With the renewal of the ice crisis, which was destined to make itself felt, the action of the United States government the Layson Laysan expedition for an extensive ethnological ever and a joint expedition, the Layson Laysan expedition under the direction of the University of Hawaii, will be temporarily inaugurated by the departure of the Layson group on April 10th. The long anticipated expedition, which marks the sequel of a number of studies and a grant from the Works Progress Administration, will make the successful continuation of a great deal of work with the Layson Laysan expedition.

Not only was it felt to be of great importance to make the trip for the purpose of observing the life of the Laysan Islands at this time, but also to study and observe the successful continuation of the work done on the ethnological studies of the university which had previously been undertaken.

The expedition, under the direction of Mr. William H. MacKay, a noted artist of great value, will make up for the loss of the Layson Laysan expedition.

The first basket ball game of the season was played with great interest and was enjoyed by all who attended.

The game was played with great enthusiasm and was enjoyed by all who attended.

For the benefit of the students of the Layson Laysan expedition, the following notice is made:

Laysan Islands expedition.

The Layson Laysan expedition has been the subject of much discussion and speculation. It has been described as a great adventure, a journey to unexplored lands, and a quest for knowledge. The expedition's purpose is to explore and document the unique flora and fauna of the Laysan Islands, a group of islands in the Pacific Ocean.

The expedition is led by Professor William H. MacKay, who is a renowned ethnologist. He is accompanied by a team of experts in fields such as botany, zoology, and anthropology.

The expedition will travel to the Laysan Islands on April 10th and will remain there for several weeks. During this time, they will conduct extensive fieldwork, including the collection of samples and the documentation of the islands' natural history.

The expedition is expected to return to Honolulu on April 28th, where they will present their findings to the scientific community.

This expedition is sponsored by the University of Hawaii, which has a long history of supporting scientific research in the Pacific region. The university is committed to advancing the understanding of the natural world and to fostering a culture of scientific inquiry.

The expedition is also supported by private donations and grants from various organizations and individuals. The university is grateful for the support of these partners and is committed to sharing the results of this important work with the broader public.
