SEMIFINALS IN TENNIS TODAY

Four Survivors in the Fall Tournament

McQuillen, Daunis, Oliver, and Reed. Left—Consoliation and Doubles Today.

Out of the four matches finished yesterday the semifinals in the fall tournament were decided. A day of about 40 degrees will play Daniels and Oliver will meet Randall to decide the final set for the match tomorrow morning which will settle the fall championship. Yesterday's results eliminated Hannah, Givens, Harrod and Schoedler.

Over hard fought matches, the rule in yesterday's play took its toll. Oliver and Daniels and Reed and playing intermingled. Two of the four matches required the full three sets to decide the winner and there were four defeats in the four matches played.

The Gardner-Daniels match was especially exciting. When the final set was played, the lines made the match a good one to watch. Gardner and Daniels were evenly matched and the final set ended in favor of Daniels. McQuillen used his advantage to capture the winner's prize.

Trout's Maroons take on Coach Dickerson and the Championship Cup of the West will be played for tomorrow.

The last number of the Iowa has gone to the press and the report will be published tomorrow.

Debating League

Because of a large number of inter-school debating it is not too much thought that Debating teams will be able to join the Iowa High School Debating League. Professor Harry E. Gordon, of the department of public speaking is putting forth his best efforts to have at least one of the Debating teams enter their district. Ames, Alton, Creston, and Bedford have already entered from the southwestern district.

Egypt's Costuming

The multitude of women participating in Egypt is struggling over the same age, provided by the management. All the young and beautiful women in Egypt in the days of ancient glory are vividly reproduced in this opera. At the picture of Pharaoh brilliant costumes and gold and purple colors predominate, the contrasted by the flashing of armor and granite statues in the figures. In market contrast are all the sacred love scenes, worn by the Hebrew slaves as they tell the history of the field. The "Vision of Angels" is a scene of dripping dooltos and white rose choirs. In Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries," after the escape from tenous, the rejoicing maidens are adorned with particularly blending tints of pink, blue, green and lavender.
