Lecture Course Prospects.
The Chautauqua Lecture Course promises this year to be even more successful than the course last year if the optimistic views of the management are fulfilled. The advance sale of season's tickets is heavier than that of last year and the indications are that every one of the lectures which are to be given will be packed. The men of the different literary societies of the University are all taking hold of the work in earnest and the fees are expended in the support of forensic work. It is expected that every literary society man in school will have a season ticket for this course.

The opening of the course next Wednesday will be an auspicious one as the opening entertainment is to be furnished by the Chicago Gate Club. This contest is one of the best of its sort in the country and is one of the strongest numbers of the course.

Parish-Cook Wedding.
On Sept. 12, at the home of tho Cooks' parents in Shelby, Iowa, Miss Mary Orr Cook was married to Arthur Parish, L. P., of Marion, Marion County, who performed the ceremony. The newly married couple both of whom are known in the University will be at home in Montezuma, Iowa, after October 2, when Mr. Parish is principal of schools. Among the out of town guests that were present were Miss Elna Brown, Miss Meta Teasner, Miss Josephine Lynch, Miss Katherine Green, John Parish, Professor and Mrs. L. P. Parish and daughter Mabel of Cedar Rapids.

Rev. J. T. Jones Accepts.
Rev. J. T. Jones, of Ebenberg, Pa., yesterday wired his resignation to the Iowa City Congregational church to take the place of Rev. Horace J. Strain, who resigned to go to Boulder, Colo., for his health.

A HINDOOS TOILET.

Current Morning Scene in an East Indian Street.

All over the crowded, narrow, and "spiced" streets are men sitting cross-legged on the ground, as they are doing in this picture, with their heads in their lap. This is the usual posture of the Hindoos when they are sitting in their shops or in the streets. This is the way they eat and sleep. They do not sit upright like us, but they sit with their legs crossed and their arms folded across their chest. This is the way they hold their food and their drink. They do not use utensils, but they eat with their hands and drink with their mouths. This is the way they wash and bathe. They do not use water, but they use a towel and a cloth to clean themselves. This is the way they rest and sleep. They do not lie down, but they sit in a cross-legged position and rest their heads on their hands. This is the way they pray and meditate. They do not kneel, but they sit in a cross-legged position and bow their heads in prayer. This is the way they dress. They do not wear clothes, but they wear a dhoti, which is a long, narrow cloth that is wrapped around the body and tied at the waist. This is the way they carry their belongings. They do not use a bag, but they tie their belongings to their dhoti. This is the way they travel. They do not use a carriage, but they ride a bicycle or a horse. This is the way they work. They do not use a machine, but they use their hands. This is the way they do business. They do not use money, but they trade goods. This is the way they worship. They do not use a temple, but they worship in their homes. This is the way they entertain. They do not use a theater, but they entertain in their homes. This is the way they educate. They do not use a school, but they educate in their homes. This is the way they govern. They do not use a government, but they govern in their homes. This is the way they live. They do not use a society, but they live in their own way. This is the way they think. They do not use a philosophy, but they think in their own way. This is the way they feel. They do not use emotions, but they feel in their own way. This is the way they act. They do not use reason, but they act in their own way. This is the way they love. They do not use romance, but they love in their own way. This is the way they marry. They do not use a marriage, but they marry in their own way. This is the way they have children. They do not use a birth, but they have children in their own way. This is the way they die. They do not use a death, but they die in their own way.
