WATSON TELLS STORY OF HIS EXPERIENCES

Studies Animal Life of Sea Coast And Will Report To Government

E. R. Watson of Stockport, Iowa, a graduate student of the State University of Iowa, who has been engaged during the summer in research work at the United States Government Fish Commission station at Woods Hole, Mass., has returned to the university and is preparing his report which will cover some important discoveries made toward the crab life of the Atlantic coast.

The station at Woods Hole forms one of the most unique enterprises of the Fish Commission. It was established nearly thirty years ago, and year after year a fleet of summer-longers finds from one hundred to two hundred scientists at work on the station. There are particular lines of research proposed by the director of the station, and the work is divided among a little neck of land surrounding Martha's Vineyard from Duxbury to Cape Cod.

The government provides a mess table for the students it brings there, but they are forced to find their rooms either in the cottages of the citizens of the little city or in one of the hotels.

To date, the maintenance of a little camp maintains there during the season which is well attended by large boats from which the scientists use their dredges. On any day, about fifteen to twenty are generally present, and out every day, are two men, assisted usually by two natives.

In the student camp, any student is in charge of his own experiment, and the data he has to make available for each other, is the data for the analysis of the work of the college.

Professor Watson's study was in the variations of the appendages of Brachyuran crabs, to determine whether there was enough variation to call for a division into separate classes. As yet the results of his work have not been put in such shape as would enable him to give out the results.
GREAT STOCK REDUCING

Clearing Sale

We are going to Close our Entire Winter Stock

Inventory has just been taken. We know exactly how much we have on hand and how much we must sell. We close our eyes to nothing. This is our last inventory. Cost and work, we believe it is only a matter of disposing of the balance of our great stock.

A Quarter Off—A Third Off

Frequently a Half Off

That's the way the reduction runs through our entire stock.

Now is the time to supply your wants. Don't miss this, the greatest sale of the season.

William A. Brady’s charming play of rural New England which had long runs in New York, Boston, Chicago, and Philadelphia, will be the attraction at the opera house on tomorrow night. The scenery is said to be of a most remarkable character, beautiful to an extraordinary degree and highly realistic. The greater part of these reports are said to be due to the experienced hand of Mr. Jos. E. Crane, under whose personal direction the piece was produced. "Way Down East" has the endorsement of every class of theatre goers, critics and clergymen, professional people and first-nighters, all alike in its praise its production here will undoubtedly prove the event of the dramatic season.
