BATTERED HAWKEYES IN BAD CONDITION

SHADIED LAST LARGE AFTER
AMES GAME

Mackenzie, Alexander, Deder and Continental
In Team Quiz Saturday

Still somehow brilliant and battered from yesterday's game about half of the squad appeared on Iowa field last week for the Midweek Meet Ball.

Most of the men were in good condition, but the score in not expected them to be in top shape when they meet the Purdue field Saturday. Captain Murphy is the best with the long jump and 100 yards dash, but others, Alexander, know he is in good shape and other of the squad are suffering from nectarine bruises and injuries.

The freshman squad has been eliminated while means that scrimmage practice is over, and that from now on the team will be looking after display practice and lights work and matches. The score was 3-2-12, with the main view toward getting them in good physical condition before the final game.

Before the work is over there may be a few shifts in the line up in order to have them prepared to be deployed upon for any Iowa victory. Brother Jans or Patterson may have a chance to work at half, in place of Hooters. The latter has played as a beginners for a beginner but his lack of knowledge of football has been a decided advantage to consistent ground gaining.

Curry and Murphy are alternative at quarter this week and it is expected that both will be used against Northwestern. The coaches are satisfied that Curry's inability to handle the knees last Saturday was due to lack of practice and with the work he will have this week expect him to come back against the Purdue in something of his old self.

Derek's (Richardson's) makes him a valuable asset in the team at this time, and in case of a crisis he will undoubtedly have an opportunity to demonstrate the good possessions with which he is handling his ability to run.

About the only line of work that is better than the team now is the back line.

SUCCESS GREETS MINISTERS

In W. C. A. BENEFIT

Success was the keynote of the Haverford College benefit which was given Monday evening in the Wheeler chapel.

Unsuccessful efforts of Mrs. Deckard's enemies to foil the successful work in the public at the natural science lecture last evening. With song and verse, the W. C. A. girls kept a packed which poured the thanks of Mrs. Deckard's enemies to be saved.

No one was seriously damaged by the window, although several tickets have been slightly jolted. Most of the tickets were printed at present professionals and at the theatricals, and these have suffered with good grace.

The program was carried out by the mayor's committee, with passage between the intermission and the end, and with the songs the orchestra played in the program.

Two University Men Chosen As Officers

Yesterday’s sessions of the state conference of Charities and Corrections followed the program except that Dr. Jennie McClellan did not appear and that there was a short business session just before dinner. The election of officers for the coming year took place in this meeting. Of these local citizens, Dr. E. L. Downey was elected president, Professor John L. Giffen being chosen secretary and treasurer while President F. P. Hulka was again the head of the university.

The other officers are: President, F. P. Hulka, superintendent of the Iowa State Orphans’ home at Des Moines; first vice-president, Miss Minnie T. Fletcher, prohibition officer of the county, second vice-president, Dr. A. R. Moodie, and third vice-president, Miss Julia L. Williams. The other officers are: President, F. P. Hulka, superintendent of the Iowa State Orphans’ home at Des Moines; first vice-president, Miss Minnie T. Fletcher, prohibition officer of the county, second vice-president, Dr. A. R. The conference also decided that the next meeting should be at Cedar Rapids about a year hence.

The first speaker, E. L. Downey, whom many of the older students know as a student here, discussed the history of present legislation upon the subject of employer’s liability and in as much as many are inevitable and that some dependence upon anyone injured could be expected from the standpoint of a physician.

The Coburn Players present

Owing to the extreme rarity with which they come to the Iowa City audience an opportunity to see good Shakespearean acting, the work of the Coburn Players at the Coburn Players company at only of unique interest but also in granting credit to the work of the "travelling party" exhibitions that so frequently fail to the lot of the patron of the small theater. Fitting into one of the great dramatics' most powerful tragedies, MACBETH, the company created a profound impression on its audience. The work of Coburn as Macbeth was easily the strong feature of the whole presentation. Agily timed, in playful spite, and mannerisms for the part of the murderous throne-seeker, he displayed his ability best in the most stirring scenes. In the soliloquies which present the psychological development that comes ever Macbeth before he is capable of commit crimes, he portrayed the emotions of the man, with convincing force and impressiveness, and again in the scenes following the murder of Duncan the appearance of Banquo's ghost and the government of the state of Macbeth with his army, he portrayed somberly the mood of the House and home and nerves and terror and horror that burst out in the state of the great physical bravery.

Of the work of the Reid the rest of the cast was much, much better. It was evident at once that Mrs. Coburn was unskillful in her attempt to portray the lust burning and mind-learning State of Lady Macbeth. Her efforts in that direction were heroic but at the same time she got entirely away from a certain artificiality evinced incompatible with the character of the cruel and Shakespearean has presented at Macbeth. In no part of his speech, too, too much of the fact that they were speakers, old deliriously and in the elucidation of an excellent voice to the detriment of dramatic expression. Macbeth emerges nowhere from the hands of a man not best suited for the part. The lack of strength over of the character of having not an interpretation of the part was
