The Great Majority of America's Great Men are Found to be College Men.

A query that frequently arises in the minds of men who have accomplished a great deal is: What is the key to success? Is it education or is it something else? The answer to this question is found in the study of the lives of great men.

The study reveals that the majority of great men have attended college. This is not to say that every great man attended college, but rather that the majority of great men did.

The study also reveals that the majority of college men are successful. This is not to say that every college man is successful, but rather that the majority of college men are.

The reason for this is simple. College provides an environment in which great men can develop their talents and their potential. It provides them with the tools they need to succeed.

This is not to say that college is the only path to success. There are many successful men who have not attended college. But the fact remains that the majority of great men have.

So, if you are looking for a path to success, look no further than college. It is the place where great men are found.
The most important inter-society debates are over and the rankings will now be in order.

Yale has declined to play either Wisconsin or Michigan at football next season. No explanations are given nor are any necessary.

Matters of first importance in developing a good track team are early and systematic training on the part of the prospective point-winners.

We have it on the best of authority that none of the medical students were permanently detained at the Independence hospital.

Speaking of institutions, if you are not convinced that these little fellows are sensitive about their size simply refer to their relative importance even in an indirect way and see how quickly they all howl.

Not to be outdone by the eastern presidents, the head physician of Leland Stanford Jr. University has started in to vaccinate the students of that institution. Accept our sympathies, for we have passed through the delightful experience.

If morals are a question of diet

As is urged by some who have made a study of the subject then it is evident that the grocery merchant occupies a position of no small responsibility, for you depend more than less upon the judgment and conscience of your grocer for the selection of the food which you consume.

Barth, the grocer, takes particular pride in selecting for his trade the cleanest and most wholesome foods to be found anywhere upon the market.
