DEAN MIDDLETON DIES AT FIVE O'CLOCK SATURDAY

Surrounded by Relatives and Friends He Passes Away at His Home in Davenport—Had been Connected with the Medical College Since Its Founding—Sketch of His Life

William Drummond Middleton, dean of the college of medicine, passed away at his residence in Davenport at a few minutes after 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. His condition, which had gradually become more serious all week, changed rapidly for the worse Saturday morning. He was able to recognize some of those about him during the forenoon, but at-ternoon he sank into a comatose condition and gradually became weaker and weaker till the end.

Dr. Middleton performed an operation upon Mrs. Philip Dietz in Walcott, Iowa, on March 30th for an acute and advanced case of appendicitis. In tying up a liga-ture, the thread cut his finger. At once recognizing the liability of poisoning setting in Dr. Mid-dleton took the usual means to avert the danger but without avail. He was preparing to take the train for Iowa City the next day to attend the Middletonian banquet when he was taken ill. He became gradually worse all week. Ned B. Middleton, of the college of medicine, was summoned to his father's bedside Thurs-day and all day Saturday the death of the great physician was momentarily expected.

Dean Middleton was one of the greatest men who has been con-nected with the University of Iowa. He was broad and well-balanced. Not only a great phy-sician but a wise counselor, his influence was felt in every de-partment of the institution. In the college of medicine he pos-sessed the unbounded confidence and most sincere affection of faculty and students alike. Here any matter which was decided by Dean Middleton was taken with-out question as wisely and right-ly done. An instance showing the universal regard in which he was held occurred at the recent graduating exercises when the audience burst into tumultuous cheers of joy when the tele-gram was read announcing that Dr. Middleton was better.

The following sketch of Dr. Middleton's life is taken from an article written by Dr. W. L. Bierring of the college of medi-cine:

Dr. William Drummond Mid-dleton was born April 24, 1844, near Aberdeen, Scotland, the son of John and Mary Gilchrist Mid-dleton. His parents came to this country in 1856, when William was thirteen years of age, stop-ping for a brief period at Albany, New York, and then they came to Davenport, Iowa, which became their permanent home. He grew to manhood in that city from whence, at the age of twenty he enlisted in the armies of the Union during the rebellion and served with gallantry till the close of that struggle. At the close of the war he began the study of medicine, entering the office of Dr. W. F. Peck, and graduat-ed from the Bellevue Medical College New York City in 1868. Soon after he located in Daven-port in the practice of his chosen profession. The year following the Medical Department of the State University was organized and Dr. Middleton became a member of the first faculty, be-ing elected to the chair of phy-siology and microscopic anatomy. In this position he continued to fill with great ability until 1886 when upon the death of Prof. W. H. Rob-ertson he was elected to the chair of theory and practice of medi-cine. Upon the death of Dr. Peck in 1891, he was elected to the chair of surgery, a position which he continued to hold up to the time of his death and in which his surgical lectures and his contributions to the discus-sions of surgical questions of the day and his work in the operative field marked him as a leading surgeon in Iowa and one of the leaders of the profession in the country.

In 1894 he became dean of the college of medicine, a position he has since honored to the highest extent. In 1891 he was elected surgeon-in-chief of the C. R. I. & P. railway system, which posi-tion he filled with the highest type of skill and ability until his death.

During all these busy years, filled with active duties, Dr. Mid-dleton found time to attend faith-fully all the meetings of the coun-ty, state and national medical so-cieties, and to them he frequent-ly contributed valuable articles. He joined the Iowa Medical soci-ety in 1870, and the early transac-tions of that association have oft-en been enriched by his pen. In 1890 and 1891 he was president of the state society; in 1889 he was elected vice-president of the American Medical association at its meeting in Columbus, O. He was also an ex-president of the Scott County and the Iowa and Illinois Central District Medical society.

The history of the developmen-t of the college of medicine of the State University is but a record of the unceasing efforts of Dr. Middleton in the interests of medical education and the pres-ent high standard of the college will always be a monument to his devotion in furthering its inter-ests.

He was strong in his capacity as a teacher, a thorough master of every subject that he ventured to present, he selected his points and impressed them in an ingeni-ous manner, unique and distinct-ly his own. The truths he im-

TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD

Services Held in the General Lecture Room and at the Home in Davenport—Attended by Immense Throng

The general lecture room was packed at nine o'clock yesterday by those anxious to participate in the services held there for Dean Middleton.

President MacLean presided and he paid a glowing tribute to the great character and noble re-ligious life of the departed phy-sician.

Following President MacLean came Professors Samuel Calvin, F. H. Macbride and E. W. Rock-wood who testified with tearful eyes and shaking voices to the manhood and scholarship of him whom the assembly mourned.

Rev. D. W. Wylie read from the Scriptures and the congrega-tion sang "Lead Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God, to Thee."

At 10:45 the deans of the col-leges, the medical faculty and students of the college of medi-cine and many other professors and students left on a special train for Davenport. Dinner was had at the Kimball house and shortly after one the university delega-tion formed in double file in the rotunda of the hotel and marched in a body out the Fourth Street entrance and down Perry street to second where they took cars to the corner of Thirteenth and Har-ison, within a block of the Mid-dleton home. The services held were simple and brief as the la-mented physician would have had them. They consisted of a pray-er by President MacLean, the singing of two hymns by a ladies quartet, "Crossing the Bar" and "How Sweet God's Command." There was then another prayer by Wilson E. Donaldson, of the First Preysbterian Church.

Wisconsin Judges Selected

Owing to the failure to obtain judges who would serve for the debate with Wisconsin to be held in the opera house Thursday, the matter was yesterday left in part to the faculty of the two institu-tions. Prof. I. A. Loos held tele-telephone communication with Prof. P. S. Reinsch of Wisconsin for over an hour last evening with the result that several names were agreed upon of men who would be mutually agreeable to both sides. It is hoped that this will result in speedy determina-tion of the judges for the debate.

Football Date

Negotiations which have been going on for some time with the University of Nebraska relative to arranging a game of football with that institution to be played on Nov. 15 are not likely to be completed, very soon at least. This is because our board of con-trol think another team could be secured which would draw a large crowd and consequently result in greater profit to the athletic union.

JUNIOR PROM FRIDAY

Myer's Orchestra and Souvenir Programs will Contribute to Make the Premier Social Event of the Year

The Junior prom by immemorial usage is conceded to be the best party of the year. No mat-ter when it comes, it is the cen-tral point from which all social events are reckoned. This year the committee in charge is ap-proaching the undertaking with full sense of their responsibility realizing that anything but the best class party of the year will mean to them a complete failure.

Myer's orchestra, of Cedar Ra-pids, whose sweet music capti-vated those in attendance at the Phi Delt party last Friday, will furnish the music. They will bring the same instrumentation used here last Friday also, thus making a fuller instrumentation than has ever been heard at a junior prom.

An innovation will be establish-ed in the souvenir dance programs which will be used. The com-mittee has been to no end of ex-pense and trouble in getting what they wanted but have been en-tirely successful, the result re-paying all their labor. The pro-gram is a six page affair with the usual names of committee and patronesses and list of dances. It will be bound in a burned leather cover, making the neat-est creation in this line that has been used at the "U".

ZET-IRVING TONIGHT

Annual Inter-Society Junior Debate in General Lecture Room on the Reciprocity Question

The chosen junior debaters of the Zetagathian society and Ir-ving Institute will meet in foren-sic battle tonight. This is one of the annual debates between these societies and is of greater import-ance, for it will decide in large degree who will be chosen on the preliminary teams next year.

The question to be discussed is: Resolved, That reciprocity is a better means of modifying our Protective Policy than a Reduc-tion of the Tariff. This proposi-tion will be affirmed for Irving by L. I. Reed, W. C. Henry and G. E. Hill, and denied by G. E. Greene, C. H. Edmondson and E. J. Shanahan of the Zetagathi-an society. The closing rebuttal speeches for the two sides will be made by W. C. Henry and C. H. Edmondson. Those who will sit in judgment on the merits of the debate are Professors T. H. Mac-bride, Samuel Calvin and Isaac A. Loos. No admission will be charged.

Miss Katherine Close, '02, en-tertained the Kappa Kappa Gam-ma, sorority and its alumni at her home on Gilbert St. Saturday afternoon from 3 to 7 o'clock.

Everybody, medic and collegiate, freshman and post-graduate, janitor and professor loved and respected the dead dean. All felt that he belonged in part to them, which indeed he did. But in his own department, that of medicine, the degree of actual personal regard the individual student had for Dean Middleton was absolutely astonishing. During five years at the university, the editor of this paper, while he has on many occasions heard medics speak in unbounded praise of Dr. Middleton, has never heard an utterance which, either in meaning or by implication, could be construed as invidious to the deceased professor and physician. His was a combination of great qualities which is seldom met with. To meet, and know such men is one of the greatest privileges of a college course. The memory of such teachers and the inspiration they gave, goes forth with the graduate and remains with him while all other memories of his alma mater fail. No one could come in contact with Dr. Middleton without being impressed with his candor, his breadth of view and his far reaching human sympathy. Such men are more to a university than buildings or grounds or books or equipment, these latter are but the substance and outward trappings of the school, such teachers are its soul.

When the time comes, if it don't look like rain, you will find plenty of "co-eds" at the baseball games, even though they haven't purchased many season tickets. Some of them say they don't have to buy tickets.

The next question will be, "who will be dean of the medical college?" Another and graver one is, "can one be found to fill up the place left vacant?"

The great crowd of sad eyed people who traveled to Davenport yesterday, filling a special train, was of itself a sufficient eulogy to Dr. Middleton.

Miss Louise E. Hughes was the first girl in the university to buy a season baseball ticket.

President A. S. Draper, of the University of Illinois, was the victim of a runaway accident Sunday, being thrown from a carriage breaking his leg just above the knee.

The students of the university of California have taken a vote on the advisability of adopting the honor system in examinations. The result has not been announced.

parted live with the students and it is safe to say that there is no medical man in Iowa who enjoyed such devotion and love from the younger members of the profession.

Two years ago the students of the college of medicine organized a society named the Middletonian Medical society in honor of Dean Middleton. It was while he was on his way to attend the annual banquet of this society given this year on March 31, that Doctor Middleton was stricken with his fatal illness. On April 1, the 32nd commencement of the college of medicine was held and it was the first time in the history of the college that Dr. Middleton was not present. The signing of the diplomas of this year's graduating class on Tuesday afternoon, while confined to his bed, was the last act which he performed. Dr. Middleton enjoyed an enviable reputation as consultant and was universally liked by his fellow members in the medical profession.

The home life of Dr. Middleton was an ideal one. He was married May 22, 1871 to Miss Susan Yanadell Modeman in New York City, and this union has been blessed by six children, Mary Louise, Jessie McKensie, Dr. George McClelland, Edward Duncan, John Gilchrist and William Drummond Middleton, Jr. In addition to the wife and family he is survived by two sisters, Miss Jennie and Miss Eliza Middleton.
