Ah, I see you've managed to capture the excitement of the game! The tall boy shone brilliantly for the Iowa nine in the week's series, and his hitting ability is one of the best catchers around. He's been shifted to the gardens because of the availability of candidates must be the all western collegiate wrestling princess. We've got three major takeaways from this story:

1. The tall boy shines for the Iowa nine, demonstrating his hitting ability and making a significant contribution to the team.
2. The decision to shift the player to the gardens is a strategic move, aligning with our analysis of team dynamics and player positioning.
3. The mention of the willow shows the importance of natural elements in the game, adding a layer of realism to the narrative.

So, let's analyze the key points:

- The tall boy's performance highlights his talent as a catcher.
- The shift to the gardens is a tactical decision to maximize the team's potential.
- The mention of the willow adds a naturalistic touch, reminding us of the game's roots in nature.

I hope this helps bring the story to life! Let me know if you need any further clarifications or if there's more you'd like to explore.

ALL IS NOW READY FOR CADET FORMAL

BARENESS OF BIG ARMY TRANSMANFRED BY MANY YARDS OF RENTING

Programme Made To Order From Original Idea of Committeemen-View To Those In Galleries Undiscovered by New Arrangement.

When interviewed at a late hour last evening, Chairman Jurgens of the Military Ball Committee announced that all was in readiness for the big crowd of pleasure seekers that is expected at the party this evening. The committee has been working strenuously since Tuesday evening and their efforts have resulted in a exceptionally attractive scheme of decoration.

The center of the ceiling is covered with a large flag, and from this a number of streamers are draped to the side walls. Yards and yards of bunting have been used to hide the bareness of the big Army and its interior has been transformed into a really military setting. Drums of small flags are used around the side walls and the ceiling. An absolutely new lighting system has been installed, and considered as a whole, the whole of the decorations leave little to be desired. The floor has been put in excellent shape and all the minor details which mean so much toward the success or failure of this sort of function have been faithfully cared for. The lights have been dropped through the overhanging decorations and in this way the faces of the rafters are completely hidden from view, both of the dancers and of the lookers-on.

The programs for the party, which were made to order from an original idea of one of the committee men, have arrived. They are of white leather, decorated in gold, and are a must novel design. The program is in the form of a book, each check being filled out for each dance, and given to the man with whom the dance is exchanged. When a man wishes to present a lady to a partner and is properly received by her with the walls or two step as it may be. Nothing like this has ever been seen at local parties, and it is thought that the idea will prove a pleasant innovation. Tickets will be on sale at Whetstone's, $1 a piece tomorrow and the programs will be distributed at that time. The supper extras also will be given out to purchasers and holders of tickets at that time. By having the program in advance, those attending the party will be enabled to fill them out beforehand, and become familiar with the features of their manipulation.

Special care has been taken by the committee to insure those attending the party in the gallery a good view of both the dancers and the exception. The combination of the decorations. The ceiling has been put well up in the building and the view from the second floor will be practically unobstructed. In the past military balls have been the most pleasant parties from the standpoint of theralhers and it is hoped that this one will prove no
