BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

All About That Dramatic Recital Monday Evening—It Was Good.

There were a few problems in our national department, there was a good time Monday evening, but it was late. One of the things noticed from the nearly paper of the recital was the interest in the dramatic recital given Monday evening by the pupils of Miss Jepson. The number present by different students showed a careful preparation, and was well performed.

Miss Aliss gave an interpretation of "The Little God and I". This number was very interesting and emotional.

The remaining numbers from the recital given by Mr. Love, evoked much applause. Another humorous selection from Kipling's "Jungle Stories" was well given by Miss Aliss. Miss Sheehan's interpretation of the Irish Counties was satisfactory. Miss Elmer Pearson read "A Little Darky Hero" with a good deal of effect, and Phrases from 'Ireland's Call' of the Wid." Mr. Boll read a selection from "I Was a King" with considerable dramatic feeling and expression. This was one of the strong spots on the program.

Mr. Hempfield is going to complete his work in the United States.

The date has not been definitely fixed, and the chosen momentum of the was the night of April 27th. One hundred and twenty-five people will take part in the entertainment.

The entertainment will be represented by the Varsity Swords and the organization of the present year will appear in the program of the military department. The entertainment will include armory marches, club swing, music, etc. The men, under the leadership of Mr. Boll, will go through their Irish Volunteer uniform. The Varsity Swords will point several interesting features, including the development of an army from the practicing station and the, awkward station to the dignified station of a U. S. regular.

On this same evening and apparent as part of the program will conclude the annual competition of the Varsity Swords for the beautiful medals now in display in Keel & Bland's window.
