A FALSE ALARM

The Fire Company and Others Rush to the Fire-Proof Arts Hall Which is Supposed to be on Fire

About twelve o'clock last night someone going past the liberal arts hall noticed steam coming out of the water pipes near the top of the building. He immediately, thinking it to be smoke and that the building was on fire, turned on the fire alarm and soon the news was spread that the new building was burning down. Members of the faculty aroused from bed hurried toward the scene of the supposed conflagration. But when they and the fire company arrived they were met by the smiling janitor who told them of their mistake.

It seems that the building was not on fire at all and the supposed smoke was nothing but steam escaping from the steam jets where it had been turned on. It seems that the water pipes were filled with the snow melting from the roof yesterday and in order to keep it from freezing the steam from the jets were turned on and the steam allowed to escape. Hence the alarm.

FANCY DRESS PARTY

Last Evening at the K. of P. Halls.—Elaborate Customs Worn

A large number of University people were among the guests at a fancy dress masquerade ball given last evening by ten young ladies of the city in the K. P. halls. Each of the hostesses was attired to represent some flower. The halls were beautifully decorated, one room with paper nallyhawks, another with hearts for St. Valentines day. Some of the costumes worn were most elaborate and others equally amusing, Dean Gregory represented an admiral in the U. S. navy, Dean Hosford was a British colonel of the line, while Professor Wilson was a howling Turk. Gordon Harkness as an organ grinder with Cleveland Kingsbury as his monkey excited uproarous laughter. Molly Hull made a clown who for shape and size would be the envy of P. T. Barnum's ghost. Among the other costumes were Mrs. W. S. Musser, gypsy; Mrs. Hal Steward, Topsy; Mrs. Max Mayer, Janice Meredith; Miss Alice M. Steck, Queen of Hearts; Roy Cook Courtier Louis XV; T. D. Terrell, Pince Louis XIX; W. O. Coast, British officer; C. V. Cox, Colonial costum; Bert Townsend, gypsy; R. J. Banister, colonial costume. Dr. Morrow, King Dodo.

The hostesses who succeeded in making an innovation in Iowa City society that for brilliance and enjoyably has never been surpassed were Misses Clementine Ashley. Ida Beermaker, Myra Bloom, May Coldren, Helen Currier, Ann Dey, Zoe De Sellem, Helen Gilchrist, Mabel Gunsolus and Pearl Hull.

BIBLE LECTURE

THE DEAN OF THE YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

The Bible is the Result of Evolution in the Conception of Religion—There is No Study that Rewards One More

Frank K. Sanders, Dean of the Yale Divinity School, spoke to a small, but appreciative audience last night, in the general lecture room. The lecture was one worthy of a better attendance.

Dean Sanders, as he says, "studies the bible, not from the standpoint of a minister alone, but from the standpoint of a scholar." He believes "the teaching and studying of the Bible to be the greatest task to which a man can devote his energies."

"Biblical study has a value within itself, but to get that value one must master it, not necessarily all, for one can gain from all—most any portion an idea of the whole. Every writer of the Bible was filled with the same great cycle of splendid thoughts. So no matter where we study we see that same great thought running through all. The one great object of Biblical writers was to make God real to man. Sometimes these writers thought to interpret the past and then they wrote history; sometimes it was of the future and then they wrote prophesies These men wrote not because God commanded them to do so, but because they were filled with thoughts that must find utterance.

"The Bible is a history of God's dealings with his chosen people. It is a fascinatingly told history. It is literature. It is more than history or literature, it is the record of the developing thought of a nation.

"To become biblical students one must be able to classify according to chronological sequence of events. To understand it one must have a knowledge of the changing events of the times, not alone in religion, but in society and government. For general thoughts, a part of the Bible is sufficient to study, but for great biblical conceptions, we must study the whole. The bane of a great part of our biblical teaching today is that we confine ourselves to a part.

"The Bible is a gradual formulation, through experience, of conceptions of religion. So in one part we may find a contradiction of another. Let me rather say, an enlargement, a change to suit the developing times. A change which at times destroys the original. At first the unit of redemption was the nation, then the individual, now it is the individual taken with his opportunities. Then to catch the great note of reality running through, we must make ourselves masters of the whole. We need not trouble ourselves because some of the old has been rofuted. Men could not take in all truth at once, in those days no more than now. From boginning to end the Bible is a series of educational growth.

"Let me say in conclusion, there is no study that rewards one more, if we but catch the thought, that after all it is real life."

CONVOCATIONS

On Washington's Birthday at the Opera House will be Held the Next Convocation

The university this year will celebrate Washington's birthday by a convocation. Benj. F. Trueblood of Boston, ex-president of Penn college and now secretary of the international peace society, has been selected to give the address. He will talk on the Hague peace conference, on which subject he is an authority.

At this convocation a dedicatory Ode to the new Hall of Liberal Arts will be rendered by an orchestra and a chorus of thirty-six voices. This Ode has been prepared by Julius Muellar, a student, and is said to have musical merit. Mr. Mueller's work has been recognized by the musical critic Damrosch of whom he has been a pupil. This Ode was to have been given at the dedication but was not quite ready at that time.

The next convocation after this one will be given on April first at which degrees will be conferred upon these graduating from the college of Medicine and from the college of Pharmacy.

DELEGATES CHOSEN

Iowa will be Represented by Twelve Men at Torento

The Y. M. C. A. will be represented at the Student Volunteer movement which will meet at Toronto, Canada, from Feb. 26 to March 2. This great convention comes only once in four years and hence only once in a student generation. The young people's societies of the churches will cooperate in the matter.

The medical college will be represented by Dr. A. J. Birge; R. P. Frink, H. E. McCall and C. A. Noland.

Will Commack will go from the law department.

H. W. Brockney; D. S. Welch; J. M. McHaffy; Chas. Edmonson, Ben Weyland and Ira T. Hawk will represent the collegiates. The delegation want some faculty member added to their list.

Critics Chosen.

The twelve men who have prepared orations for the home contest have selected the judges on thought and composition. Lafe Young, R. M. Barrett and Johnson Brigham are those chosen. The orations must be in the hands of these men by next Friday The contest in delivery will take place on March fourteenth.

Mrs. Ethel Seeds VanOwen, ex-'99, from Miles is visiting her sister and old friends.

SCHOLARSHIPS

TWENTY-FOUR SCHOLARSHIPS AND FELLOWSHIPS FOR NEXT YEAR.

Open to Graduates Who Have Shown High Scholarships and Research Ability in One Especial Line at Least.

For the academic year 1902—'03 there will be available twenty-four fellowships and scholarships in the Graduate college. The value of a scholarship to a student is $125 per year while that of a fellowship is $225. This will also exempt the possessor from all university fees. As a rule, a fellowship is granted only to a graduate student of at least one year's standing, while a scholarship is granted upon graduation. All applications for obtaining these must be made to the president upon blanks especially prepared. The Board of Regents will act upon those submitted before March 12th, at its Spring meeting and those submitted after that and before May 21st, at its meeting in June.

The holders of these fellowships or scholarships must submit to the following regulations which are in force. The maximum amount of service required of a scholar shall be the equivalent of teaching three hours or of superintending laboratory work six hours per week. The work required of a fellow may not exceed twice the above amount.

Each student holding a fellowship or scholarship must be in actual attendance at the university throughout the whole year for which he has been appointed. He may, however, be excused by the president and the head of the department.

The applicant is also expected to demonstrate his capacity for original research and must give evidence of marked ability in one or more lines of study.

Each applicant, after being approved by the head of the department in which appointment is desired, must then be referred by him to the council of the graduate college. The council, after considering the application, submits a report to the graduate faculty, not later than the third Friday in March, with recommendations of those deemed most desirable. This report, as amended by the faculty, upon the approval of the president, is transmitted to the Board of Regents or its executive committee for final action at the spring meeting.

All graduate appointmens are made for only one year, but both fellows and scholars may be recommended for re-appointment at the discretion of the council, but only for one year.

Graduate appointments may be be withdrawn at any time upon the concurrent recommendation of the president and the head of the department in which the appointment is held.

The Erodelphians will entertain the Irvings on Saturday evening, February 13.

While twelve orations are more that has been handed for several years in the hon.e oritorical contest yet it is an insignificant number in comparison with the great mass of students who should write. It is to be hoped, however, that the game this year is but the beginning of a larger growth in oratory and that in that line we will have a revival of interest which is compatible with what the oratory of the university should be. It is certainly one of the greatest honors that can come to a student to be chosen to represent Iowa in the N. O. L. It should be strived after more and more.

Notice

All persons writing for the home oratorical contest must hand their oration, printed in brevier type, to the president of the association on or before February 14th. For further information see the constitution.

VALUE OF DEBATE

Brings out Originality and Severely Tests Students

The Modern Culture Magazine contains a timely and able article on college debating and citizenship. In reviewing the article the Cardinal says:

From the moment preparation begins the debater finds himself under the necessity of using his own ingenuity in locating material, in choosing and organizing it. Whatever puts a premium upon individual research, as debating certainly does, goes a long distance towards developing true students. Yet it is not the preparation which is the severest test of a debater's originality. That which constitutes at once the severest test as well as the best training for one's original genius is found in the debate itself. Opposition is the essence of debate. Hence the debater must develop the power to meet opposition successfully. The pedant soon comes to grief in debate. He cannot hope to win, because a narrow view, in others, does not appeal to the judges. The muddled metaphysic of Mediaevalism must give way to plain, practical common sense.

Systematic discussion is at once the best mirror for revealing a man's mental powers to himself to dissipa e his effervescent emotionalities and leave but the crystailized grains of pure truth. Training in debate cannot fail to teach economy of energy, nervous as well as mental; and, here, as elsewhere, the prerequisite to economy is the recognition of limitations and the relative effectiveness of means at one's diposal. In short, a debater who loses his head is ipso facto out of the contest.

However, I am pleased to note that inter-collegiate debates are attracting more and more general attention as can be seen by the increased space given to them in the columns of the Cosmopolitan dailies.—The Cardinal.
