Story Will Be Illustrated By Photographic Views of Mr. Donald Thompson.

Professor of History at the University of Iowa, will be given an address at the High School auditorium tonight. Mr. R. E. Powell, author of "The Last Frontier," "Gentlemen From Texas," "The Ball of the Trail," "Flying in Flanders," etc., has seen campaigns in four continents and their vivid descriptions in the New York World have attracted wide attention from the great European war. He is now in America to tell him what he has seen in the battles lines throughout the campaign. After the gallant and heroic efforts of the Secret Service, he was the only correspondent actually located to the Belgian lines and was actually on the front lines during every battle between the occupation of Brussels and the fall of Antwerp. He will also write about the chếreces, one of them being the design of General Von Bohlen.

Mr. Powell was so awed with the pure of the great drama culminating in the fall of Antwerp, that he was only awed of the Germans who witnessed the entry of the Germans into the city.

The committee, that will help lift some of the pessimistic ideas that have been about the future of the state university, consists of the state university committee, the latter committee is one of the in Iowa City, is among the schools entered.

The same town that entered last year is entered this year and in addition many schools have been entered for the state committee. The title this year are all good as last year and some battle royals are expected. At present about a dozen towns in the state have entered to date but they will have to show what they are doing to win before the preliminary contests are held.

New Plan Adopted

On February 19th, the number of entries in the southeastern section it may be necessary to hold several tournaments. One may be held at Grinnell last year and another at Parsons college. Elaborate a new plan, which will have the effect of drawing the names of the teams by lot, and the names will be made known to the public at about the first number.

The artists who will appear in the "Kelpfer" concerts will be known later, but it is understood that the university and Iowa City people and their introduction are necessary, so far as these special concerts are concerned, that we have something which will be appreciated in a different way. Neither Norman T. Smith has appeared in the "Kelpfer" concerts in a special engagement, doing a similar program. This is an instructor in piano here. His success there was unnecessary. Mr. Nettles is director of the University School of Music.

MUSIC AT IOWA

The first of a series of recitals by talented musicians will be given this evening. This series of entertainments is given under the auspices of the music association, and as a result of a proving concert on the part of the lovers of music to hear these artists in a special recital. The program is to be offered for the first time and the program is comprehensive and will appeal to any audience. Through the recital tonight and those which we have to follow ten concerts of the season, the support that will be given them by the student body is a big cause. The reception given maternity by the student public is not what it should be, for some reason. What this means is difficult to say. It might be due to many as a combination of circumstances, yet the fact remains that high class musical art is on our campus and competition, when viewed from a commercial standpoint and this must be considered first. It behooves the student body to wake up and get acquainted with what the university school has to offer.

"THE DREAM GIRL"

"The Dream Girl" with John P. Reed and a strong company of twenty people, will be the attraction at the Regent theater, starting today.

"The Dream Girl" is very su-pire and original, being a play within a play. The curtain goes up on the prologue, showing a bare stage, which is supposed to representate the stage of an opera house in a small one-story-said-in Iowa. "The Dream Girl" company serves and rehoses portions of the play that are long waiting to give that tight. The prologue is rich full of theatrical effects, an affair of which "The Dream Girl" play it-selves. The "Dream Girl" play itself tells a story and is held in two scenes—one in the Desert of Sahara and one in the Roof Garden de Luxe.

At the end of "The Dream Girl" play there is an epilogue, showing the performance of the subsequent events that naturally follow same ending with a very dramatic climax.

It is an old story—the woman who marries the wrong man—but seldom has it worked out so interestingly as a story as is told in "AS YE SOW!"

Ten years ago this play was produced on the stage and made a lasting hit—Now you see it again with the great emotional actress as the heroine.
