Wise Talks by the Office Boy

The boys told me a man can't live with the building grocer unless he wears good clothes. Well, I'm wearing good clothes and I told you that custom didn't last. Pure wool and the best tailoring are what come in this door and certainly nothing else can go out of it.

The spring suits we sell at twenty dollars are surely enough for the easy-street boys, made by the best New York and Chicago tailor. Just a couple of little old spin gets them, either black or fancy, and they are indeed the flannel we sell. They make you look good to yourself, they feel good with the broad, square shoulders, the chinty busts and the hungry backs. The boys say:

Where one fellow judges a man by his face, a hundred judgment by his clothes, but the clothes must be good and right.
