INDOOR TRACK MEET
CROSS COUNTRY CLUB WILL BE PERMANENT

Individuals Must Guarantee Spring Meet
Capt. Anderson States What M. Bush, Prof. Eastman Will Speak

The attendance at the track athletic meeting last evening was about the largest ever to the promotion of this branch of athletics. About fifty interested men were present, representing all departments of the University.

The meeting was opened by Captain Anderson of the track team, who outlined the plan for the season, consisting of the accented field and track athletics as the most legitimate of college sports, because all can participate.

The man who is physically frail and not fit for athletics, even through one football scrimmage, can suit his exercise to his strength and build himself up, while the giant can find room for his efforts. He receives the benefit whether he makes the team or not, and if he proves to be a failure, he is not an individual man. A track team is not limited to nine or eleven men, but in a meet with fifteen events, we could enter five to six individuals. All the firsts, seconds and thirds, of course a man usually "doubles up" in different events. New men should not be backward since the old members have not "pull" on account of seniority, and the team's personnel is decided mainly by the stop watch and the measuring tape.

More men should be at work now. The thing to do is for every man who is training to bring some of his efforts to other class athletic managers, and see that no "Achilles lurks in his tent," or is an opponent on the cinder path.

Our regular schedule of field meets will be more exciting now. Since we meet in more contests, Home field meet, the state Meet, and the inter-collegiate conference, with usually a duel meet. Our goal should be to win the state meet. Even though we develop no stars, Iowa has won meets in past years by an all-round team which made a game fight for every sec or third in as well first places.

The winter work is important to bring men into good general physical condition for the spring training, and regularity in training is urged above all things. Finally, as pertinent at this time, we must remember that the scholarship requirement for athletics in 1921-1922 will be stricter than ever before, and don't get punted or conditioned. Men who have been in the University for some time will appreciate the significance of this.

Mr. S. H. Bush, gave much advice to men in regard to winter training, and called for greater regularity in the gymnasium, and also two or three jogs around the block before going to bed. He discussed the feasibility of having an indoor athletic meet and outlined the program for such an event.

Dr. C. W. Eastman spoke in the interests of distance running and the cross country running feature in particular. He urged that the organization of the C. C. be made permanent. His remarks and those of Mr. Bush were much appreciated by the men who realize the great amount of time and trouble which have been taken by these gentlemen in the forbearance of track athletics at the university. A motion was carried that the original Cross Country Committee be instructed to formulate a scheme for permanent organization and report at a future meeting.

Owing to the financial embarrassment of the athletic Union, the enterprise is like to be sanctioned by that body unless personal financial responsibility is assumed by the promoters and therefore the general sentiment of the meeting seemed to favor leaving the management of an indoor meet in the hands of the Cross Country Committees. Details will be made public in the near future.

ART OF EXPRESSION

SAMUEL ARTHUR KING ON PUB.
LIC SPEAKING

The Principles of Speaking—Their Value and Necessity in a Complete Education

Samuel Arthur King delivered two lectures yesterday, under the title of public speaking, in the auditorium. Mr. King's popularity at Iowa was attested by the good press, "There has existed, and probably still exists to a great extent," said Mr. King, "a dislike for the principles of public speaking. Two reasons for this are, that some good speakers can be natural without a knowledge of principles, and because the tendency of some, who do follow principles to exaggerate faults, more than anything else.

Some educated persons object to the study of public speaking, using to support their arguments, the same logic that the uneducated apply for the publishing of grammar. Although many of the chairs of public speaking have been held in illeprete, and, that too, justly, yet I predict that ten years from now it will be the great course. And why should it not? What are the objections to public speaking, or more important, what are the objections to the principles of public speaking, more useful? If one-fifth of the time devoted to the culture of the body by some of our students was devoted to the culture of expression, what a result there would be.

"One of the great faults, in expression, is due to improper articulation. There is no excuse for this but absolute looseness. It is due generally to lack of attention in early education. Too much of the energy of the young man is devoted to the written thought. Yet the written thought is capable of more than one meaning when spoken is capable of many. Our teachers then should understand and practice the principles of proper expression. And after all, these principles are simple and straightforward.

The multiplicity of rules has called a great deal of disfavor in the past. The modern tendency is to simplify. In fact there is little that can be reduced to text-books. Inflection is probably the most important subject. A trained voice accomplishes three things, a distinctness, a fluency, and an ease of expression. Many give years in music or in the study of languages, many to the proper sound of a foreign language, and yet cannot control their English vowels. Foreigners say there are no beautiful vowels in our language. No wonder, the way they are mispronounced. I have known men, women, and students seven or seven years in post graduate work, with the object of becoming better English teachers, and, while they could not correctly express a single sentence, comparatively it is not necessary. Is it any wonder then that too many people are not using their brains. They are entirely taken up with the matter and never think of their manner. Most literary men know absolutely nothing of the technique of reading; and if they were ever to think of it, their thinking goes only deep enough to emphasize the fact. The subject of expression should go hand in hand with the study of literature.

I have never in England heard the Bible beautifully read. All of its rhythm is driven out of it. There are those who read every word, pushing out the lips and darting out the tongue like a serpent. These are but a few of the many faults. You have all noticed them—in others. I speak not from the standpoint of a purist, but from the standpoint of one who advocates the necessity of a complete education. One cannot be slovenly in dress, or in language. Why should he be in speech?

Mr. King belongs to the French school, and while his technique of details does not agree with the American school, yet on general principles they are the same. He aims at the simple and natural mechanical exercises, coupled with a fair amount of practice.

Wants Quadrilles

The following bit of conversation was overheard in the hall of liberal arts the other day. First Freshee, "Hello Rube going down to see that our boy?" Second Freshee, "Nope Cant dance them terribullens. Why don't they have quadrilles?"

Second Edition Now

Second Edition of Prof. Van Steenderen's "Quatre Contes de Merimée" is being gotten out by Henry Holt and Co. This is very complimentary to the author. In that very seldom a new edition of a text book is demanded so soon after the first has been issued.

Will Pay Bill

At a meeting of the sophomore class yesterday, it was decided that '05 would stand good for all damages done to the Burley Imperial on the night of the recent rap. Only after long and tedious wrangling has this decision been reached, one faction being opposed to the class bearing the full brunt of the damages, and the other in favor of app raising every body and everything, even the feelings of those excitable persons who witnessed the affair. To negotiate and settle the affair with the Burley committee was appointed consisting of R. S. Allen, C. J. Lambert and J. F. O'Connell.

Amusements

The production of Holden Bros, Denver express promises a few genuine surprises in theatrical achievements, both mechanically and artistically. One critic who witnessed the first production in New York wrote thus tersely of it:

"A great deal of laughter, a tear or two, a thrill and a vision of human nature that touches the heart and sends you away in pleasant thoughts. Denver Express will be at the opera house, Monday, January 26."

Another Gym Needed

Our own especial need at Purdue is a gymnasium, as has been pointed out before. Just how we are going to get a gymnasium is not yet clear, but it will be by sitting down and keeping still about it. When it became known that Purdue was in need of an assembly hall, it was not long until a generous donor appeared, and presented Purdue with the magnificent building which is now in process of erection. It may not be true that we will get a gymnasium in the same way, but at the same time it behooves us to let our wants be known. Purdue Exponent.

Good sentiment: every word of it. We have been voicing the same ideas here at Iowa since the year one and yet no foundations have been dug for a gymnasium. The generous donors have counted the obscurity of the background and have refused to be coerced into prominence. But keep up hope brother! It is a noble cause and worthy of the effort.

The basketball team plays its first game tomorrow at Close Hall. Wilton college always sends out a fast basketball team and the Germans will stand a good chance of winning. There should be a good crowd out to give the team a send off and ring out the old yells. These would certainly harmonize with the surroundings.

The action of the sophomores in taking steps toward paying for the damage to the Burkle Imperial is the only manly thing they could do under the circumstances. But any one desires praise for doing the main thing, which is not always the easy thing.

Tonight the successors of Hanson, Snou and Moore will contest with those who feel themselves strengthened by the eloquence of Hamann, Frailey and Noland.
