ESTABLISH BUREAU OF LEGISLATIVE REFERENCE
BILLS TO ADD LEGISLATIONS TO
Representatives of the Governor introduce a bill to recognize Historical Department.

A plan for the establishment of a Legislative Reference Bureau has been introduced in the state legislature by Representative W. L. Hedberg of Iowa City, as a part of a bill providing for the reorganization of the Historical Department in Des Moines. The bill authorizes the board of trustees to establish such a bureau. Indeed, such a bureau is already in operation at Des Moines, in charge of Professor John E. Reynolds who has been most successful in engaging in research work for the Iowa Historical Society of Iowa. "Legislative reference work," says Professor Reynolds, is usually referred to as that particular form of scientific research and production which makes the materials of state history, historical societies and allied institutions available, with the minimum of cost, to the legislature and the general public. It involves the collection of current and historical data concerning state and local state, and also from foreign countries, together with expert evidence from every possible source; and possibly it implies the utmost classification of this material, or what is better put, the preparation of such materials where: whereby "the state, the facts, historical, industrial, constitutional, etc. may be made the basis of legislation and theory of social progress."

In case the bill referred to is granted into law, the Legislative Bureau will not have a very wide field for its activities, as it will be possible to cooperate with the research work of the Historical Department now being done in the several departments of the state and local government and the University of Iowa. Being organized as a part of the Historical Department at Des Moines it would be distinctly redundant to have the work of this department and the state library. Many states have already established such bureaus, especially in charge of their historical societies, and they will be a good way of solving this if the bill is passed and in line with the movement toward this "newer legislation." Better data will be gathered in the libraries of the legislature. It will be made available for the legislature and the general public. Such a bureau will be a great blessing to the libraries of the legislature.

The Forensic League solicits the patronage of the University and general public for the three entertainments advertised herewith. They ask this as a mark of appreciation for the successful work which the League is doing. They need four hundred dollars to meet the expenses of conducting three inter-collegiate and three inter-society contests. This amount is only a part of the expense largely borne by the literary societies. Last year the public patronized the Lecture Course so liberally that the funds needed for that year were secured. This year the Course has been thus far a financial failure. Your presence at these three entertainments will save the situation and enable the societies to conduct their further work in proper fashion and close the year without debt.
