ALUMNUS BEGINS ANOTHER YEAR
FIRST PUBLICATION WILL BE
PPEAR OCT. 15.

Strong Staff is Preparing an Excellent Number for the First Issue.

The Alumnus will publish its first issue Oct. 15th. The history of this publication is brief. Four years ago Professor Sims issued the first number, and with the assistance of Mr. N. L. Perry. Later, the Alumni Bureau publicized the book in hand. At the present time the regular staff is made up of the following:

Alumni Editor—Mrs. R. D. Rocker,
University Editor—Miss Hulfe, Jour.
Associate Editor—Gen. Burow, Jr.,
Associate Editor—E. C. Barrett,
Managing Editor—H. G. Walker.

The leading articles of the coming issue will be on Edwin L. Rublin and on Emerson House, both of whom are well known to all alumni of the University of Iowa. Mr. Walker, who is in charge of the managing editor, has great expectations for the future success of the Alumnus. As the financial condition of the board changes for the better, the interests of the number of graduates from the University increases, the publication will become much better supported.

In the bureaus, the board put a register of the graduates from this University, their names and addresses. As soon as the financial condition of the bureau allows, this 1914 register will be revised. Eventually the Alumnus will become as accessible to the University as the Alumni Bureau, through which we have a chance to speak up for students. The editors have their own work definitely designated when jokes are offered in place of news. The Iowan has no quarrel with the good professors who feel humor. They have no time for, but they certainly cannot expect them to feel responsible for filling this paper. The only motive in referring to this incident was to preface a request that our staff be given the benefit of every piece of news that is ready for publication. Faculty members are in a position to know the important happenings in their respective departments, and we hope that from them much aid to the reporters as will fit in with their personal convenience.

Two professors keep an Iowan notebook.

Is the suggestion presumptuous?
HOME TENNIS TOURNAMENT
Good Opportunity for New Men to Make Team.

The summer's growth of weeds is being removed from the tennis courts, preparatory to a Home Tournament next week. All men who will be candidates for the team should send their names and addresses to R. A. Oliver, at the Sigma Chi house.

About fifteen men were actively interested in tennis last year. The hope is that this year's team will be larger than the former year's. The members will be given daily practice in doubles. All men are welcomed to practice.

PHILOSOPHICAL CLUB LECTURE
Professor Starbuck Gives a Strong Address.

The first meeting of the Philosophical club was held in the lecture room of the department of Psychology last Wednesday evening. This was the annual meeting, and so it was of considerable importance, as officers were elected and the club's policy for the ensuing academic year was marked out. This club is composed chiefly of faculty members and graduate students who are interested in philosophical and psychological work and progress. Several new members were elected at the meeting Wednesday night.

The newly elected officers of the club are: president, Dr. Maude; vice-president, Dr. Tiffin, member of our graduate faculty; Prof. McFarland, the club enters upon the activities of the year with prospects of much most essential and valuable work being done.

As is the custom at a meeting of the Philosophical Club a formal ad- dress was given, and afterwards was discussed and criticized by those present. The address of the evening was given by Professor Stirling in the subject, "The Feels of the Source of Knowledge." Prof. Stirling first raised the question as to what is the source of our knowledge of persons and things in the entire world generally. As an answer to this question, he laid down the thesis that we interpret the world outside, in part, directly through our feeling states and processes. As a foundation for his dissertation in support of this thesis, he states that the two ways of "immaterializing" experiences were, (1) materializing, leading to conceptions, ideas, intelligence, association, etc., and (2) affection, taking the form of feeling, sentiment, appreciation, etc. Five lines of evidence were presented to prove that we interpret our experience through feeling. Lack of space forbids more than mere mention of these various lines of evidence. (1) Imperceptible stimuli are often unconsciously interpreted properly. Prof. Starbuck held that this could not be the result of cognitive processes alone. (2) Many facts of comparative and gracious psychology show evidence that experience is interpreted through feeling. (3) A true analysis of feeling reveals an objective side as essential and characteristic of feeling as is its subjective side. (4) Experimentation has established the fact that there are definite and pervasive bodily responses that drift stimulus. (5) There is much reason to believe that the physiological seat of the"
