Stuart Trial Continues

Second Day of Trial Shows Increasing Interest.

The trial of Mary Stuart, for the murder of Lord Darnley commenced Wednesday afternoon in the large lecture room of the Old Capitol Building. The litigation is being held before Judge J. G. M. Byers and is being carried on by the members of the larger law class. The case promises to be one of the most interesting held at the University.

Each side used its 10 peremptory challenges and each side also challenged a man for causes. Both of the same challenges were sustained by the court. The jury is composed of Messrs. Jones, Bruce, Wallace, Fox, Shepherd, Edwards, Patrick, Balch, Henegar, Adams, McMurry and Chalmers.

The witnesses sworn for the state and the characters they impersonate are as follows:

BASKETBALL TEAM READY FOR GRINNELL.

Basketball Experts are Practicing Hard for the State Championship.

Contact Friday, The Grinnell team, fresh from its victory over the Des Moines basket team, which defeated Iowa 22 to 27, will make the sight of its former when it meets the Hawkeyes here for the state championship.Basketball ball occupies a position of peculiar importance at Grinnell and they would rather win it than any sport except football. That Grinnell is in its top form is shown by the fact that they have defeated both Des Moines and Iowa inside of two weeks, and they can be expected to keep up their good.

Last night the "team indulged in a hot practice, and there is not much doubt on the minds of the students that they have gotten over the hump of their recent trials and will show the Scarlet and Black supporters some really fine basketball ball. The officials have not been decided on finally, but they will probably be McBrinn of Grinnell and Director Rule of Iowa. Both of these men have figured at college games and neither side fears the ruling of the officials will enter into the record.

","The Professor's Love Story."

"The Professor's Love Story" is the play which has been chosen for presentation by the Dramatic Club, and the clever Willard, carrying in his play a few years ago, and created the part of the professor Miss Everts, who ask Willard in it several times said: "It is about the best, if the best, modern play that I have ever seen.

Peter Pan and Alice-in-Bye-the-Fire, with Mabel Adams and Ethel Hargreaves in the lower grades, respectively, are successors of this season by the well-known author of "The Little Minister" and "The Professor's Love Story," J. M. Barrie. Part of the play is adopted from "The Window of Thorns," and from a literary point of view, is the heaviest thing yet attempted. It is a complete readout, but in its cast calls for six men and five women, and each part demands very difficult character acting.

The professor is an absent-minded faculty of forty who falls in love with his, opposite. There is nothing strange in a professor's falling in love, but this particular professor does not know that he is in love and calls in a doctor to prescribe for his ailments. The doctor sees the situation, tells the professor that love is his ailment and advises a solitude in the country. The professor is dumbfounded to learn that his inability to work on his great book is caused by Cupid, not by sequestration and goes away to the country, taking with him, as a matter of course, his secretary.

The absent-minded scientist becomes reorganized in the harvest field after a month's camel, and is soon wowing his secretary among the harvesters, showing his uplifted spirit by helping over the grainstacks. One day he finds her by some skein in a faint which is pretended. There is nothing to do but take her in his arms to a nearby stream to revive her. "With a laughing woman in his arms, what man would not propose." To involve the play the girl refuses him for a time, but in the last act her acceptance of the professor is shown by the shadows on the window curtains of the room in which the professor is heard pleading. Of course, there is the widow in the play who loves to secretary.

The cast will be announced the list of the week, and the play will be put on for the first of May.

At the annual dinner of Cornell Alumni at the Waldorf Astoria in New York city on Saturday evening last, it was announced that preparations will be made to hold a grand reunion of all alumni at Ithaca in 1898, to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the founding of Cornell.

STICK TILL ITS OVER.

There is a disagreeable habit becoming more and more in evidence among a few of the students of Iowa. It is not courteous nor even pleasant to be stringing out, towards the close of a conversa- tion, especially while a speaker is on the floor. When a person goes into a public assembly, he goes there to hear whatever may be on the program. Unless he intends to stay and hear the whole, his very presence is a dis- agreeable habit being show. He hasn't the privilege of leaving, for him to get tired and go home merely because he can't appreciate or enjoy that particular part of the program, is decidedly ungentlemanly on his part and unfair to the speaker.

At a recent conversation, we had the privilege of listening to one of the best speakers in the state. The first part of the program may have been somewhat flat, but for the purpose of hearing what the speaker has to say, Iowa, the state, and Iowa in the second part of the program is decided ally unpleasant on his part and unfair to the speaker.
