Lightning Strikes Student

Mary Drennen, freshman, has Narrow Escape - House is Slightly Damaged

Ripping shingles off the roof and darting into a room on the second floor of the Physics building, a bolt of lightning slightly snatched Mary D. Crumley, L., A., 23, and damaged the Purvis house at 320 East College Street during the severe thunderstorms which swept over the city in the noon yesterday.

Students rooming in the same house rushed to Drennen's aide after the first strike and he was found to be unharmed but badly frightened by his close shave. The lightning struck the chimney and passing through the roof rained along the partition, entering young Drennen's room on the east side of the house. Shortly after the crash the house filled with smoke but quick work prevented the spread of the flames and it was not found necessary to call the fire department.

A valuable table and fan were recovered from the west door and showers continued through the afternoon and it was found necessary to postpone the Varsity baseball game and also the fraternities ball games between the Amherst and Hiram colleges.

WISE TALKS BY THE OFFICE BOY

A sailor is called a salt of the sea and the farmer is called the salt of the earth. I wonder where we Gibson boys come in. We must be well patronized or some of us want to be more like mustard or tomato sauce. That's all right for young men. If you want to be the real "quahog" you should get touch with the new spring shades in "hot stuff". We get them from Germany, 50c and $1.00 the pair. Worth more but we own them at wholesale. There is only one profit for this store to pay and that is the manufacturer's. We cut out the jobber and the commission man. If you have any doubt about these sex being "warm numbers" just see them.
