AN ERA OF GROWTH

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE SHOWS PROGRESS

The New Anatomical Laboratory Only Building for the Exclusive Use of One College

Promptly at 4:30 p. m. yesterday in the presence of a crowd of about one hundred fifty students, the corner stone of the anatomy building was laid. President MacLean opening the ceremonies spoke a few words, saying that the anatomical laboratory was being built with funds voted by the twenty-ninth general assembly, that it approximated another great ideal in that it was the first building for the sole use of one department and he hoped the day would come when every department would have a separate building.

Dean Guthrie said that though he had seen the cloud dark and lowering over the college of medicine, yet the outlook was never so bright as now. He read the list of publications which were placed in the corner stone, the collection being about the same as that placed in the corner stone of the laboratory building.

Dr. John W. Harriman gave a brief history of the college of medicine of the University of Iowa. He said in part: "In 1869, Dr. W. F. Peck, of Davenport, conceived the idea of a medical college in connection with the State University. Prior to that time, there was a so-called medical department at Keokuk. The Keokuk Medical college having a building and a vacant lot had agreed for $40,000 to maintain the medical college of the State University. This they did for several years and many of the older graduates of the medical college were graduated at Keokuk. The Keokuk school got so embarrassed after a few years that the state had to withdraw its sanction and in doing so was able to get back only $4,000 of its endowment.

"Dr. Peck associated with him, a number of physicians and formed the first faculty of which Dr. Philo Judson Farnsworth and Dr. John Clinton Shrader alone are living. These men secured a small room about 20x30 in the basement of old south hall and went to work. The anatomical laboratory was immediately underneath this. In 1873, Dr. Peck and his associates raised among themselves $2,300 and negotiated for the purchase of a brick building standing on the site of the present university hospital and known as Mechanics Hall. Aided by personal subscriptions among citizens of the town, they were able to fit this up as a university hospital.

"During the first two years of its existence the only aid or support the college of medicine received from the State University or the greater state of Iowa with its boundless wealth of cattle, corn and minerals, was the soft coal that was used in the heating of the rooms. All this is changed now and we are today laying the corner stone of a great building for the department of anatomy.

"In 1886 the old medical building was constructed at a cost of $38,000. It was the home of the college of medicine till March 10, 1901 when we were awakened from sleep to see it go up in flames. In the fire the college lost specimens, medals and charts and individuals specimens many impossible to replace. The next day, though Sunday, four or five met quietly and decided to go on with the work and we got an announcement showing the schedule of classes for the next day.

"In closing I wish to ask that a kind and good Providence will watch over and provide for this college and make it increase in buildings and students and influence for years and years to come."

The big granite stone was then dropped upon its base and set in place.

Dean Guthrie in closing the ceremonies expressed regret that neither Prof. Shrader and Prof. Farnsworth were able to be present, the latter of whom was to extend congratulations to the students of the college of medicine upon this occasion. In conclusion he voiced the sentiment of students, faculty, and alumni in bidding God speed to the college of medicine, extending good wishes to the department of anatomy and congratulations to Dr. Harriman.

Anderson Wins Medal

The third semi-annual competitive drill of Company I, Monday night was won by Sergeant R. M. Anderson '03. The judges cut down the contestants systematically until on the last call but two remained Sergeant Anderson and Private R. C. Williamson '02 and L. '04.

This is the second time Mr. Anderson has won the medal. To retain it permanently it must be won at three successive drills. After each drill a gold bar is added bearing the name of the winner.

The judges were Major Lambert, Captain Kennedy and Lieutenant Balzell, all of Newton, Ia.

The Pennsylvanian, the daily published by the University of Pennsylvania students, has been changed from a daily to a five-day affair with no more Saturday issues. The step was taken at the instance of the bureau of advertising, which gives as its reason the lack of interest on the part of the undergraduates.—Ex.

It is believed that the epidemic of typhoid fever at Cornell University is entirely under control and that patients now in the hospitals will recover. President Schurman has inaugurated a plan to give all students a chance to make up their work.

RUSH EXAMS PRACTICAL

Exams and Quizzes to be on Practice and not Theory

Dr. Le Count, chairman of the examination committee of the attending staff, has made the following official announcement concerning the examinations for next year at Rush.

The examinations will be almost entirely of a practical nature. Chemistry, anatomy, physiology, materia medica, and pathology as such will be dropped and the men will write on medicine, surgery and obstetrics, each of these general subjects including their several subdivisions. Any questions in these departments which is of a physiological, chemical, or pathological nature, but bears on either of the three general departments, will be allowed.

Professor Hines, chairman of the Rush faculty committee for the supervision of the quiz class work says that, the physiology and chemistry questions for this year will be entirely of a practical nature.

J. T. Duncan M. '05, will be able soon to leave the hospital and continue his studies.

Dean Guthrie gave a six o'clock dinner to the members of the medical faculty at the Burkley last night.

The senior medical class will go in a body to Independence Saturday for the purpose of investigating the state hospital for the insane.

Y. W. C. A. yesterday elected Prof. Leona Call as delegate to the semi-annual national convention to be held at Wilkes-Barre early in April.

The senior medical women have begun the custom of wearing the classical senior caps. This has not been done heretofore in the college of medicine.

The ladies' drawing room has been beautified the last few days by a magnificent bouquet of roses and carnations, the gift of Mrs. J. G. Berryhill of Des Moines.

Dr. Mary Lawson Ness of Cedar Rapids will read the paper before the Philosophical club Wednesday evening on the subject, "Mental Hygiene." Visitors are welcome.

Miss Blanche Dow Ex '02, is to take the role of Abigail in the Cantata, Saul, King of Israel, which is to be presented in Des Moines tomorrow and Friday night by local talent.

In the two joint debates held Friday night between Hammond Law Senate and Philo, each society was able to capture one contest. The debate in the Hammond hall was won by the Senators and the Philos-Forum won the debate in their hall.

CONCENTRATION

Dean Guthrie Speaks Before the Assembly Today

Dean Guthrie, of the college of medicine, spoke to the students, at assembly this morning on the subject of concentration.

"Success he said is the one word that will fire men to do the greatest deeds.

"The chief element in real success is concentration. It was concentration for twenty-nine long years, that enabled Jenner to conquer small-pox. His efforts has saved more lives than all the heroes have slain since history began. It was concentration upon the broad field of experimental science that gave us the cathode rays. It was concentration that enabled Lord Summers to place himself at the head of the English bar in a fifteen minute speech. To achieve the highest success, one must concentrate."

Whitney Society

The meeting of the Whitney Society on Monday evening was devoted to voluntary reports. Prof. Flom reported on the dialect of the Shetland Islands. Prof. Eastman on German nursery rhymes, and Dr. Hagen on the interpretation of a passage in the Old-English poem, the Battle of Brunanburgh.

What is a University?

The Iowa City Republican says editorially: "Now when the university has no coach, is it not a pretty good time to let go of athletics as a university affair? The institution is hard pressed for support funds, and the $4,000 a year it has been spending upon athletics would buy a lot of books and put several departments in better shape."

The fallacy of such statements conceived and brought forth in grossest ignorance of college life and work of today is so apparent as to make them unworthy of serious consideration, and we only advert to this one on account of the systematic frequency of such sophistry in two of our city contemporaries.

To "let go" of athletics would be the rankest folly for this or any other university or college and the $4,000 a year, if such is the sum, which they cost is indeed a paltry consideration for the benefits received. Outside of class room work, athletics are the greatest factor in American student life. They are the one common interest possessed by students in the different classes and colleges. This interest claims the energies of all and the desires of all for the success of their alma mater on the field produces a student body infused with varsity spirit and united in loyalty to the institution. On leaving the college halls, this spirit makes them strong and untiring alumni.

The consensus of opinion among educators and physicians is that athletics benefit the individual student who participates in them both in his mind and his morals, as well as his physique. This is shown by the statements of, among others, Pres. MacLean, Pres. Angell, Pres. Northrup, Pres. Eliot, and Pres. Harper. A great number of physicians have testified that the apparent physical benefits are not a delusion, among whom are Doctors Dean, Whiteis and Harriman of Iowa City. In addition to this, athletics give the student who participates in them a broader view of college life. He becomes acquainted with other institutions and other college men and gains a wider, more cosmopolitan idea of university work than that furnished within the limits of his own narrow campus.

Athletics advertise the college better than all other things combined, Provost Pepper of Pennsylvania once said that a winning football team the next year would be worth $500,000 to the University of Pennsylvania. The amount of space in newspapers alone which athletics gain for any one large university could not be purchased with $4,000 or four times four thousand dollars. In addition to this, college athletics are the main topic of conversation among high school pupils when they speak of colleges and a large per cent of them select their college merely on account of having heard of it in athletics.

Let go of athletics? No, we would sooner let go of the new hall of liberal arts. The faculty and student body could meet in a tent and constitute a university, but with all college life gone, all varsity spirit destroyed, the students had better go home and get their education by correspondence.
