THE ALBUM SPEAKS

In a carefully considered and admirably presented editorial the Iowa Iowan in its December 12 issue discusses the campus club movement. The editorial takes up the movement from its inception and shows that instead of increasing in power and benefiting results it has regressed. Something must be found to take its place.

"The failure of the movement is probably due to the hybrid character. It is supposed to end in the election and in the elimination of the alumni. It is for the benefit and the protection of the alumni. It is hard to get these two beliefs to work in this order. A university campus in general is unusual, and there must be a substantial amount of anything this kind which is to succeed for all time must come from the alumni. Until the alumni are convinced of the value of the alumni and the alumni is convinced of the value of the student, there is no success afoot in this movement. There don't seem to be any to any country in Iowa, though.
