FOURTH AND FIFTH
SOCIOLOGY LECTURES

GRADUATE STUDENTS WELL PLEASED WITH MR. NEALLY

This Series of Instructive Lectures on Sociological Science Closed Yesterday afternoon by Mr. Neally. The subject was "The Mechanism of Interpersonal Influence," in which the following points were made:

- The influence of individuals and of groups is more apparent in the world of experience than in the world of thought.
- The influence of ideas and beliefs is more apparent in the world of thought than in the world of experience.
- The influence of social institutions is more apparent in the world of experience than in the world of thought.

In the fourth lecture in this course on "Anarchism and Socialism" Mr. Neally discussed the program of socialism following the example of Marx. Mr. Neally's patient and thorough-going study of the literature and propaganda of socialism has made him a master of his subject. He is a clear and lucid advocate. He is not in any sense an advocate of a particular theory or group. He is a critic of all theories, not an advocate of any one of them.

The victories that have been Iowa’s upon the athletic field during the past years have been such that we need not indeed be ashamed of the record. By victories in these struggles of brave, mankind and brain glory has come to the university. Last night, at Chicago, however, we scored a victory which brings to Iowa more glory and honor than all. Before us in oratorical battle went down in defeat the great representative institutions of the central states. To win upon the athletic field is great, but to win in forensic contest where brain meets brain is greater. Our athletes, although we have been proud of them, are not at the top, but on the forensic platform we recognize no peer. And this claim more than ever comes to us through last night’s victory. Iowa cannot to mine in debate and at the head in oratory is the way the record stands.

To the man who through “The March of the Constitution” marched Iowa past them all this victory all honor is due. A victory of this kind means months of persistent effort and training—energy and effort spent in working for the honor of the varsity. Hats off then to our orator, E. K. Brown. Let us give him upon his return a reception commensurate with the victory. Let everyone be out and meet our representative when he returns. To Iowa’s orator, all honor is due.

Dr. Sam W. Hobbs has done such able and efficient work for his university as assistant coach for the past three years, that the board of athletic control should not allow any other college to secure his services next fall. Iowa wants to retain Dr. Hobbs in a position where he can be promoted to head coach when the year may come when Dr. Knipe, the best football coach in the country, is no longer with us.

The ‘24 Hawkeye board are already consulting and arranging the preliminaries for next year’s annual, a circumstance which bids well for the unprecedented success of that popular university publication.
