DINER WITH TEN-PIECE ORCHESTRA HIGHLY ACCEPTABLE—GALLERY FILLED

Seventy Couples Present at Formal at the Armory—Four Step Emmas Brought Out by Undergraduate Color Scheme in Decorations.

Sophomores excited last Friday evening and staged their annual formal in the University Armory, and have provided much speculation from those who participated and those who wished to join in the gala event. There were a host of dresses which were, without doubt, the most eccentric of formulas held for many a day. The galleries were filled to an overflowing and enthusiasm was a word that would thinly lie to describe capacity.

The walls were decorated in pink and green, with paper decorations in the center of the ceiling, from which ran streamers of many colors, produced a rather effective effect as lights played on the scene. Punch was served in bowls, and during this evening at several supper extras were served which were highly acceptable in the eyes of all who were present.

The committee reported that a record number exceeded their expectations, and that the formal was well attended.

The announcements and topics of the evening were made by Sam B. McCann and Charles V. Brown.

Sidney's Invitations and Real-Time Notes...
Five championships of the Central Debating League during eight years of competition is the record of the Iowa debate teams. It is with distinct pride that every student and alumnus of the university knows that its teams have been superbly trained and equipped
for this high level of competition.

The success of Iowa debating is the question of concern just at the present time. During the months to come the Iowa debate teams will compete with other schools of this magnitude.

Currently, the Iowa debate teams are preparing for the coming tournament season.

TWO GREAT NEEDS in Fine Arts

Department of Graphic and Plastic Arts has Two Needs, Says Prof. Cummings.

"The Department of graphic and plastic arts at the university of Iowa is filling two great needs in the state of Iowa," said Prof. C. L. Cumming, head of that department to an Iowa representative yesterday. "There are few trained people drawing in public schools in the state, who can really draw and who can at the same time teach the subject. Our department is beginning to fill this need and its usefulness will grow with the demands." Another need, according to Prof. Cumming, is a school where art can be taught along with other college work. One who is to serve the world as an artist should have a liberal education, and if that is not secured either before or in connection with the first study at the university, the chances are that it will never be secured. Thus the Iowa school is bringing a gap between the professional art school and the liberal arts education.

The department is very systematically situated in five large studios on the top floor of the physics building, and is beautiful surroundings and in a real studio atmosphere, serious work of an unusually high grade is carried on. Prof. Cumming has under him Mr. Collerton, Miss Davis, both of whom were in the department last year, and Mr. Patterson who came from Missouri. Prof. Higbee of the college of applied science also teaches two classes in perspective and mechanical drawing. The work is characterized by absolute informality but works. On Wednesday evening stereopticon lectures on art appreciation are given in the small physics lecture room, and while the students almost fill the room, there are always a few guests who are made welcome. Following this lecture the more advanced pupils meet in the director's studio for coffee and criticism and to submit original compositions. Two and a social hour with some one of the senior girls at the musician follows the conference. The close touch between master and pupil is developing a real spirit of art in the student.

In the gallery are a few paintings by Professors Cumming and Mr. Collerton, and the public is welcome to examine these during the hours of the gallery.
