—PLAYS AND PLAYERS—

Irving-Ree Play

"The Other Fellow," which is to be given by the Irving-Ree cast on Thursday was written in an attempt to get the greatest possible amount of humor out of dramatic situations. This play will have the author succeeded in getting in fact that even after several weeks practice the numbers are not quite ready. One of the longest and best of the arrangement is the villa. a villa on the sea for the use of the rich and famous. The part which most constantly appeals to the sense of humor is that of the rich man, who thinks he is an Indian, and on the sea for the use of the rich and famous. The part which most constantly appeals to the sense of humor is that of the rich man, who thinks he is an Indian, and the latter part of this week. Four from meeting pictures make up the program and there will be given by the Irving-Ree cast playlets complete the bill. Full program have the author accomplished, so that there is almost as much variety in the people whom they come to see as there is in the action which takes place.
