The Iowan reporter was hardly awake, but he managed to rub his eyes and join in the loud, because he injured the university bestows the Prince.

Prince Henry came out of his special car, leaving on Prexie's arm. The students made a rush for a nearer view. The party reached the Daily office. His Highness.

"But the professor—what is done to him?"

"Oh, they've been sending him flowers and telling him how abused he is."

"Excellent," said the Prince.

"A great university—very great, if it had a few things that stick. This is the first instructive visit, I'm sure," said Henry.

"I think that the ichthyosaurus," and Prince Henry's special pulled out of the depot.

"Heinrich! Heinrich! What's the matter with Heinrich?" shouted the students until the train was out of sight.

"You have fifteen minutes to make your class," said the room-mate.

WISCONSIN—IOWA

The Wisconsin Press On Our Debating Relations

The Daily Cardinal in an article upon the coming inter-state debate has the following to say concerning the standing in debate of the two institutions.

The inter-collegiate contest between the two western debating giants, Iowa and Wisconsin, will take place in Iowa City, on or before April 4th. Iowa and Wisconsin hold a pre-ministerial election of members for the western debating circles. These two universities have been more uniformly successful than any other of the large western institutions and the contest between them will be watched with interest throughout the west. This is the fourth annual contest with Iowa. The first took place in Milwaukee and was won by Wisconsin. The second was won by Iowa at Iowa City. The third occurred in Madison last year and won by Wisconsin. Its varying success has created considerable rivalry in debating between the two universities. The temporary ill feeling which existed for a while last year has entirely passed off, and the debate will undoubtedly continue to be annual occurrences.

The regular meeting of the E. E. club will be held at the home of Dean Boerner tonight.

attorneys laid their cases before the jury in a way that held them in a state of breathless interest and intense excitement.

Attorneys Biras and Arthur seemed to have them move in their control, however. As Senator Biras plead with them the courtroom was in breathless si-elle. As he stood before them he looked very much so. T. C. Calhoun might have looked on a similar occasion. As he pored forth his cold logic the chances of Albert Winslow seemed very small indeed.

All of the lawyers seemed to have their clients cause truly at heart. The instructions to the jury given by Judge Hays so impressed them that as they were conducted to the jury chamber they looked very thoughtful in-deeds. After deliberation they returned a verdict that the af-factions of Mrs. Simpkins had been damaged to the amount of $100,000. At the announcement of this several of her friends and especially her attorneys went with joy while the dissapated Winslow calmly asked for stimulant.
