The Story of the 100-Yard Dash

Title: The Story of the 100-Yard Dash

Yesterday morning the regular assembly meeting of the Iowa State High School Debating League was held at Dail Hall and the executive committee was elected.

The question which was chosen for the coming season was: "Does the United States need to build more ships to compete with the foreign nations in the world trade?"

The question was divided into three parts, and each member of the executive committee was assigned to one part. The committee will meet weekly to discuss the question and prepare arguments for each part.

The first part of the question is: "Does the United States need to build more ships to compete with the foreign nations in the world trade?"

The second part of the question is: "If the United States is to build more ships, should it build them in this country or should it build them in foreign countries?"

The third part of the question is: "What objections to building more ships will be raised by those who are against it?"

The committee will meet weekly to discuss the question and prepare arguments for each part. They will report their findings at the next meeting.

In the recent debate between the Liberal Arts and the Laws, the Liberal Arts won by a margin of 10 votes. The debate was held in the Union Ballroom and was attended by a large number of students.

The question debated was: "Is the government's role in the economy too great or too small?"

The Liberal Arts team presented their arguments and won the debate by a narrow margin.

The debate was well attended and received a lot of attention from the students. The debate will continue next week with a new topic.

THE TRACK MEET.

Track athletes apparently experienced a rejuvenation yesterday judging from the highly satisfactory amount and quality of spirit that characterized the various games played on Iowa Field between the several games of the college. The university was less successful in the track meet.

The fact most prevalent in the minds of the participants, the interest that brought out the track meet.

Last night Coach Kellogg expressed himself as highly pleased with the number to which the men of the university participated. He was more so far as to predict that if the men in the university would present them selves for track even for a few weeks, the only players that can compete with real track performers could be brought to light to carry over their influence as a track club. It can be said with due regard to the truth that she is not the slightest exaggeration.

Two or more men are usually supplied with strong, well-proportioned men. All that most of them need is but a brief course of instruction. The coding of a preparatory course is necessary to any ambitious man.

Now that the medium for getting out has been discovered, the medium should and should be appreciated. Since the abolition of the freshmen confirms fewer of the first year men have appeared, and by no means in the class with no opportunity for competing with
