S. U. I. FOOTBALL GAME

Will be Close—Victory Tour
Iowa—The Practice Improving

Every indication points to the conclusion that the game tomorrow with Upper Iowa University will be the strongest game we have had on our field this season. The winning team is the strongest one the U. I. U. has ever had, and there is a strong aggregation that there is great probability that any team they may meet will be defeated. We believe that this team has an equal chance to defeat what we consider the best teams in the State.

Debate and graph absence in anyone class during each term to be determined than the standing of the student. Certainly they will be hard for students who have many friends to see on or off trains and for the undecided debaters and orators—but this result is certainly desirable.

The seventh and last paragraph of the rules read: Men serving on an athletic team and representing the University in intercollegiate games, and students representing the University in intercollegiate debates, orcollegiate contests, Y. M. C. A. conventions or intercollegiate gatherings, shall not be subject to the operation of the foregoing rules while actually and necessarily absent from the city by discharging their duties for such University representatives. Leave of absence from town is granted by the President and Dean only.

Taken all in all, the rules would seem to popularize Y. M. C. A. conventions and it would doubtless be a good thing to have a plenty of these running in the city frequency and offer the non-university rules on absences to be consumed.

The third paragraph of the rules states that the President, Dean or head of department, may grant excuses and that these taken together with absences on account of actual sickness will be considered excused absences. All other absences, principal or unexcused absences and in-class absences on account of meetings or visiting of friends, preparation for examination and illness shall be subject to the above rules regarding preparation for college examinations. The fourth and fifth paragraphs are as follows:

IV. For the purposes in section V, two excused absences shall count as one unexcused absence. V. In reporting credits or class standings at the end of each term the Professor under whose control the work was taken shall mark after the symbol indicating the standing of the student, the number of term-credits to which the student is entitled; such number of hours credited to be determined by deducting from the number of hours which the student was attending regularly would receive, one-half term hour for unexcused absences five or more in number, but less than ten; one term-hour for ten or more, but less than fifteen; one and one-half term-hours for fifteen unexcused absences or any number above fifteen but less than twenty; and for twenty unexcused absences two term-hours shall be deducted. Students having more than twenty unexcused absences in any one class during a single term, shall be excluded from the term examinations.

We are not entirely certain about our reading of these paragraphs, but after a mature study, it seems to us that a student who has the misfortune to be sick a week or two during the year will find it necessary to take extra work on his recovery in order to keep up with his class, while the student who has the misfortune to be sick a much will find on his recovery that he has committed harakiri with his credit standing. Of course this may not be what the above rules are meant to mean but they read much like it. Certainly they will not be harakiri hard for students who have many friends to see on or off trains and for the undecided debaters and orators—but this result is certainly desirable.
