For a thorough and efficient debate, we have a great majority of the debates from neighboring universities. But we must not be satisfied with a success which is entirely relative. We can boast of our preeminence in debate only when the best, and all the best of our university talent has met and defeated all that our rivals have to offer. When our debating societies represent a unit, then we shall be able to meet more debating teams and our success should be proportionately greater. The field of debate should be unified and broadened.
