HENRITS AT SURPRISE

At the April Meeting They May Be Relegated to the Clouds of Iowa—Other Convention News

The armory presented a scene of beauty to the crowd at convocation yesterday, the Athletic Hall decorations having been left up through the courtesy of the ball committee.

After the students were seated, the group engaged in songs in blue and gold, filed in all-prolonged cheers, followed by the solemn procession of the black-gowned faculties.

The day was a triple celebration. It was the 50th anniversary of the founding of the University of Iowa and the formal opening of second semester in addition to being Washington's birthday.

The program was opened with music by the University Singers after which the invocation was pronounced by the Rev. George H. Goodwin.

President MacLean addressed the students and after the music there would be no assembly this week and speaking of the progress of the university during the last semester. He spoke of the faculty and the 'great increase in the scholastic work of all the students and of the fact that owing to the greater portion of teachers to students in the university, a student receives more personal supervision than in the small colleges of the state.

Speaking of the sophomore-freshman troubles he said that the sophomores had come to realize that what seemed an innocent prank to the sophomores could not be perpetrated without reflecting on the whole university and that the honor of the institution had been made of the way of cooperation in the Spirit of the Institution.

Just outside the university, a great educational event has been accomplished during the last month. The university, not only the crown of the public school system, but also the voluntarily assumed crown of the standard colleges of the state. The colleges of the large cities have received the interest of their presidents and have asked that the university become the clearing house for all the colleges and high schools in the matter of preparation and high school scholarship.

A new regulation of the university has been announced that no student may transfer from the college of the university to another college of the university who is deficient in his work until he makes up the deficiency in the college he is leaving.

Relative to athletics President MacLean said that last month a committee was established by the University of Iowa in 1898, we have leaped forward as far as evidence by the way we have stood up the past year under defeat. The number of faculty and alumni have shown their interest in, and desire to join together to wipe out the $5,000 debt started in 1892.

Encouragement for Athletics
It is certainly encouraging to those interested in raising the athletic debt to hear the optimistic statements made by President MacLean at the Convention yesterday. We agree with the President in believing that the athletic debt will be raised and speedily wiped out. We know the student body at Iowa well enough to have confidence that all will pull together to remove this impediment to the advancement of athletics. The question of whether or not we shall continue to have athletics teams at Iowa lies with the students and we feel that they will solve the problem as it should be solved.

Let the debt of the Athletic Union be all met by April first but that the Regents may have an opportunity of making good the President’s promise of a surprise party for the supporters of athletics. The President is right when he says that the last few years of athletics have taught us a valuable lesson, how to be graceful losers. These years shall have taught us another lesson, that we cannot be stingy with our athletic funds and expect winning teams. Also that the winning teams do much to replenish the athletic coffers. Good teams and a full treasury go hand in hand, each being greatly dependent on the other.
