Professor Loos on Child Labor

Says the Bureau of Labor Should Enforce the Laws

"If the office of Bureau of Labor will exercise its discretionary power it can extend the usefulness of the Child Labor Law very considerably," said Professor T. A. Loos, head of the department of Political Economy and Sociology in the University. "On my judgment it is fully as important to attain the enforcement of laws as to advance statistical laws. However, it cannot be denied that an attention for the laws in respect to the specification as to age, employment and the like for each child would be beneficial."

PRESIDENTS TO ASSEMBLE

1904. According to the plan upon which the organization was founded, it should have met at the same place for 50 years ago but the Iowa legislature was in session prevented President MacLean from calling the conference. The presidents all agreed to the postponement until the same day next year so that this summer President MacLean began writing to the officers to call the conference for the first session of this month.

The organization, if it can be called such, is peculiar as there are no officers and the sessions are called informally. The matter is left to the officers in matters as usual and to the executive of the institution where the next assembly will be held and it is left to his discretion as to the time for holding the informal convention.

SOMERS AGED 70

At the present time President MacLean is on an important mission of communication with the former presidents suggesting subjects for discussion and debate. The list is being kept by the officers and the next few days will be confined to the discussion of the most vital problems of college training in the middle west.

Great preparations are being made for the entertainment of the prominent executives and probably a great many distinguished persons will be held in the armory where the students may listen to the foremost men of the college world in a series of short addresses. A reception will probably be given at the home of President MacLean and other entertainment will be provided for the presidents during their stay in Iowa City.
