved death. We do not believe that any resurrection of it would succeed. The students of the university generally do not want any daily "holy-hush" affair and any attempt at one under the university now would be attended only by a decided minority. But for a good healthful chapel conducted with a view to modern conditions and in the modern breath of spirit, for such a chapel as President MacLean would conduct, we believe there is a desire among the students of the university. And we believe that such a chapel would be largely attended and would be accounted one of the most valuable parts of university life.

The Roycrofters.

Professor C. F. Ansley kindly invited the Collegiate faculty and the members of his English classes to inspect some of the volumes printed by the Roycroft press, which he had at his house last Saturday morning and evening. The volumes needed only to be seen to be admired and recognized as some of the finest and most artistic productions of the press. The books themselves were classics, but the paper, the printing and the binding of the volumes were in the finest taste. A remarkable feature about them was the extreme reasonableness of the price. Ye Ancient Mariner, the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, and The Sonnets of Shakespeare, could be obtained of the Roycrofters for a price little, if any, above two dollars. The Intellectual Life by Hamerton was perhaps the most expensive book shown, yet that did not reach ten dollars, unless desired in an extra binding.

The Roycraft firm is a peculiar institution. It is owned and managed by Elbert Hubbard, who is doubtless best known as the editor of the Philistine which he issues from this press. Mr. Hubbard started his work in excellent printing through pique at a publisher who refused his MSS., it is said—a most fortunate thing for the lover of fine books. He has built up around him at East Aurora, N. Y., an art-loving community, who find the greatest joy in life in expressing their aesthetic ideas through the printing of fine books. The books are printed on the finest of paper, manufactured by the honest Roycrofters themselves, and are very generally put out with hand-illuminated initials. The bindings shown at Professor Ansley's were of chamois skin, with silk linings on the inside, but the Roycrofters say also, that if you should want an extra fine binding, say of levant or vellum, and do not mind an extra five or ten dollars, Fra Elbertus will be pleased to make you one fit for a king.

Volumes fit for princes the volumes displayed at Professor Ansley's certainly were. The delicate binding of that beautiful French translation, Aucassin and Nicolett; the Ballads of a Book-worm; Time and Chance, with its two volumes on John Brown, the Martyr; Essays of Elia, Emerson's Friendship, On Going to Church, now out of print, of which Professor Ansley cherishes a valuable copy, No. 2; A Dream of John Ball; and Ali Baba, are some of the publications of the Roycrofters. The volumes were all issued in limited editions, none exceeding over a thousand copies, and each one numbered. Those by Elbert Hubbard were signed by him. The books are not sold by the book-dealers, because there is no profit in their sale, all prices being quoted net to every purchaser at the advertised price. A great many of the faculty and students who called at Professor Ansley's improved the kind offer of Dr. Ansley and ordered copies of the Roycroft work through him.

It is rumored that Elbert Hubbard may be obtained to lecture before a University audience some time next term, when he passes through the state on a lecturing tour. Should such an opportunity as hearing the famous editor of the Philistines and publisher of the Roycroft volumes afford itself, it will certainly be taken advantage of by a large number of the students. Mr. Hubbard is not a barn-stormer, he is not even advertiser. But he has hosts of admirers because of these very traits, and he certainly must be a man who has a word of interest to University students. His possible appearance at Iowa City will be awaited with interest.
