Crump

"Advertize Iowa" was the general topic of the annual banquet given by President George C. MacLean before the Iowa Commercial college library soon after the regular weekly meeting. President Crump's talk was a spirited one and full of ideas for the club.

He stated that he believed that in order to grow and become useful both Iowa College and the university should be advertised extensively. He announced the systematic advertising of the university throughout the state and the neighboring states, Harter, Nebraska, Illinois, Colorado, and also educational institutions spend large sums profitably in advertising, so why not advertising the Iowa university? He warned us of the perils of advertising.

President MacLean, a senator, law professor, of the university, was called to the university because he was too busy to come to this meeting. He asked the students to sit down and listen to the discussion. He stated that he was about to leave Iowa and the students expressed their desire to keep him here.

The discussion then went on to the importance of advertising the university.

Krieger Supplies for Workshop

Dr. Charles N. Wasson, assistant professor of the university, was called to the university because he was too busy to come to this meeting. He stated that he was about to leave Iowa and the students expressed their desire to keep him here.

The discussion then went on to the importance of advertising the university.

Five Unelected Professors

The meeting was adjourned.

Library Circulation. A special house has been provided in which the circulation and other business of the library will be conducted, as it is believed that this arrangement will add prestige and comfort for the students. The Iowa State Library on Lake Okoboji will see its third summer of use as a station for the study of archival and library science. A special bulletin has been issued giving details of the administration and operation of the library. A considerable number of students and faculty have already signed their intention of taking advantage of the opportunity to familiarize themselves in the best conditions the situation of the library affords.

The College of Pharmacy will this summer offer two special courses which will continue for two weeks.
