A Uniform Method

If there is one phase of athletics which has been marked by a boresness and irregularity, it is that of recognizing athletic ability by granting jerseys, sweaters, caps, and "E's." At the larger universities the college initial is a mark of exceptional ability in athletics, but few whose skill entitles them to the honor are permitted to display it. At the University of Wisconsin last year less than twenty "E's" were granted to the members of all the teams. At the University of Michigan football "E's" were given to those only who played in the Wisconsin game. The new rules should provide for the granting of recognition to the athletes at the close of the season, and not at a time in some cases a year pass before action is taken.
The conditions here are much in contrast. There are too many "E's" for the few athletes who win honors for the college. There are no set rules regulating the granting of these marks of athletic distinction. But the object in view is the best possible one. It is expected that some uniform method of distributing the "E's" will be adopted.
The number of games to be participated in by the athlete should be increased.
