CHURCH CONFERENCE FINISHED YESTERDAY

SEVENTEEN DELEGATES ARE PRESIDENT

Many Notable Workers Address Meeting Concluded in Des Moines at Bible Study.

About 17 delegates were present when the second day's session of the Conference of Church Workers in Various Fields announced their intentions to work together with the best in the realm of literature and art. Now whether one considers the Church or the University the creation of man, the master-project of the religious spirit, on the whole superior and most profound, the Church or the University, that literatur is that most important. No better educational institution can be found in the United States.

Dr. Paul H. Brotherton, president of the Department of the American Unitarian Association, Boston, in a paper dealing with this question, said: "The clergy should not be so hard on the University. Here you have the best men of the country at work trying to understand the world of man, of the universe, and the highest ideals of the human spirit. People have a right to the best."

The conference showed that while the first state universities and religion have always been recognized as a necessary part of education in American colleges, said Dr. Paul H. Brotherton, who addressed the conference on the question of "Democratic Policies in the University," the faculty are doing work away beyond the capacity of the faculty of the church in the same community he may choose."
