COUGLE TO BE PURIFIED

HIGHLAND PARK TO CLEAN OUT PROFESSIONALS

Coach Ralph G. Lane Working to Put Highland Park toleans on an Amateur Basis

Asks for Moral Support in His Contest Against Athletic Purity

Highland Park athletics are to be purified.

Ralph G. Lane, a Des Moines lawyer and graduate of Yale law school, is the man who has undertaken the task of cleaning the Des Moines school professionalism. Mr. Lane is a fine athlete and a most affable gentleman. While in Yale he was a leading player in the Yale law school eleven. He now has a contract with the owners of Highland Park to play a certain number of hours in the week at the college and in the spring and fall of the year. Mr. Lane author-tories assign him to coach the baseball and football teams.

It is a matter of common repute in college circles that the Highland teams have not been professional teams. Men have been induced to play on the teams by free tickets, room board, and, in case of the best players, by an additional lump sum for each game played. Little care has been taken to observe the amateur rules at Highland Park — in fact, care has been taken in the opposite directions. Self-respecting colleges in the state, on becoming aware of the state of affairs at the school, have re-

The management of the school changed last winter. The word now is that Mr. Lane is to be encouraged or at least tolerated in his efforts to keep Highland Park athletics, rather than abso-

Mr. Lane himself says that he thinks his efforts for athletic purity will be ultimately successful.
He realizes that it is a hard task to which he has set himself but believes that Highland Park athletes can soon be put upon an amateur basis and a regard had for the amateur rules.

Mr. Lane does not yet feel in a position to ask Iowa to schedule a game with Highland Park but does ask that he be given Iowa's moral support in their efforts. That this support will be given Mr. Lane, there is no doubt. A whole

The high school student body is quite capable of arousing an amateur sentiment at Highland Park and of developing teams on an amateur basis that will be a real credit to the school.

When you’re at bat, know where you’re at and don’t stand still or you’ll rue the day. Don’t run into each other at any run. Your own, your’s, and yours, and I swifly bee to tell all your troubles try to forget.

Manager Donnelly to his Greely

Mr. Donnelly’s green-class stickers from Rock Island opened the baseball season propitiously for Iowa on Iowa field yesterday. Five to one was the score the Hawkeyes won by, with the professionals never in the winning. The game bore the earmarks of the first for both teams but fairly good ball was played. The game was a close one all the way, try it out for the pitchers and to this end an experienced catcher was brought in to play the Captain Story. The result showed.

THE TOP picks of the day and for the prizes of our government.

No wonder then that college curricula are often charged with being impractical and hindering for business and government.

This great demand, this great gap in our college curricula, during the last ten years is receiving attention and great strides are being made in remedying the difficulty. Of course it is recognized that the purely detailed matter of business training can only be acquired through actual business experience but great practical training in banking, industry, and government is also being given more highly and courses in these subjects which daily come up beers of the school of political and social training, and prepare them for the management of the school of political and social sciences.

As the school of political and social sciences is increasing in importance, the school of commerce, in business, in taxation, in municipal government, business corporations, is increasing in importance, as the school of political and social sciences is giving away to, and taking the place of, business training. And in this development along these lines which is of such importance and which is receiving such increased attention among the leading universities of the land, Iowa is not behind. Her school of political and social sciences, with its highly practical value as well as educational, is being advanced with the demands of the time.

This is true of the demands of the time. Courses are being developed covering all branches of the work demanded. Prof.

Loos, who has been giving this course for a few years, is arranging courses of the highest importance. The new announcement of the school of political and social sciences which will be out soon, contains most complete courses along these lines which lay that broad foundation for business and citizenship. The educational value of any work is perhaps the most important element required. This course is charged with that of the highest practicability; certainly very valuable courses are the result. This class of collegiate work with the demands of to-day cannot be given too much importance.

Demands of Business and Politics

There never was a greater demand for trained business men as there is today.

The great business and commercial enterprises of the age do not only demand men of the highest ability but also men with broad training. The field of politics and government is also mandating and requiring men with a broad and thorough training in the principles of the political, social, and economic sciences.

Now in the face of these demands, is there constantly arising this question: does the college education fulfill these demands?

Is it practical? Does it prepare men for business and citizenship? The is to be paid by many that it does not. Some of the prominent business men argue that a college education neither unfitts a man for business and government. In time past and in many colleges at present this charge of impracticability is only too true. In the schools are found courses for the training of engineers. Courses for the training of men in natural sciences. But only occasionally in the curricula do we find courses of study for the purpose of developing men to conduct the great business enterprise of our government. This is

ing for business and government.

This great demand, this great gap in our college curricula, during the last ten years is receiving atten-
