THE DAILY IOWAN

Vol. 3 No. 10

In the midst of such charm, the accounts of Grant will all appeal. There will be something humorous to interest those of the same age, or more pronounced realism for the young. We shall see the men and women through the eyes of the public, and the public will see them through the eyes of the press.

It's the first day of the month, and the students are eagerly looking forward to the beginning of the new term. The air is filled with the smell of freshly printed pages, and the sound of typewriters can be heard throughout the building.
