A fellow came in the other day and bought an outfit, from little secks to nuts, so I delivered it to his house and yesterday he came in and asked the boss if he ever knew an office boy who had any distinction in many ways other than his work. I hardly knew what was coming but the boss came right back and said: "Yes, we have one who can tell you the average earning of every player in the league." Say, isn't the boss the dandy fellow? He says he's going to report the games this season. I wonder what he means. We know a fellow who was great on high calls. He reached for one too many and got his release. I knew a kid who went to the bat and sold this store up to the high average it has always maintained and then "repeat." High standards are not for all to reach, but I work at my best. I wonder what the world would do without us cranks.

MUGOSY, with love.
